BRITANNIA OKASAN GLOBAL STRATEGY FUND

A NEW combined concept in Global Investment.

INVESTMENT ADVISER TO THE FUND

In 1985, Britannia Arrow Holdings PLC announced the formation of Britannia Okasan International Investment Management Limited a joint venture company with Okasan Securities Company Limited of Tokyo, to manage international investment portfolios.

The parties to the joint venture are Britannia Asset Management Limited in London and Okasan Capital Management Company Limited in Tokyo.

GENERAL MANAGER, SECRETARY & TRANSFER AGENT
 Britannia International Investment Management Limited
 P.O. Box 271, Queensway House, Queen Street, St. Helier, Jersey, Channel Islands.
 Telephone: Jersey (0534) 73114 Telex: 4192092

The investment objective of the Fund is long-term capital growth in U.S. dollar terms from an international portfolio of leading companies.

BENEFITS — Britannia will provide the specialist knowledge of international markets and Okasan will offer direct and preferential access to investment research in Japanese equities and bonds.

The traditional secrecy of Japanese institutions which has hampered foreign investors should now be a problem of the past.

In search of El Dorado

LONDON CALLING

London Calling is the programme journal of the BBC World Service. To listen to our world-wide transmissions you will need, in most cases, a short-wave radio set, although in some areas we also broadcast on long and medium wave and VHF. If you have a good modern shortwave set you will generally find that tuning in and listening is more enjoyable. On the frequency pages of this edition you will find a guide to the current recommended transmission and frequency times for your area. As you will see, we work in Greenwich Mean Time (GMT) so you will have to convert this to local time.

Good listening!

Journey through Latin America

For 500 years the dream of untold wealth, carried with them by Spanish and Portuguese colonisers to the western hemisphere, has haunted Latin Americans. Gold, silver, sugar, coffee and, most recently, oil, have all seemed to promise the El Dorado they were seeking.

How could people with such zest for life, living amid such natural wealth and beauty, fail to make their dream come true? Latin America has created some of the world's greatest writing and most entrancing music, magnificent painting, brilliant scholars and engineers. Its industry is the most highly developed in the Third World, it grows huge food surpluses. Small wonder it has been christened "continent of tomorrow".

Yet today Latin America is encumbered by debt, its living standards collapsing and its newly reborn democracies undermined by social tensions. The dream of instant, fabulous wealth threatens to turn into a nightmare; John Rettie has been travelling round Latin America, talking to people from all walks of life about their hopes and fears. In a six-part series he explores how Latin Americans view their past and what they see in their future.

New Time to Reflect

The daily religious talks entitled Reflections have a new timing and a new look from the beginning of June. The first transmission of each day comes now at 0445, preceding the Financial News and World News. Also, from the first week in June the regular pattern of Reflections takes on a new shape.

Following the custom of including within the scope of religious broadcasting on BBC World Service all the major families of world faiths, weekend Reflections are now to be of a devotional character, drawing on resources of spirituality within the faiths who observe these days as weekly holy days: i.e. from the Muslim tradition of Fridays, from the Jewish heritage on Saturdays (the Sabbath) and from Christian sources on Sundays. Mid-week Reflections try as often as possible to observe the major festivals of the other great world faiths, as well as dealing with inter-faith issues, concerns of current topical and theological interest, and matters of personal belief and practice.

Ships from Seven Seas

Travel on water was always a hazard. Sitting astride their logs, many a prehistoric voyager must have rolled off into the river before reaching the opposite shore. Only when somebody realised that a more stable, buoyant platform could be made by lashing several logs together did the going get easier. On such rudimentary but crucial discoveries, the history of seafaring stands - and even today rafts still have their uses.

This series of seven programmes reflects the development of ships and styles of seafaring by looking at different craft from the oceans of the world. From a 'ship' in the strictest sense of the word, the great square rigged clipper, Cutty Sark, to the dhows of Arabia; from the junks of China to the outriggered canoes of Polynesia, the range of craft devised by the peoples of the world is immense. Each is discussed by leading authorities who explain to Malcolm Billings their history and construction and tell the story of the ingenuity and courage of the men who sailed them.

The Pacific: Outriggered Canoes May 31st; The Mediterranean: Greek oared ships June 7th; The North Sea: Viking long-ships 14th; Arabian Sea: The Dhow 21st; The China Sea: Junks 28th

Trooping the Colour

Every year on her official birthday, Queen Elizabeth II continues the ceremony performed by her ancestors since 1805. The colours of a chosen battalion are trooped on Horse Guards Parade in London in what has become one of the greatest honours in military life. In a direct broadcast from Whitehall, Julian Tutt brings listeners commentary on this colourful ceremony.

The Human Voice

Three programmes look at the human speaking voice - a part of us which is as distinctive and unique as a fingerprint but which most of us take very much for granted.

The first programme, The Voice Itself, traces the origins of the voice (and language), its development through life from infancy to old age, its use to express mood, emotion and personality 15th

Manipulating the Voice considers the voice as a professional tool used by politicians, broadcasters, entertainers, etc; voice coaching and techniques for improvement, and the use of the voice to pursue spiritual enlightenment 22nd

The final programme, Preserving the Voice, looks at damage from pollutants like alcohol, psychological disorders, and the effects of stress. It examines the latest ideas on treatment, both mental and physical, and how to avoid future problems.

THE TYNDALL STERLING MONEY ACCOUNT

THE DEPOSIT ACCOUNT

THAT GIVES YOU MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

The Tyndall Bank (Isle of Man) Limited Sterling Money Account offers investors really high rates of interest, combined with the convenience of a cheque book.

This joint facility was pioneered by Tyndall Group's offshore banking arm whose substantial presence in the UK money market enables them to pass on rates of interest normally only available to major investors.

Interest is paid gross without deduction of tax, and credited four times a year - which means an even higher return - the current rate equals a healthy 12.55% compound annual rate.

Statements are issued quarterly.

Add to this the convenience of your own cheque book - which cuts down correspondence, simplifies transfers and direct payments, and gives easy access to your funds at all times.

Tyndall Bank (Isle of Man) Limited is licensed under the Manx Banking Act, 1975.

The Party of Opportunity/ Exiles in their own Country

David Marquand, Professor of Contemporary History and Politics at Salford University, recently crossed the United States gathering views and opinions from prominent members of the American political scene, about the ideas and problems of the Republicans and Democrats today. These were distilled into two documentaries.

The first of these highlights the way in which Ronald Reagan and his government represent a counter-revolution against the Democratic ideals embodied in Roosevelt's New Deal. However, the counter-revolution is shown to be not yet complete as the Republicans do not control Congress. Nor will it be, until the Americans decide to be either Republican or Democratic; the system is in deadlock until a new consensus arises.

The second programme suggests that, in fact, American politics runs in a cyclical rhythm. At present Republicanism is in the ascendancy. But is the wheel due to change again as it did in 1901 to Theodore Roosevelt; in 1933 to Franklin Roosevelt and in 1961 to Kennedy? If so, the new consensus could arrive around 1990.

15th 1915 rep 16th 0100, 20th 1515

Putting Politics in its Place

The geography of a country has a profound effect on its politics, vitally influencing its international relations, its economic policies and the outlook of its people.

Oil-rich countries, for example, face different problems from countries which need to purchase oil from abroad, while the economy of drought-stricken countries is dominated by the need to maximise existing agricultural resources. In a new series of six programmes, Philip Windsor assesses the influence of geography on various countries around the world.

From 9th Mons 1615 rep 2315, Tues 0145

Japan Walks

The British have a long-standing tradition of solo travel in exotic places, but there is only one Englishman who has been intrepid enough to have walked the length of Japan - from Cape Soya on the island of Hokkaido in the north to Cape Sata on the island of Kyushu in the south. That man is Alan Booth, and in four talks he tells of the men and women he met on a two thousand mile journey - breathing life into a people and land that are all too often stereotyped. With humour and insight, Alan Booth portrays the Japan of the rural areas, the Japan of festivals and the Japan of an amazing array of characters - from businessmen and students to hermits and tramps.

Black Britons, White Britons

In Britain there is a growing concern about racial tensions - tensions not only between black and white, but also between black and Asian, white and Asian. Black families feel the educational system is failing their children and that the police are biased against them. Asian families feel there is police indifference when they complain of racial attacks on them; some whites say the presence in Britain of blacks and Asians is the root cause of the country's social ills. Children who play together in primary school may no longer be speaking to each other when they finish their education.

What has gone wrong? Is it not possible for Britons of whatever race to live cheerfully together? What can be done? John Clare, the BBC's community affairs correspondent, investigates.

1st 1915 rep 2nd 0100, 6th 1515

The Freudian Legacy

"If often he was wrong and at times absurd, to us he is no more a person now but a whole climate of opinion," said W.H. Auden of Sigmund Freud.

In the first of two programmes, psychologist Liam Hudson talks to writers, philosophers, historians, child psychologists - and people in the advertising business - about how Freud transformed our thinking. But, a hundred years on, have we got Freud wrong? Is it fair, for instance, to blame Freud for sexual permissiveness?

In the second programme, Professor Hudson tries to find out how far Freud himself got things wrong - and whether, as a recent critic claims, he suppressed vital evidence. Are there signs that, almost 50 years after the great man's death, his monumental reputation is crumbling? Or is Freud's vision only one possible perspective?

The American Connection - the CIA

Once labelled the invisible government of the United States but known to its agents as 'The Company', the Central Intelligence Agency has become a legend in its own time. Whether in the Middle East, Central America or the Philippines, it is seldom out of the news. For many a bulwark in defence of democracy, for others a sinister initiator of covert action.

In this second of two programmes on the world of intelligence Derek Blizard visits Washington for a close look at the controversial role of the CIA in the world today. Is it, as some argue, a government within a government? And what distinguishes its aims and operations from those of its principal antagonist, the Soviet KGB?

Why work abroad?

Most people would point to two particular advantages.

1. To earn more money
2. To pay less tax

The first is readily achievable. But what about the second? It is surprising how many British expatriates pay a good deal more tax than they had expected. And quite a bit more than they need to.

A professional tax advisory service

This is where a specialist tax advisory service for UK expatriates can prove so useful. With over 80 years' experience of assisting British expatriates, Wilfred T. Fry Ltd offer individual advice on the important subjects of taxation and personal financial and investment planning.

We also take care of all your UK tax matters

We can save you the burdensome and time consuming tasks of dealing with your continuing UK tax affairs - and can often provide financial benefits both immediately and over the longer term.

Our new booklet 'The British Expatriate' provides a guide to the most important ways in which you can make the most of your British expatriate status. For your free copy, simply complete and return the coupon below.

Commonwealth Games

This Summer the capital city of Scotland - Edinburgh - echoes to the sound of between 500,000 and 600,000 visitors when it hosts the 13th Commonwealth Games. These are record-setting Games in many ways: firstly, Edinburgh becomes the only city to be chosen to stage these Games for a second time - the first was in 1970; there are a record number of sportsmen and women competing from a record number of Commonwealth nations - nearly 3,000 competitors from some 60 teams; for the first time ever the Games are to be self-financing; and there are five competitions being staged in the Games for the first time.

The Commonwealth Games lasts over ten days, from the opening ceremony on Thursday, July 24th to the grand finals day on Saturday, August 2nd. There are ten different sports on view: track and field athletics, badminton, lawn bowls, boxing, cycling, rowing, shooting, swimming, weightlifting and wrestling.

And the new events among those sports are the first ever Commonwealth Games women's marathon: also a 10,000 metres race for women; women's bowls comes in for the first time; there is synchronised swimming and, for the first time, boxing has a super heavyweight division.

The competitors and officials are housed during the Games in the residential halls of Edinburgh University and the organisers have had a most interesting shopping list to get through! It included 1,100 bunk beds; 2,200 mattresses and 2,700 quilts! Each team manager has also been asked to supply extra information should they have any unusually large competitors - like the height and weight of their weightlifters and shot putters! Just in case the beds aren't long enough or strong enough!

Not surprisingly, England is expected to send one of the largest teams to the Games - 404 men and women, but they're closely followed by a team of 400 from Canada, 350 from Australia and 230 from the host nation, Scotland. At the other end of the scale, there are two teams of just two people each - the Falkland Islands and Montserrat. Bangladesh are sending a three-strong contingent, while Tonga and Vanuatu are sending five each.

Fears

The fence around the athletes' village - the University halls of residence - has been strengthened, with closed-circuit television being installed and a metal-detecting system, like that at international airports, being introduced - a sad legacy from the Munich Olympic Games.

Indeed, politics has not by-passed these Commonwealth Games either. Over the past couple of years, fears that the Games might be boycotted or even stopped altogether were frequently raised in connection with rugby tours to South Africa. England's rugby union team actually toured there in 1984, but then a New Zealand trip was cancelled by the law courts and this year's planned British Lions tour has been called off.

The idea of a sporting festival involving the Commonwealth countries is thought to be almost 100 years old. The Reverend Astley Cooper of Yorkshire, in England, first broached the idea in 1891. But it was not until 1930 that the first "British Empire Games" were held at Hamilton in Canada. King George V of Great Britain became the Games patron with the Prince of Wales as honorary president.

At those first Games, eleven countries sent teams and they competed in just six sports: athletics, lawn bowls, boxing, rowing, swimming and wrestling, with the English team finishing with the largest number of medals.

Also at those Games, the British Empire Games Federation was formed and it was agreed that the Games should be repeated at four-yearly intervals, mid-way between the recently-revived Olympic Games.

Friendly

Apart from the war years, the Commonwealth Games have indeed been held quite regularly since then: 1934 London, England; 1938 Sydney, Australia; 1950 Auckland, New Zealand; 1954 Vancouver, Canada; 1958 Cardiff, Wales; 1962 Perth, Australia; 1966 Kingston, Jamaica; 1970 Edinburgh; 1974 Christchurch, New Zealand; 1978 Edmonton, Canada; 1982 Brisbane, Australia.

For some years now, the Commonwealth Games have been given a second title - that of the Friendly Games. While competition is as fierce as any other in the world, it seems that there is a special atmosphere at these particular Games.

Half a million more people are expected to visit Edinburgh as spectators of the Games and they, in turn, are expected to bring in some £50 million in revenue. The Edinburgh Games, though, will reach a much wider audience than that - it is thought that a record one billion people - a thousand million - will join the Games through world-wide television and radio.

Those broadcasting rights will add another staggering sum to the revenue - around £1,000 million. And over 500 hours of television air time have been sold already. Another group of visitors are, naturally enough, the world's press and 2,000 are expected to cover each day of the Games.

For all these visitors, many 'extras' have been thought of: there are various cultural events going on in and around Edinburgh for the duration of the Games. Particularly for the visiting athletes, there are many, many different kinds of food available so that their training diets are not interrupted.

And the spiritual side has not been forgotten either: arrangements have been made for 16 different faiths to be catered for in Edinburgh during the Games.

These Commonwealth Games are the first of their kind that are self-financing. The organisers were told right from the beginning of their preparations that they could expect no financial help from the British Government in the current economic climate. So, their target was determined at £12.8 million and this they have covered through sponsorship, advertising, franchises and souvenirs.

In addition, the City of Edinburgh has contributed almost another £4 million in improving various facilities throughout Edinburgh: a new railway station has been built at Meadowbank - the main stadium has been up-graded; so too have the Commonwealth swimming pool and the bowling centre, and there's a new velodrome for the cycling.

Even so, Games officials say that this will be no "Los Angeles extravaganza" - athletes, officials and visitors have everything they need but the Games will be economic, there are no unnecessary frills.

One aspect of the organisation that, sadly, has to play a major part in today's big sporting events is that of security and this is costing the Edinburgh organisers half a million pounds - the largest security contract for a single sporting event in the United Kingdom.

Undoubtedly, that will be repeated in Edinburgh again this summer as people from 60 nations all around the world join together to celebrate ten days of sporting excellence. At the end of them, each will take home his or her own special memories, to be stored for the next four years, before the Commonwealth is reunited again in sport in 1990 - in Auckland, New Zealand.

Wimbledon Preview by Linda Spurr

Can Boris Becker repeat his phenomenal success of last year? Will John McEnroe make it back to the top grade? Is there anyone in the women's game to challenge Martina Navratilova? And will the sun shine at last on the grass courts of south-west London?

Wimbledon '86 promises to be a memorable championship, if only to find out the answers to those questions! Last year, the weather was absolutely horrendous - thunder, lightning and rain as it has never been seen at a tennis tournament! But somehow all the matches were played within the allotted two weeks and memories of some remarkable tennis have almost erased those of sitting around, ankle-deep in water!

This year, Wimbledon is staging the 100th Men's singles championship. The first was played back in 1877: Spencer Gore winning the championship title of the All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club. There were just 22 competitors for that one event and the few hundred spectators who saw the final paid one shilling each to watch!

How different from 1986! There will be some 14,000 people actually in Wimbledon's Centre Court for the men's final on Sunday, July 6th. And they will be joined by many millions more around the world, via television and radio. Over the two weeks, nearly 400,000 people will attend Wimbledon and the club itself is expected to make a profit of around £4 million, which is ploughed back into the sport.

The winner of the men's championship title will take home considerably more than poor Mr Gore in 1877: he merely won the title: this year's champion wins more than £100,000!

Boris Becker... phenomenal

With so many of the rest of the tournaments now being played on synthetic surfaces, indoors and out, the grass courts of Wimbledon will always produce upsets, however perfectly they are tended by the devoted ground staff.

Boris Becker surprised almost everyone last year: he burst on to the scene with his booming service that skidded off the grass in an unreturnable fashion. This year could be different - his opponents have had 12 months to observe his style and adapt to it. I think that Becker will play just as well as in '85, but he might find his opponents are tougher.

Take John McEnroe for instance. The three-times former Wimbledon champion was obviously way below his best last year. Troubles with the press and his personal life hopefully have been sorted out and if the old determination is back, then McEnroe most certainly has the talent to beat all comers yet again.

Another man with those qualifications, and recent top form behind him, is Ivan Lendl. He's always been known as a specialist on clay courts - as his win in the French Open of 1984 confirmed. But Lendl is deceptive. He prefers playing from the baseline, endless rallies of inch-perfect ground strokes. But no-one should underestimate him on grass - he can serve and volley with the best.

Wimbledon this year will reflect the trend that has become apparent in tennis world-wide over the past few years - that is the move away from American domination, to that by Europeans.

Lendl has led that revival, Becker has followed, and in between there are a whole host of Swedish players: Mats Wilander, Stefan Edberg and last year's semi-finalist, Anders Jarryd.

But of course there is always the possibility of an upset, at least in the early rounds. Players to watch out for in this respect must include the Australians, Pat Cash and Peter McNamara, both making comebacks after injury; Slobodan Zivojinovic of Yugoslavia; Nduka Odzor of Nigeria; Israel's Schlomo Glickstein; Kevin Curran, Leif Shiras and Paul Annacone of the United States; and a tall, powerful newcomer from Czechoslovakia - Marian Vajda.

In the women's championship, surely the day will come when Martina Navratilova must relinquish her four-year-old hold on the title. Indeed, she has been beaten already this season, but at Wimbledon time, she always seems to produce her best in the end.

Chris Lloyd so often promises to have the game to beat Martina. Perhaps this year, which is possibly her last, she will produce it on the day. Among the girls just waiting for Martina to falter is Kathy Jordan who has beaten the world's number one this year; Hana Mandlikova, who certainly has the game to beat her; Pam Shriver, Martina's doubles partner; and the young West German girl Steffi Graf.

Sportsworld goes to Wimbledon every day of the championships from June 23rd at 1330 and 1615 for commentary, reports and results of the day's matches, and there is a full review of the day's play at 2100, rep 0215, 0745.

The Perfect Pension Policy for Expatriates

Did you know that you can now benefit from a brand new pension plan that can provide you with the following benefits:

- A pension that is paid completely free of all forms of UK taxation even if you take up residence in the UK. Normally, UK pensions are taxed automatically as earned income.
- A tax free pension that you can draw at any time after ten years. There is no need for you to wait until a fixed retirement age of 60 or 65.
- A tax free pension that you can draw whilst you are still in full time employment.
- A tax free pension policy that does not require regular contributions. The benefits from the pension can be obtained from just one lump sum initial contribution if desired.
- Alternatively, your pension plan can be funded by a short term regular savings policy i.e. during the period of your overseas employment which may only be two or three years. No further contributions would have to be paid upon your return to the UK.

We are a small family business that offers a comprehensive professional service covering all aspects of investment, life assurance, pensions and taxation. We are able to advise concerning both onshore and offshore investments into Unit Trust, Bonds and Equities. Following the recent changes ratified by the 1984 Finance Act, we would be pleased to outline the tax position relating to all forms of offshore investment especially with regard to those people who may one day take up residence in the United Kingdom.

WORLD CUP

For the 24 qualifiers, the World Cup represents the pinnacle of football ambition. One-hundred and twenty teams entered, and a total of 308 qualifying games were played for the right to join the holders, Italy, and the hosts, Mexico, in the finals. Those that earned a place were divided into six groups, using a seeding system to keep the favourites apart during the early stages. Martin Fookes and Harry Peart, who are World Service's daily guides through the whole of the month-long World Cup finals, assess the 24 teams:

Whenever the finals have been staged in Latin America (1930 in Uruguay, 1950 in Brazil, 1962 in Chile, 1970 in Mexico and 1978 in Argentina), a Latin American team has triumphed.

Mexico owe their top seeding to the fact that they are the host nation this time, and they've been advantageously placed in what appears the weakest of the first-round groups. Thomas Boy, Manuel Negrete and Luis Flores are the Mexicans to watch.

Also in Mexico's group are the South American outsiders Paraguay, who haven't appeared in the finals since 1958, but should not be taken lightly. Julio Cesar Romero, who plays in Brazil, and Roberto Cabanas, who enjoyed a spell with New York Cosmos, are their best-known players, with Adolfo Canete winning a reputation as gifted midfielder.

Obviously, the three-times world champions, Brazil have an excellent chance of success. They won in Mexico in 1970. Tele Santana is back in charge of a squad which includes many of the "old guard" from past World Cups, like Zico, Cerezo, Socrates and Junior, all of whom are now over 30 years old. Of the younger contingent, Casagrande, in attack, and Delel, in midfield, are highly regarded.

Argentina, the 1978 winners, rely heavily on Diego Maradona (the world's most valuable player) and the veteran, Daniel Passarella, who, like the best of the Brazilians, are now playing Italian League soccer. Nonetheless, coach Carlos Bilardo has the squad to mount a very strong challenge. Strikers to watch are Pedro Pasculli and Claudio Daniel Borghi, who some have likened to Maradona.

Uruguay, the first world champions in 1930, whose record of World Cup success is often overlooked, complete the South American quartet. They've been saddled with the toughest of first-round groups, alongside West Germany, Denmark and Scotland, and will sorely need the goal-scoring talents of players like Jorge Da Silva, of Atletico Madrid. Wilmar Cabrera plays in the same Spanish team and Venancio Ramos has gained experience in the French League.

Canada have qualified for the first time, coached by the former England goalkeeper, Tony Waiters. He knows that opponents like France, Hungary and the Soviet Union will prove infinitely tougher than Haiti and Honduras who featured in Canada's qualifying group. The collapse of the outdoor North American league hasn't helped preparation. Carl Valentine, who's played in the English First Division for West Bromwich Albion, is better equipped to perform at this level than most in the squad.

Of the African contenders, Algeria will no longer be treated as poor relations after their 2-1 defeat of West Germany in the 1982 finals in Spain. Lakhdar Belloumi is recognised as the star of the squad, many of whom play in the top European leagues.

Morocco, whose one previous appearance in the finals was in Mexico 16 years ago, include players with experience of the French and Swiss leagues, and their acrobatic goalkeeper Ezaki Badou conceded only one goal in the qualifying rounds. Midfielder Mohammed Timoumi rejoices in the nickname of "the African Pelé."

From Asia, South Korea have qualified for the first time since 1954. They completed their qualifying section by beating Japan home and away. Most players are little known outside their own country, though an exception is 33-year-old Cha Bum-Kun, who has played for several years in the West German league. Bayer Leverkusen would not release him for qualifying games.

Iraq are first-time qualifiers, a considerable achievement in the light of FIFA's ruling that none of their qualifying games could be played in Iraq because of the Gulf War. Zico's brother, Eduardo Antunes Coimbra, left Brazil to help coach Iraq. Many of their players come from one club in Baghdad, Az-Zawraa. They won through to Mexico by defeating Syria over two legs in a tie fraught with political problems.

European challengers

This year 14 teams from Europe will go to Mexico. Four of them are seeded at the head of their respective groups. Leading the challenge are Italy the holders, who were also champions in 1934 and 1938.

Four years ago in Spain they made a hesitant start, but finished strongly to beat West Germany 3-1 in the final. Surprisingly they failed to qualify for the European Championship finals, but they still retain much of the brilliance from their 1982 triumph, including the explosive skills of striker, Paolo Rossi, and the experience of Gaetano Scirea, Marco Tardelli and Sandro Altobelli.

But the team which will hold much of the attention is France who, two years ago, took the European Championship in such dramatic style. Led by Michel Platini, the side remains virtually intact, with Alain Giresse, Jean Tigana and Luis Fernandez, in one of the most powerful midfields in world football.

West Germany are always a force to be reckoned with, having a record in the World Cup second only to Brazil. They won in 1954 and 1974, and now have Franz Beckenbauer as manager. He has a wealth of talent to choose from including Rudi Voller, Karl Heinz Rumenigge, Pierre Littbarski and Hans Peter Briegel.

The fourth seeded European team is Poland who will be making their fifth appearance in the finals. They are arguably the weakest of the top ranked nations, but it would be dangerous to dismiss them outright.

They have, in Zbigniew Boniek, one of the world's finest players, while Dariusz Dziekanowski is another striker to watch.

The 1966 World Champions England will rely on their skipper Bryan Robson being fit after countless injuries this season. Unbeaten in Spain in 1982, England were eased out by West Germany in the second round. Robson, and goalkeeper Peter Shilton, are the star players, though Gary Lineker's superb goalscoring form with Everton makes him one to watch.

Northern Ireland's Pat Jennings... a record number of international caps.

Scotland have players of great individual skill but haven't always blended together as a team. As in Spain, the Scots have been drawn in a particularly strong first-round group. It will be a last World Cup fling for Kenny Dalglish and Graeme Souness, while Frank McAvennie is new to the world stage.

A draw with France in Paris this year shows just how Northern Ireland are capable of rising to the big occasion. Pat Jennings, with a world record number of international caps, is still first-choice goal-keeper, and Norman Whiteside, who was the youngest player to appear in the 1982 finals, should be a key player this time round.

The Soviet Union qualified with Denmark from one of the toughest sections in the European competition, though they failed to reach the European Championship finals in 1984. Oleg Blokhin is the most experienced squad member, and Renat Dassayev is rated by many as the world's best goalkeeper. Undoubtedly a very skilful outfit, they could improve on their performance in Spain, where they reached the second round.

Making their first appearance in the finals, Denmark have the quality to go all the way. Since reaching the European Championship semi-finals two years ago, most of their players have been signed by Europe's top clubs. Preben Elkjaer whose goals helped Verona win the Italian title last year, and Michael Laudrup, now starring with Juventus, are bound to command attention. Defensively sound, and very well organised.

Portugal have a reputation for being erratic, as they showed in the qualifying competition, by losing at home to Sweden; struggling to defeat Malta; and then, against all the odds, beating West Germany away. Fernando Chalana, a gifted midfielder, made a big impact in France when Portugal reached the semi-finals of the European Championship; Fernando Gomes won the "Golden Boot" as Europe's top scorer last year, and Paolo Jorge dos Santos Futre is said to be the "new Eusebio".

Spain's manager Miguel Munoz has brought greater discipline to a team which previously lacked organisation. Hence they reached the final of the European Championships two years ago, losing to France. Real Madrid's striker Emilio Butragueno is the most exciting of their new-wave players, but men like Maceda, Gordillo and Julio Alberto still have plenty to offer.

In Bulgaria, a bribery scandal and violent play disrupted domestic soccer and resulted in the suspension of many players and officials - some for life. This meant a re-organisation of the national team, but the effect seems to have been beneficial. In a team of few internationally-known players, Stoico Mladenov stands out as a proven goalscorer.

Belgium squeezed through to Mexico by beating Holland on away goals in a play-off, but are definitely worth their place. The Belgians now have Eric Gerets back after suspension to combine with promising young stars like midfielder Enzo Scifo, while Jan Ceulemans still has great influence.

Hungary are not comparable to the Mighty Magyars of the early 1950s, but this new team promises great things if the qualifying results are any guide. Tibor Nyilasi will be playing in his third World Cup. He now plays in Austrian football.

RACING

... and golf

Royal Ascot

"It's like a Buckingham Palace Garden Party, with the added attraction of racing" - that's how Christopher Poole described the mixture of top class thorough-breds and haute couture fashion that makes the four day meeting at Royal Ascot one of the most colourful of Britain's traditional sporting and social events.

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II attends every day, and the afternoon begins with her ceremonial procession in an open carriage, down the course from Windsor Castle.

So Royal patronage and pageantry play an important part in setting aside Ascot from other race meetings. But the essential element is the high quality of the bloodstock and the head-to-head competition between the top jockeys of Britain, France and Ireland.

Any one of the 24 races at the meeting could, on merit and prize money alone, be the premier "feature" race at almost any other flat meeting held during the summer.

There are several important races for two year olds, with an eye on the next year's classics, a major handicap - the Royal Hunt Cup - and one of the best sprinting events in Europe for the King Stand stakes.

The crème de la crème, attracting the biggest prize money, is the Ascot Gold Cup, a race for stayers over 2½ miles. Inaugurated in 1772, the Gold Cup is still the supreme test of stamina in European racing.

Christopher Poole, racing correspondent of the London Standard, previews Royal Ascot in Saturday Special June 14th, 1550.

Sportsworld goes to Ascot every day of the meeting, 17th-20th 1445 when Geoff Parker brings listeners up to date with all the results and news from the course and introduces commentary by Peter Bromley on the following races:

Prince of Wales Stakes and St James Palace Stakes 17th; Queen Mary Stakes and Royal Hunt Cup 18th; Norfolk Stakes and Ascot Gold Cup 19th; Harkwicke Stakes and Wokingham Stakes 20th

Queen Elizabeth II in her open carriage.

The Derby

The Derby is run at Epsom Downs, to the south of London on June 4th. This annual race provides the setting for a grand social occasion with thousands viewing the race from open-topped carriages parked along the rails from Tattenham Corner to the finishing post.

The Derby also gives an opportunity for millions of "punters" to make their traditional small bet on a fancied horse. This historic race, for three year old colts and fillies, over a mile and a half, has been a British sporting tradition since 1780, and now attracts interest the world over, from Dubai to Fiji, and from California to Singapore.

Details of coverage is to be announced in the week prior to the big race, and at 1550 on May 31st when Christopher Poole of the London Standard previews the race; also in Sportsworld on June 3rd-2100, rep 4th 0215, 0745 and 1330 when BBC racing correspondent Peter Bromley gives his assessment of the runners.

Golf - the Open

After last year's intense excitement, Britain's top golfers will be looking for another win in the Open Golf Championship to be held in July. The stage for the 115th Open is Turnberry in Scotland at the Ailsa Course which overlooks Turnberry Bay and the Firth of Clyde.

The locals will certainly be hoping for a repeat of last year when Sandy Lyle of Scotland became only the second Briton in 16 years to lift the trophy. But the 1984 winner Seve Ballesteros has other thoughts on the matter, as of course has Tom Watson who won the trophy in 1983.

As always the competition attracts the world's top players and crowds of over 30,000 a day are not unusual.

The last time the Open was held in Turnberry in 1977, Tom Watson triumphed. However, since 1984, he has not lifted a major trophy. The great Ballesteros is likely to start joint favourite with the West German, Bernhard Langer.

Should a European win again this year, it will confirm what many people in golf believe, that the United States monopoly on this competition has been broken. It takes a player of the highest calibre to win the Open against the best of the world's golfers. This year should prove no exception.

Harry Peart reports from the course in every edition of Sports Roundup during the Open and there is commentary on the third round during Saturday Special July 19th and on the final round 20th 1515 and 1715

Meanwhile in June, there are reports on the Dunhill Masters at Woburn 5th-8th; US Open at Shinnecock Hills Country Club, Long Island, New York, and Jersey Open at La Moye, 12th-15th; Irish Open at Portmarnock 19th-22nd; Monte Carlo Open at Mont Agel 25th-28th

TEST CRICKET

A full season

There is a full and interesting season of Test cricket in England, where both India and New Zealand are involved in three-match Test series. Both teams include players who are among the leading giants in the game.

The Indian side includes former captain, Sunil Gavaskar who became the first man in history to reach 9,000 runs at that level, while New Zealand's commanding all-rounder, Richard Hadlee has joined the elite group with over 300 Test wickets to his name.

India's record in the past 12 months is far from impressive. Under captain Kapil Dev they have failed to record a victory in their past 20 matches, and in the last year they provided Sri Lanka with their first-ever Test victory. They have also drawn all three matches with an inconsistent, and unpredictable, Australian side.

But that dismal record conceals their rapidly improving batting line-up which has seen them emerge as one of the most exciting sides in the world - on their day. Krishnam Srikkanth, with a century and two half centuries in four innings against the Australians has cemented his place as opener, no doubt along with Gavaskar.

Attack

Mohammed Azharuddin wrote his name into the record books with three centuries in his debut series against England early last year. He failed to make a big score in Australia but his final innings in the series, an unbeaten 59, when India piled up 600 for four, was recalled as one of the highlights of the match.

Dilip Vengsarkar, Ravi Shastri and Kapil Dev are all capable of scoring heavily, and quickly. So India should rarely be short of runs.

Kapil Dev, as one of the world's leading all-rounders, as well as leading the side, will also lead the attack. Unfortunately the English public will not see the exciting leg-spinner Laxman Sivaramakrishnan who has been left out, despite taking 23 wickets against England 18 months ago. Also missing is the experienced wicket-keeper, Syed Kirmani, who has played in 91 Test matches.

His place goes to Chandrakant Pandit. Apart from Pandit, the only other newcomer is opening batsman Raman Lamba, while Madan Lal is on his third tour.

India have won just one Test in England, that success came back in 1971 at The Oval, and was enough to earn India the three match series. Since then they have returned three times to England without another victory.

The New Zealanders begin their programme later in July. Their first senior match is against Middlesex at Lord's, which is the venue for the first Test, starting on July 24th. Their other Test matches will be at Trent Bridge in Nottingham starting on August 7th, and they finish their series at The Oval on August 21st.

Richard Hadlee is bound to have a big say in the success of the side. They were popular tourists in England three years ago, where they enjoyed their first Test victory on English soil. They lost the series, but gained a lot in experience, and are now firmly established on the Test circuit.

Disappointing

In the past six months they have beaten Australia both away - and then at home - in successive Test series. Hadlee claimed 49 wickets in those six matches, and his fiery fast bowling could make it a memorable series. Martin Crowe has again emerged as a batsman of the highest order with two big centuries off the Australian attack, and Jeremy Coney also found time to score consistently while captaining the side.

John Bracewell's spin bowling has - according to Australia's Allan Border - been improving all the time. And he took six wickets in the third and final Test against Australia in Auckland in March to lead New Zealand's decisive win.

New Zealand's Test record against England is a disappointing one. However, they have been closing the gap in recent years. England have won exactly half of the 60 Tests between the two sides, with just three victories for New Zealand.

Their three wins have come in the last four series, including an historic occasion at Leeds three years ago where they won by five wickets.

It was their first - and only - Test win in England in 52 years and at the 29th attempt.

Jeremy Coney had the satisfaction of scoring the winning runs at Headingley on that fourth day, and obviously he will be more than happy if his side can get into a similar position during this series of Test matches.

Festival time

The BBC Singers

Two years after its foundation in 1922, the BBC decided it needed a permanent ensemble of singers, and so a group was set up which came to be known as the Wireless Singers. Thus the BBC Singers, now a 28 strong mixed-voice choir, can look back on a distinguished 64 years performing in concerts, broadcasts, and in the BBC's daily choral service.

The Singers' reputation has spread worldwide through recordings and through their regular international concert tours. Later this year they will be visiting France and Germany. This month their busy schedule includes four concerts for World Service, conducted by their director John Poole and assistant conductor Simon Joly.

The music reflects the Singers' versatility as well as breadth of their repertory, which spans a full 500 years, from early medieval times to the present day.

The Piano Roll

Mechanical music has taken many forms, from the simple musical box to the modern laser-read compact disc player. Around the turn of the century, when most middle-class American and European homes had a piano in the parlour, there was a vogue for pianos that played by themselves, driven by a sophisticated cut paper roll. The result was not always a mechanical bar-room sound. Often the rolls reproduced all the subtle nuances of composers and great pianists, some of whom never made gramophone records.

Lionel Salter presents some of these rarities, including composers performing their own works, such as Grieg 22nd; Granados, Falla and Prokofiev 29th

Grieg from Bergen

Late spring is festival time in Bergen, Norway's second city. This year's packed programme of events features artists from Scandinavia and visitors from the USA, the German Federal Republic and Great Britain – including the BBC Symphony Orchestra, returning after an absence of 30 years. BBC World Service relays part of the final concert of the festival, including the traditional performance of Grieg's Piano Concerto, with the talented Swedish pianist Roland Pöntinen as soloist, and the distinguished Finnish conductor Paavo Berglund directing the BBC Symphony Orchestra.

Off the Beaten Track

Tucked away in every corner of London, down its myriad sidestreets and in its colourful outdoor markets are a whole range of specialist record shops. Run by enthusiasts, they cater for every musical taste from jazz to country, rock n'roll to folk, selling collectors' items, rarities and imports, as well as the most popular discs of the day.

In this new series, Stephen Beard goes Off The Beaten Track to seek out the likes of Groove Records (Soul Music), Daddy Cool (Reggae) and Kay's Irish Music Shop. He talks to the enthusiasts and the record buyers, and plays some of their favourite sounds both old and new.

Ray Moore talks to...

In September 1981, Ray Moore flew to Los Angeles to talk to Richard and Karen Carpenter about their life and music. Both born in New Haven, Connecticut, The Carpenters became major recording stars of the 1970s, with hits like Goodbye to Love, Top of the World and Yesterday Once More.

Sadly, this proved to be their last major radio interview before Karen's tragic death in February of 1983.

The first four of ten programmes are devoted to this interview.

Relics

by Anna Fox

A man and a woman meet in a waiting-room in a large country house where they have gone for an interview. But nobody comes near them. As the snow falls heavily outside, each reminisces on a rather sad past in which they have been let down, abandoned. It seems to be happening again, the abandonment, and with the snow falling the way it is, there will soon be no way of escaping from the house - or each other.

England and the 1970s - economic instability, runaway inflation and general insecurity are making it an anxious time for businessmen. Freddie is certainly feeling the strain. He needs a couple of large gins in the buffet at London's Victoria Station every evening to calm his nerves for the journey home. In fact, the buffet has become a haven for worn-out and harassed executives, where they can exchange news about the latest nervous breakdowns, and commiserate with their colleagues who have cracked under the stress of daily life in the city.

I Chose Freedom

by Robert Carver

"If this is freedom, give me a re-education camp any day!" A university lecturer in an unnamed East European country has enjoyed a good life - a pleasant flat, good food and wine, and many of the little luxuries denied to ordinary citizens. But his comfortable life changes when he meets and marries Anna, a bright and idealistic student who is firmly committed to such causes as freedom and human rights.

For a while the authorities allow Anna to continue her dissident activities unmolested, but eventually she is arrested, and her husband is given the choice between a re-education camp and a passport to the west. He chooses exile, and is greeted in America as a hero. But he knows that this isn't true, and that the reality of what's happened is far more complicated than what is portrayed by the western media.

Nigel Anthony plays the part of the dissident in this production directed by Christopher Venning.

Marcus Fleishman died in a German concentration camp during the Second World War: in the evolutionary scale of things he is metamorphosed into a monkey, which means that he can still keep an eye on what happens to his wife and young son. But his are not the wide-eyed and innocent eyes of a monkey in the wild. Marcus' son has become an eminent scientist, at present engaged in animal research; and one such animal being painfully experimented on is ... a monkey.

Much Ado about Nothing

by William Shakespeare

Don Pedro has crushed a rebellion instigated by his bastard brother Don John, and is now staying on his friend Leonato's estate in Messina. With him are two young nobles who have distinguished themselves on the battlefield, Claudio and Benedick, together with Don John, apparently reconciled with his brother, but secretly plotting revenge for his humiliating defeat.

Claudio is in love with Leonato's daughter, Hero, a match welcomed by all but Don John. Benedick on the other hand, is determined to remain a bachelor, but his friends have rather different plans for him. They resolve to make him fall in love with the witty and sharp-tongued Beatrice, Leonato's niece, a woman with very definite - and none-too-flattering - views about men.

All seems set for a happy conclusion - until the evil Don John sets in motion a scheme so diabolically cunning, that the play promises to be anything but ... much ado about nothing.

This popular and much-performed Shakespearean comedy has been abridged in two parts by Lynne McVernon and produced by Gordon House.

No Exceptions

by Steve May

'Now listen to me Roger Burge. You think you're special, don't you. Just because you can run fast and you're tougher than the other louts in the class ... Well you're not. To me you're just a pain in the backside like the rest of them.'

This teacher has got 32 little pains in his backside and he treats them all the same - no exceptions. Well maybe just one, but not so as you would notice. Roger Burge is an exceptional runner, he wins all sorts of trophies and glories for the school. There is the big competition coming up, which they will win - if Roger runs.

But he's a problem in the classroom, with none of the style and grace that he shows on the field: how do you get through to a kid who's only happy when he's running or causing trouble?

This monologue was recorded on location at a school, and maybe it was because the author was once a teacher that in 1983 it won a Giles Cooper Award for Best Script. Rod Beacham stars as the teacher. Directed by Alec Reid.
