PREFACE TO THE 115TH ANNUAL VOLUME (1983)

The year 1982, recorded in the 115th volume of WHITAKER, was dominated by the Falkland Islands Conflict. The events leading to the war, its full course and aftermath, are chronicled in a special diary section, which includes a full page map of the Islands. This is supplemented by lists of the commanders, ships, regiments, units, etc. which comprised the British Task Force, and by illustrations.

An outstanding and happy Royal event of the year was the birth of Prince William of Wales, and this is duly recorded and illustrated.

The historic visit of Pope John Paul II is commemorated by a separate article and photographs of His Holiness with the Queen and the Archbishop of Canterbury. Another important visitor was President Reagan and his stay is suitably described, with illustrations.

The Editor, while endeavouring to maintain the essential traditional contents of the Almanack would call attention to certain new features.

The latter part of the Astronomical section has been restructured to allow for an expansion of U.K. statistical matter. A new Arts summary—Opera and Dance—has been introduced to join the well established reviews of Literature and Drama and it is intended that this should become an annual feature.

The usual general history introduction to the Centenaries article has been replaced by extracts as printed in early Almanacks describing the events of one hundred years ago.

Another innovation is a section on Broadcasting, which includes useful details of local radio stations with their wavelengths. The information on Adult Education has been entirely recast to provide a clear and concise guide.

A full list of winners at the Commonwealth Games appears, with other late information, in "Occurrences during Printing".

The Editor once again wishes to express his thanks to his many and widespread correspondents whose assistance in the compilation of the Almanack is invaluable.

Invest in the Future

This baby is perfectly normal but many others are born crippled or are disabled by accident or disease. There are also very few of us who will not be affected by some disability in our old age.

Action Research is currently providing support for over 200 research projects into the cause of crippling diseases. But much more needs to be done if we are to protect ourselves and our children from the pain and heartbreak of crippling.

Your gift to medical research could be the best investment for the future.

WHO CARES ABOUT DEMENTIA?

There are over 750,000 people suffering from senile and pre-senile dementia in the U.K. alone. Alzheimer's Disease is the main cause and at present there is no cure.

We need your financial support to allow us to increase much needed care, comfort, support and facilities for both the sufferer and carer. Equally you can help us, with a donation, to fund research to find a possible cure.

ROYAL NAVAL BENEVOLENT TRUST

The Royal Naval Benevolent Trust, which was instituted by Royal Charter in 1922, is administered and supported by the men of the Royal Navy and Royal Marines for the benefit of serving and ex-serving men, their widows, orphans and dependants in need or distress.

The Trust maintains Pembroke House, its own residential home for aged ex-naval men, situated at Gillingham in Kent.

The Trust is entirely dependent on voluntary contributions and legacies.

THE CHEST, HEART AND STROKE ASSOCIATION

Patron: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
President: H.R.H. The Duke of Kent

We Care about people who suffer from

ASTHMA	CORONARY THROMBOSIS	LUNG CANCER
EMPHYSEMA	STROKE	TUBERCULOSIS
CHRONIC BRONCHITIS	ANGINA	HYPERTENSION

*and other conditions of the chest and heart. We do all we can to help.
PLEASE HELP US by sending a donation, taking out a Deed of Covenant or remembering us in your Will*

The Association works throughout the United Kingdom for the prevention of Chest, Heart and Stroke illnesses and to help those who suffer from them. This is done by a continuing programme of Research, Rehabilitation, Health Education, Counselling and Welfare services.

We sponsor research projects concentrating on Chronic Bronchitis, Asthma, Emphysema and Stroke. We also sponsor schemes using voluntary workers to help Stroke patients with speech and language difficulties. By 1982 these schemes were active in 42 districts with 2,500 volunteers helping over 1,000 patients.

In the field of Health Education, we produce publications advising on the prevention of Chest, Heart and Stroke illnesses and giving patients a fuller understanding of their disabilities. In 1981 we responded to over 27,000 requests for help and advice from people suffering from these illnesses, as compared with some 12,000 dealt with in 1978.

We also, on the advice of Social Workers, make Welfare grants to individuals, mainly for fuel bills—for which we receive an ever increasing number of applications—visits to hospitals and convalescent holidays. In 1981 we helped over 1,200 individuals in this way. With greater resources the Association could help many more people.

WILL YOU HELP?

SO MUCH STILL TO BE DONE

for the hundreds of elderly people from all parts of the country—lonely, living in distressing circumstances—who are waiting and hoping that we can accommodate them soon in self-contained flatlets of their own.

Time for them is running out fast!

We have the skill, experience and desire to provide still more self-contained flatlets, where the elderly can live independent, secure and comfortable lives.

But tomorrow may be too late. We need your help now.

Only the unceasing flow of legacies, gifts and covenants will enable us to continue to provide this vital housing need.

PLEASE REMEMBER US AND THE ELDERLY IN YOUR WILL

FELLOWSHIP HOUSES TRUST,

Clock House, Byfleet,

ARTHRITIS RESEARCH

Arthritis is the greatest cause of disability in the United Kingdom today

The Arthritis and Rheumatism Council is the only national voluntary organization financing research into Rheumatoid Arthritis, Osteoarthritis, Ankylosing Spondylitis, Juvenile Arthritis and 200 other rheumatic diseases.

At a cost of over £3m annually, the Council supports 170 research projects at universities and hospitals throughout the United Kingdom and also provides the main finances of the Kennedy Institute of Rheumatology in London. Much progress has been made in diagnosis, in treatment and in understanding, and there is now every hope that the major rheumatic diseases can be conquered.

Please help us to win the battle by advising your clients to remember the Council in their wills: we rely entirely on voluntary support and legacies are our most important source of income. Forms of bequest are available from:

THE MARIE CURIE MEMORIAL FOUNDATION

FOR THE WELFARE OF THOSE WITH CANCER

An independent organisation supported by voluntary contributions, interest-free loans and bequests. This worthy cause needs your help — to the extent of nearly £7 million annually simply to maintain, for those in need, its vital humanitarian services.

These include, within the United Kingdom, eleven residential Nursing Homes, nationwide Home Nurses, Welfare Needs in Kind, an Enquiry and Counselling Bureau together with a Research Institute and Education programme contributing to the understanding of the cancer problem. Will you please help?

If you require further details or wish now to respond to this appeal, or perhaps interest others, please write to the Secretary at:-

Who cares? – the Royal Star & Garter

Since 1916 the Royal Star & Garter Home has been a true home for disabled ex-servicemen of all ranks.

Initially, Residents were war casualties. But today we open our doors to those disabled by accident, illness or disease, whether caused by war injuries or not.

The Star & Garter is as home-like as possible. There are bed sitting-rooms for those fit enough, and wards for those requiring constant nursing care.

Today some 200 ex-servicemen are resident. We have no State aid so . . . will you ask your Clients to help? Perhaps they might like to remember us in their Wills.

TAX FACTS

- ★ How tax you have paid is readily recovered to increase your gift to charity.
- ★ How the concession few people know about eliminates Capital Gains Tax.
- ★ How to reduce Capital Transfer Tax on your estate.

Because Government wishes to encourage voluntary work, it has made considerable tax concessions for charity donors.

Are you benefiting from them as fully as you might? And are people in great need being helped by the tax you could save?

EXAMPLES

- If you give shares or property to charity no Capital Gains Tax is payable.
- A regular gift of any amount is automatically increased by 43% under a simple 4-year covenant, if you pay income tax at the normal standard rate. Thus £10 becomes £14.30, or £25 is made into £35.75, at no extra cost to you. High rate tax payers can recover even more tax for charitable donations.
- A legacy to charity need not cost your estate its full value, thanks to the Chancellor's tax concessions. On an estate of £75,000, for instance, a £1,000 charitable bequest costs the estate only £700. On larger estates the percentage of tax saved is considerably greater - and charitable gifts up to £250,000 are now disregarded in arriving at dutible value.

Why so many thoughtful people now support the work of Help the Aged.

Many famous public figures from business, television and the arts, have joined with the less well-known to do what they can to help old people in great need.

Bad housing, acute loneliness, increasing physical disability, inadequate food (and severe hunger among the old overseas) all mean that no section of the community is in greater need than the elderly.

Help the Aged gets things done for old people.

Thanks to volunteers it achieves a great deal with every £ you give.

Send for 2 useful booklets on Wills and Tax Concessions.

Help the Aged has prepared two helpful booklets on this subject. One on all the aspects you need to consider before instructing your solicitor, and the other on how to reduce the effect of Capital Gains Tax, by making a bequest to charity.

Write for copies of the booklets, (and, if it interests you, for details of a unique house bequest plant). They will gladly be sent without obligation.

Please write to: The Hon. Treasurer,
The Rt. Hon. Lord Maybray-King, Help the Aged,
Room Walil, 32 Dover Street, London W1A 2AP.

“ Involved as I am in the British music scene, the most active in the world, I do think that Britain's musicians are not so well provided for in tragic cases of accident and illness or in their old age. They give so much pleasure to so many thousands of people, not just in this country but all over the world, that I believe we owe them a great debt of gratitude that can never be repaid. Perhaps we may help by giving as much support as we can to the Musicians Benevolent Fund.”

THE BRITISH POLIO FELLOWSHIP

(The Infantile Paralysis Fellowship, registered as a charity in accordance with the National Assistance Act 1948)

THE NATIONAL VOLUNTARY ORGANISATION FOR THE POLIO DISABLED

(Patron: Lavinia, Duchess of Norfolk, C.B.E.)

- Founded in 1939, the Fellowship has helped thousands of polio victims to live a fuller life and to cope with their disabilities.
- Polio is no respecter of persons; it has stricken the physically strong of all age groups and from different walks of life.
- The Fellowship's work in caring for all polio victims knows no barriers and helps all who have suffered from polio.
- £350,000 spent annually on welfare grants, aids, residential care, etc. Can you help—by donation? covenanted gift? or by legacy? Please write to:

RADAR is the principal umbrella organisation in the field of physical disability. The Association campaigns vigorously for the integration of disabled people into society. It believes that disabled people should be part of the community and that they should be given every opportunity to fulfil their potential. RADAR co-ordinates the efforts of over 300 voluntary and statutory bodies working for the welfare and rehabilitation of disabled people.

RADAR is concerned with every aspect of physical disability but it is particularly active in employment for disabled people, education, transport, housing and access to buildings, aids and adaptations and holidays. It provides information on a variety of subjects and deals with over 25,000 enquiries a year. The Legal and Parliamentary Committee keeps in close touch with and monitors current and proposed legislation.

RADAR needs funds to continue its work. Please help disabled people through a bequest or donation.

A LEGACY MEANS A LOT TO THE LIMBLESS

10,500 limbless Ex-Servicemen depend on the British Limbless Ex-Service Men's Association.

BLESMA is not aided by the State. But we urgently need money to help these brave men conquer their handicap. And to equip and maintain homes in which they convalesce and are given care and comfort in their old age.

Help the disabled by helping BLESMA. A donation from you will give hope and encouragement to those who gave so much for their country. A legacy would-mean a lot to them.

FIGHT BACK AGAINST CANCER

It is good to remember that most people live their lives untouched by any form of cancer.

But as all too many are aware, cancer is something that casts its shadow far beyond those it directly affects. That is why so many people think it right to help the urgent work of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund.

From our discoveries in the past has come much of today's hope for sufferers. To go forward with our research for future alleviation, we ask your help in the present.

Donations will be most gratefully received by The Appeals Secretary, Room 23 P.O. Box 123, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London WC2A 3PX

their time worrying about being in the red.

But what about those who are always in the black?

The cost of everything is going up these days. But have you ever thought how much more it costs to be blind? Not only in lost opportunities but in hard cash.

The Greater London Fund for the Blind tries to get the cash together to give blind people a chance to develop their talents and maintain their independence.

Please give whatever you can afford to help us help them. Legacies, covenants and donations are equally welcome.

THE GARDENERS' ROYAL BENEVOLENT SOCIETY

President: H.R.H. Princess Alice Duchess of Gloucester

Please Help Old Gardeners in Need

The Gardeners' Royal Benevolent Society is the only National charity providing assistance for retired gardeners in need who have been in private, commercial or public employment. The Society's home at Henfield provides accommodation for up to 45 old people. It also owns a number of small dwellings at Barton, near Cambridge, and elsewhere, for "gardener" couples who so often have to vacate tied cottages when they retire.

The paying of pensions and grants is an important aspect of our work and these are provided not only for aged or incapacitated gardeners but also for their widows.

The Society needs your help, the help of the general public, garden owners, the horticultural trade and organisations concerned with gardens and gardening. Please support our work with Legacies, Property, Deeds of Covenant and Donations.

For further information, please write to:

The Gardeners' Royal Benevolent Society,
Palace Gate, Hampton Court, East Molesey, Surrey KT8 9BN.

Reg. Charity No. 213328

SOCIETY FOR THE ASSISTANCE OF LADIES IN REDUCED CIRCUMSTANCES

(FOUNDED BY THE LATE MISS SMALLWOOD)

Patron: HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

Contributions

Please remember our numerous ladies who are in need. The anxiety that inflation brings coupled with the problems of living in these difficult days, increase the hardship that many of our ladies are experiencing. Without the continued support of donations, covenanted subscriptions or bequests, their needs could not be met.

New Annual Subscriptions will be thankfully received.

Please make cheques payable to:

Loneliness is just one problem

And it is a fairly common problem for seamen – away from home for months at a time — but it is only one of the many different troubles that people bring to us. And we are there, ready to give all the help we can, in all parts of the world.

Over the years, since our foundation in 1856, seafarers have come to depend on us. They know we care.

We care because we are Christians.

Do you care enough to help us?

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION

Founded in 1839 and familiarly known as "Old Ben", is the news trade's charity. It's purpose is to help those in need who have worked in publishing, wholesaling or retailing. Widows, orphans or other immediate dependants also qualify for help. Aid is given by grants and weekly allowances. Homes, care centres and flats both rent free and at a fair rent are provided in various parts of the country.

Secretary:

J. E. Llewellyn-Jones,
Dutch House,
307/308 High Holborn,
London,
WC1V 7LL.

Who cares? – the Royal Star & Garter

Since 1916 the Royal Star & Garter Home has been a true home for disabled ex-servicemen of all ranks.

Initially, Residents were war casualties. But today we open our doors to those disabled by accident, illness or disease, whether caused by war injuries or not.

The Star & Garter is as home-like as possible. There are bed sitting-rooms for those fit enough, and wards for those requiring constant nursing care.

Today some 200 ex-servicemen are resident. We have no State aid so . . . will you ask your Clients to help? Perhaps they might like to remember us in their Wills.

TAX FACTS

- ★ How tax you have paid is readily recovered to increase your gift to charity.
- ★ How the concession few people know about eliminates Capital Gains Tax.
- ★ How to reduce Capital Transfer Tax on your estate.

Because Government wishes to encourage voluntary work, it has made considerable tax concessions for charity donors.

Are you benefiting from them as fully as you might? And are people in great need being helped by the tax you could save?

EXAMPLES

- If you give shares or property to charity no Capital Gains Tax is payable.
- A regular gift of any amount is automatically increased by 43% under a simple 4-year covenant, if you pay income tax at the normal standard rate. Thus £10 becomes £14.30, or £25 is made into £35.75, at no extra cost to you. High rate tax payers can recover even more tax for charitable donations.
- A legacy to charity need not cost your estate its full value, thanks to the Chancellor's tax concessions. On an estate of £75,000, for instance, a £1,000 charitable bequest costs the estate only £700. On larger estates the percentage of tax saved is considerably greater - and charitable gifts up to £250,000 are now disregarded in arriving at dutible value.

Why so many thoughtful people now support the work of Help the Aged.

Many famous public figures from business, television and the arts, have joined with the less well-known to do what they can to help old people in great need.

Bad housing, acute loneliness, increasing physical disability, inadequate food (and severe hunger among the old overseas) all mean that no section of the community is in greater need than the elderly.

Help the Aged gets things done for old people.

Thanks to volunteers it achieves a great deal with every £ you give.

Send for 2 useful booklets on Wills and Tax Concessions.

Help the Aged has prepared two helpful booklets on this subject. One on all the aspects you need to consider before instructing your solicitor, and the other on how to reduce the effect of Capital Gains Tax, by making a bequest to charity.

Write for copies of the booklets, (and, if it interests you, for details of a unique house bequest plant). They will gladly be sent without obligation.

Please write to: The Hon. Treasurer,
The Rt. Hon. Lord Maybray-King, Help the Aged,

OCCURRENCES DURING PRINTING

HOME AFFAIRS. Sept. 1. Mr. John Nott, the Secretary of State for Defence, announced that he would be retiring from politics at the next general election. It was announced that rail fares were to go up by 10 per cent at the end of November.

Sept. 6. T.U.C. conference opened in Brighton with vote for structural reform of its governing general council; on Sept. 8, Congress passed a motion re-affirming support for free collective bargaining and the right to negotiate wages and conditions without interference or statutory controls.

Sept. 9. It was announced that the Government's plan to build a base in Scotland to overhaul Trident missiles had been scrapped and the servicing would be done in the U.S.A. instead.

Sept. 13. A 6 per cent pay rise for railway workers was recommended by Lord McCarthy's Railway Staffs National Tribunal; British Rail stated that it would not pay the increase until the unions gave firm commitments on productivity. Lord Shackleton's report on the Falkland Islands was published.

Sept. 16. N.H.S. unions rejected revised pay offer. Labour won Gower by election with majority of 7,220; the S.D.P.-Liberal Alliance were second, pushing the Conservatives into third position. Mrs. Thatcher left for a Far East tour.

Sept. 17. The carrier Invincible, with Prince Andrew on board, returned from the Falklands to a tumultuous welcome at Portsmouth. Inflation dropped to 8 per cent.

Sept. 20. The S.D.P. and Liberals announced that they had agreed on the allocation of seats each will fight as members of their Alliance.

Sept. 21. Liberal Party Assembly opened in Bournemouth.

Sept. 22. T.U.C. staged "Day of Action" in support of Health Service workers pay claim. Unemployment rose to 3,343,075 in September.

Sept. 27. ## NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION

Headquarters: Brussels 1110, Belgium.

The North Atlantic Treaty was signed on April 4, 1949, by the Foreign Ministers of twelve nations. The twelve are Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Iceland, Italy, Luxemburg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, the United Kingdom and United States. Greece and Turkey acceded to the Treaty in 1952, the Federal Republic of Germany in 1955, and Spain in 1982. The North Atlantic Council is the highest authority of the Alliance and is composed of permanent representatives of the sixteen member countries. It meets at ministerial level at least twice per year. The permanent representatives head national delegations of advisers and experts.

U.K. Permanent Representative, His Excellency Sir John Graham, K.C.M.G. (1979).

The senior military authority in NATO is the Military Committee composed of a Chief-of-Staff of each member country except France and Iceland. The Military Committee, which is assisted by an international military staff, functions in permanent session with permanent military representatives and is responsible for higher strategic direction throughout the North Atlantic Treaty area.

Secretary-General, J. M. A. H. Luns (Netherlands).

BRITISH TRANSPORT DOCKS BOARD, 1981

Traffic through the Board's ports in 1981 totalled 75,235,000 tonnes, consisting of ('000 tonnes): ores, 8,009; timber, 869; coal, 9,328; petroleum, 36,314; foodstuffs, 4,225; manufactured goods and other commodities, 16,490. Net registered tonnage of shipping entering and leaving the ports in 1981 totalled 118,587 tons. Passengers in transit through the Board's ports in 1981 totalled 3,045,253.

Finance.—Gross revenue totalled £129,778,000 and working expenses, including historic cost depreciation, £125,945,000. Profit, after historic cost depreciation before interest, £3,883,000; interest charges, £7,095,000. Changes in accounting policies due to SSAP 16 result in no separate figure for additional depreciation being calculated for 1981. Net profit, before tax, 1981, £10,272,000.

(The British Transport Docks Board may change its name to Associated British Ports during 1982/83 as a result of the Government's privatization proposals.)

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY is a difficult evening object, magnitude about zero, for the first week of the month, visible low above the south-western horizon at the end of civil twilight. For the remainder of the month it is too close to the Sun for observation, inferior conjunction occurring on the 16th.

VENUS is an evening object, magnitude  $-3.3$ , visible for a short while after sunset, low in the south-western sky. Venus is moving slowly outwards from the Sun while Mercury is moving in the opposite direction, closest approach occurring on the 7th, Mercury passing  $2^{\circ}$ N. of Venus. The thin crescent Moon will be seen approaching Venus on the evening of the 15th, passing  $2^{\circ}$ S. of the planet after both objects have set.

MARS is an evening object, magnitude  $+1.4$ , visible low in the south-western sky for about 2 hours after sunset. During the month Mars moves from Capricornus into Aquarius.

JUPITER is a morning object, magnitude  $-1.4$ , and by the end of January is visible shortly before  $05^{\text{h}}$ , above the south-eastern horizon. Jupiter moves from Libra into Scorpius early in the month and passes  $0^{\circ}.2$ S. of the  $2.9$  magnitude star Beta Scorpii on the 10th.

SATURN, magnitude  $+0.8$ , is a morning object, and by the end of the month is visible by about  $01^{\text{h}}$ . Saturn is in the constellation of Virgo.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY, although at greatest western elongation on the 8th, is unsuitably placed for observation.

VENUS is a splendid evening object, magnitude -3.4, visible low in the W.S.W. after sunset. As its declination increases northwards and its elongation from the Sun increases so the period available for observation lengthens and by the end of the month it is visible for about 2<sup>h</sup> after sunset. On the evening of the 14th the thin crescent Moon will be seen approaching Venus. Venus is slowly moving outwards from the Sun while Mars is moving in the opposite direction and the two planets are never more than 10° apart during February, closest approach being on the 18th when Venus passes only 0°.5S. of Mars, a few hours after both planets have set.

MARS is an evening object, magnitude +1.4, visible low above the west-south-western horizon for a short while in the early evenings. During February Mars moves from Aquarius into Pisces.

JUPITER is a morning object, magnitude -1.6, visible in the south-eastern sky for several hours before dawn.

SATURN, magnitude +0.7, is visible in the south-eastern sky in the mornings. Saturn is in the constellation of Virgo.

ZODIACAL LIGHT. The evening cone may be observed in the western sky after the end of twilight, from the beginning of the month until the 14th.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY is unsuitably placed for observation throughout March, superior conjunction occurring on the 26th.

VENUS is a brilliant evening object, magnitude -3.4, visible in the western sky for several hours after sunset.

MARS, magnitude +1.5, may only be glimpsed with difficulty for a short while at around 19<sup>h</sup> low above the western horizon, early in the month. Later Mars becomes lost in the glare of the lengthening twilight and will not be seen again in these latitudes for about six months.

JUPITER is a morning object, magnitude -1.8, in the constellation of Ophiuchus. On the morning of the 6th the Moon, at Last Quarter, occults Jupiter, the planet passing behind the Moon's southern limb.

SATURN, magnitude +0.5, is a morning object in the constellation of Virgo but by the end of the month it is visible low above the south-eastern horizon by about 21<sup>h</sup>. On the morning of the 3rd and again on the afternoon of the 30th the gibbous Moon passes less than 2° N. of the planet

ZODIACAL LIGHT. The evening cone may be observed in the western sky after the end of twilight, from the beginning of the month to the 16th, and again on the 30th and 31st. This faint phenomena is only visible under good conditions and in the absence of both moonlight and artificial lighting. During March the brilliance of Venus will make the zodiacal light even more difficult to detect than usual.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY is an evening object, except during the first week of the month. It's magnitude ranges from -1 on the 7th to +1½ by the end of the month. It is visible above the W.N.W. horizon around the end of civil twilight. This is the most favourable evening apparition of the year for observers in the northern hemisphere. The thin crescent Moon, only 1½ days old, passes 6° S. of Mercury on the afternoon of the 14th.

VENUS, magnitude -3.5, continues to be visible as a brilliant object in the western sky in the evenings after sunset. Venus is moving rapidly eastwards and passes between the Pleiades and the Hyades in the middle of April. This spectacle will be enhanced by the proximity of the thin crescent Moon on the evening of the 15th and 16th.

MARS is unsuitably placed for observation.

JUPITER continues to be a morning object, magnitude -2.0, and by the end of the month is visible well before midnight, in the south-eastern sky.

SATURN, magnitude +0.4, is at opposition on the 21st and thus observable throughout the hours of darkness, being visible above the south-eastern horizon by about 21<sup>h</sup> at the beginning of the month and 19<sup>h</sup> at the end of the month. On the evening of the 26th the Full Moon passes less than 2° N. of Saturn.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY may possibly be glimpsed as an evening object, magnitude +2, low above the west-north-western horizon at the time of end of civil twilight but only for the first couple of days of May. Thereafter it is unsuitably placed for observation, inferior conjunction occurring on the 12th.

VENUS remains a brilliant object in the western sky in the evenings, magnitude -3.7, and by the end of the month is visible until nearly 23<sup>h</sup>. By the end of May Venus will be seen passing south of Castor and Pollux, in Gemini. The thin crescent Moon, only 3 days old, will be seen approaching Venus on the evening of the 15th.

MARS is unsuitably placed for observation.

JUPITER is at opposition on the 27th and thus visible throughout the hours of darkness. Its magnitude is -2.2. It is moving retrograde, passing from Ophiuchus into Scorpius: in particular it passes 6° N. of Antares on the 6th. On the evening of the 26th the Full Moon again occults Jupiter.

SATURN, magnitude +0.5, is visible for the greater part of the night. Saturn is in Virgo. On the late evening of the 23rd the gibbous Moon passes less than 2° N. of Saturn.

URANUS is at opposition on the 29th, on the border separating Ophiuchus from Scorpius. Uranus is barely visible to the naked eye as its magnitude is +5.8 but it is readily located with only small optical aid. The proximity of Jupiter should prove of assistance in finding Uranus since Jupiter passes only 0° 8' N. of Uranus on the 16th.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY, despite being at greatest western elongation on the 8th, is unsuitably placed for observation.

VENUS, magnitude -3.9, is still a brilliant object in the western sky in the evenings, visible for several hours after sunset. It reaches greatest eastern elongation (45°) on the 16th. The crescent Moon will be seen near Venus on the evenings of the 13th and 14th.

MARS is unsuitably placed for observation, conjunction occurring on the 3rd.

JUPITER, magnitude -2.1, just past opposition, is visible for practically the whole of the night in the constellation of Scorpius. The four Galilean satellites are readily observable with almost any small telescope or good pair of binoculars provided that they are held rigidly. Jupiter again passes 0°.2 S. of Beta Scorpii on the 22nd, and the same evening the gibbous Moon passes just N. of the planet.

SATURN is an evening object, magnitude +0.7, in the constellation of Virgo. By the end of the month it has set below the west-south-west horizon before midnight.

NEPTUNE is at opposition on the 19th, in the eastern part of Sagittarius. It is not visible to the naked-eye as its magnitude is +7.7.

ECLIPSE. A total eclipse of the Sun occurs on the 11th (see p. 148 for details).

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY is unsuitably placed for observation, superior conjunction occurring on the 9th.

VENUS continues to be a brilliant object in the western skies in the evenings, magnitude -4.2, attaining its greatest brilliancy on the 19th. However the period available for observation shortens noticeably and by the end of the month it is setting only about half an hour after the Sun. Late in the evening of the 9th Venus passes 0°.7S. of Regulus, in Leo.

MARS is unsuitably placed for observation.

JUPITER, magnitude -2.0, is a splendid object in the southern skies in the evenings, though by the end of the month it sets below the south-western horizon well before midnight. Shortly before it sets on the 19th the gibbous Moon passes just north of the planet.

SATURN is an evening object, magnitude +0.9, but by the end of the month is no longer visible after 22<sup>h</sup>. Even in a small telescope the Rings of Saturn are a beautiful sight and they are now well open, after the Earth's last passage through the ring plane early in 1980.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY, despite being at greatest elongation on the 19th, is unsuitably placed for observation.

VENUS is visible as an evening object low above the western horizon just after sunset, for the first week of the month. Its magnitude is -4. Thereafter Venus is unsuitably placed for observation, inferior conjunction occurring on the 25th.

MARS is unsuitably placed for observation at first but later in the month it gradually becomes visible as a morning object, magnitude +1.9, low above the east-north-eastern horizon shortly after 03<sup>h</sup>.

JUPITER continues to be visible as an evening object, magnitude -1.8. Once again its motion is direct and it passes from Libra into Scorpius during the month. The Moon, near First Quarter, is near the planet on the evenings of the 15th and 16th.

SATURN, magnitude +0.9, is visible in the south-western sky in the evenings, still in the constellation of Virgo. The crescent Moon is near Saturn on the evening of the 13th. Titan, Saturn's largest satellite, is of magnitude +8.5, and thus visible in small telescopes.

METEORS. The maximum of the famous Perseid meteor shower occurs on the night of the 12th-13th.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY is unsuitably placed for observation at first but becomes visible as a morning object during the last week of the month, magnitude +1½ to 0. It is visible above the eastern horizon around the beginning of civil twilight.

VENUS becomes visible as a morning object at the beginning of the month, magnitude -4. It is visible above the eastern horizon before dawn. There is a rapid lengthening of the available period of observation and by the end of the month Venus is visible for about 2½ hours before sunrise. Venus moves past Mars during September, though the separation is never less than 9'.

MARS is a morning object, magnitude +2.0, visible low above the eastern horizon shortly after 03<sup>h</sup>.

JUPITER, magnitude -1.6, is still visible in the south western sky in the evenings but by the end of the month is only visible for little more than an hour after sunset. For the third time this year a lunar occultation of the planet is visible, during darkness, from the British Isles. This occurs on the early evening of the 12th when the Moon is getting towards First Quarter.

SATURN is coming towards the end of its period of evening visibility, and before the end of the month has gone below the horizon before the sky has become dark enough for observation.

ZODIACAL LIGHT. The morning cone may be seen in the eastern sky before twilight commences.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY reaches greatest western elongation on the 1st and is visible as a morning object, for the first half of the month, magnitude 0 to -1. It is visible low above the eastern horizon around the time of beginning of civil twilight. For observers in the northern hemisphere this is the most suitable morning apparition of 1983. However Mercury was at perihelion on September 30, which is why its maximum elongation is only 18°, and why the duration of visibility is relatively short. The thin, waning crescent Moon, only 1½ days before New, passes 4° N. of Mercury on the morning of the 5th.

VENUS is a brilliant object, magnitude -4.2, visible in the eastern sky for more than 3 hours before dawn. On the morning of the 7th Venus will be seen passing south of Regulus. Venus remains near Mars during the whole of October, being closest (1°.7) on the 28th.

MARS is a morning object, magnitude +1.9, and may be seen in the eastern sky for several hours before it becomes invisible in the morning twilight.

JUPITER, magnitude -1.4, is visible for a short while after sunset in the evenings, low in the southwestern sky. It will be seen close to the thin crescent Moon on the evening of the 10th.

SATURN, is unsuitably placed for observation, conjunction occurring on the 31st.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY is unsuitably placed for observation, throughout November.

VENUS is a brilliant morning object, magnitude -4.0, dominating the eastern skies for several hours before dawn. The thin crescent Moon passes 5° N. of Venus on the morning of the 1st and will again be close to the planet on the 30th.

MARS is a morning object, magnitude +1.8, and visible in the eastern sky by around 03<sup>h</sup>. During the month Mars moves from Leo into Virgo. The thin crescent Moon passes 4° N. of Mars on the morning of the 1st. Note the spectacle of the proximity of two planets to the Moon (though Venus will then be about 250 times brighter than Mars!).

JUPITER, magnitude -1.4, may possibly be detected low above the south-western horizon shortly after 17<sup>h</sup> for the first few days of the month. Thereafter it is unsuitably placed for observation.

SATURN is unsuitably placed for observation at first but gradually becomes visible as a morning object towards the end of the month. It may then be detected low above the south-eastern horizon at around 06<sup>h</sup>. Saturn's magnitude is +0.8.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES

MERCURY, despite being at greatest eastern elongation on the 13th, is unsuitably placed for observation.

VENUS is still a magnificent object in the morning sky, magnitude -3.7, though the period available for observation dwindles as it moves southwards in declination. Venus is now moving slowly towards the Sun, passing only 0°.2 N. of Saturn on the 17th, after sunrise. The Moon is near Venus on the mornings of the 1st, 30th and 31st.

MARS is visible as a morning object, magnitude +1.6, in the constellation of Virgo, passing 4° north of Spica on the morning of the 27th.

JUPITER is unsuitably placed for observation, conjunction occurring on the 14th.

SATURN is a morning object, magnitude +0.8, visible low above the south-eastern horizon before twilight inhibits observation. On the morning of the 2nd the thin crescent Moon will be seen extremely close to Saturn at moonrise.

ECLIPSE. An annular eclipse of the Sun occurs on the 4th. The partial phase will be visible from the British Isles (see p. 148 for details).

METEORS. The maximum of the well-known Geminid meteor shower occurs on the morning of the 14th.

INTRODUCTION TO ASTRONOMICAL SECTION

GENERAL

The astronomical data are given in a form suitable for those who practise naked-eye astronomy or use small telescopes. No attempt has been made to replace the Astronomical Almanac for professional astronomers. Positions of the heavenly bodies are given only to the degree of accuracy required by amateur astronomers for setting telescopes, or for plotting on celestial globes or star atlases. Where intermediate positions are required, linear interpolation may be employed.

All data are, unless otherwise stated, for 0<sup>h</sup> G.M.T., or the midnight at the beginning of the day named.

(See notes on British Summer Time, p. 142).

Definitions of the terms used cannot be given in an ephemeris of this nature. They must be sought in astronomical literature and text-books. Probably the best source for the amateur is Norton's Star Atlas (Gall and Inglis, 16th edition, 1973; £4.50), which contains an excellent introduction to observational astronomy, and the finest series of star maps yet produced for showing stars visible to the naked eye. Certain more extended ephemerides are available in the British Astronomical Association Handbook, an annual very popular among amateur astronomers. (Secretary: Burlington House, Piccadilly, London, W.1.)

A special feature has been made of the times when the various heavenly bodies are visible in the British Isles. Since two columns, calculated for latitudes 52° and 56°, are devoted to risings and settings, the range 50° to 58° can be covered by interpolation and extrapolation. The times given in these columns are G.M.T.'s for the meridian of Greenwich. An observer west of this meridian must add his longitude (in time) and vice versa.

In accordance with the usual convention in astronomy, + and - indicate respectively north and south latitudes or declinations.

FIRST PAGE OF EACH MONTH

The Zodiacal signs through which the Sun is passing during each month are illustrated. The date of transition from one sign to the next, to the nearest hour, is also given.

The FASTS and FESTIVALS in black-letter type are those so given in the Prayer Book.

Under the heading PHENOMENA will be found particulars of the more important conjunctions of the Sun, Moon and planets with each other, and also the dates of eclipses and other astronomical phenomena of special interest.

The CONSTELLATIONS listed each month are those that are near the meridian at the beginning of the month at 22<sup>h</sup> local mean time. Allowance must be made for Summer Time if necessary. The fact that any star crosses the meridian 4<sup>m</sup> earlier each night or 2<sup>h</sup> earlier each month may be used, in conjunction with the lists given each month, to find what constellations are favourably placed at any moment. The table preceding the list of constellations may be extended indefinitely at the rate just quoted.

Times of MINIMA OF ALGOL are approximate times of the middle of the period of diminished light.

The Principal PHASES OF THE MOON are the G.M.T.'s when the difference between the longitude of the Moon and that of the Sun is 0°, 90°, 180° or 270°. The times of perigee and apogee are those when the Moon is nearest to, and farthest from, the Earth, respectively. The nodes or points of intersection of the Moon's orbit and the ecliptic make a complete retrograde circuit of the ecliptic in about 19 years. From a knowledge of the longitude of the ascending node and the inclination, whose value does not vary much from 5°, the path of the Moon among the stars may be plotted on a celestial globe or star atlas.

The MONTHLY NOTES are self-explanatory.

SECOND PAGE OF EACH MONTH

The Sun's semi-diameter, in arc, is given once a month.

The right ascension given is that of the true Sun. The right ascension of the mean Sun is obtained by applying the equation of time, with the sign given, to the right ascension of the true Sun, or, more easily, by applying 12<sup>h</sup> to the column Sidereal Time. The direction in which the equation of time has to be applied in different problems is a frequent source of confusion and error. Apparent Solar Time is equal to the Mean Solar Time plus the Equation of Time. For example at noon on Aug. 8 the Equation of Time is -5<sup>m</sup> 39<sup>s</sup> and thus at 12<sup>h</sup> Mean Time on that day the Apparent Time is 12<sup>h</sup> - 5<sup>m</sup> 39<sup>s</sup> = 11<sup>h</sup> 54<sup>m</sup> 21<sup>s</sup>.

The Greenwich Sidereal Time at 0<sup>h</sup> and the Transit of the First Point of Aries (which is really the mean time when the sidereal time is 0<sup>h</sup>) are used for converting mean time to sidereal time and vice versa.

The G.M.T. of transit of the Sun at Greenwich may also be taken as the L.M.T. of transit in any longitude. It is independent of latitude. The G.M.T. of transit in any longitude is obtained by adding the longitude to the time given if west, and vice versa.

The legal importance of SUNRISE and SUNSET is that the Road Traffic Act, 1956, defines Lighting-up Time for vehicles as being from half an hour after sunset to half an hour before sunrise throughout the year. In all laws and regulations "sunset" refers to the local sunset, i.e. the time at which the Sun sets at the place in question. This common-sense interpretation has been upheld by legal tribunals. Thus the necessity for providing for different latitudes and longitudes, as already described, is evident.

The times of SUNRISE and SUNSET are those when the Sun's upper limb, as affected by refraction is on the true horizon of an observer at sea-level. Assuming the mean refraction to be 34', and the Sun's semi-diameter to be 16', the time given is that when the true zenith distance of the Sun's centre is 90° + 34' + 16' or 90° 50', or, in other words, when the depression of the Sun's centre below the true horizon is 50'. The upper limb is then 34' below the true horizon, but is brought there by refraction. It is true, of course, that an observer on a ship might see the Sun for a minute or so longer, because of the dip of the horizon, while another viewing the sunset over hills or mountains would record an earlier time. Nevertheless, the moment when the true zenith distance of the Sun's centre is  $90^{\circ} 50'$  is a precise time dependent only on the latitude and longitude of the place, and independent of its altitude above sea-level, the contour of its horizon, the vagaries of refraction or the small seasonal change in the Sun's semi-diameter; this moment is suitable in every way as a definition of sunset (or sunrise) for all statutory purposes.

It is well known that light reaches us before sunrise and also continues to reach us for some time after sunset. The interval between darkness and sunrise or sunset and darkness is called twilight. Astronomically speaking, twilight is considered to begin or end when the Sun's centre is  $18'$  below the horizon, as no light from the Sun can then reach the observer. As thus defined twilight may last several hours; in high latitudes at the solstices the depression of  $18'$  is not reached, and twilight lasts from sunset to sunrise.

The need for some sub-division of twilight was met some years ago by dividing the gathering darkness into four steps.

- (1) Sunrise or Sunset, defined as above.
- (2) Civil twilight, which begins or ends when the Sun's centre is  $6^{\circ}$  below the horizon. This marks the time when operations requiring daylight may commence or must cease. In England it varies from about 30 to 60 minutes after sunset and the same interval before sunrise.
- (3) Nautical twilight, which begins or ends when the Sun's centre is  $12^{\circ}$  below the horizon. This marks the time when it is, to all intent and purposes, completely dark.
- (4) Astronomical twilight, which begins or ends when the Sun's centre is  $18^{\circ}$  below the horizon. This marks theoretical perfect darkness. It is not of practical importance, especially if nautical twilight is tabulated.

To assist observers the durations of civil, nautical and astronomical twilights are given at intervals of ten days. The beginning of a particular twilight is found by subtracting the duration from the time of sunrise, while the end is found by adding the duration to the time of sunset. Thus the beginning of astronomical twilight in latitude  $52^{\circ}$ , on the Greenwich meridian, on March 11 is found as  $06^{\text{h}} 26^{\text{m}} - 113^{\text{m}} = 04^{\text{h}} 33^{\text{m}}$  and similarly the end of civil twilight as  $17^{\text{h}} 56^{\text{m}} + 34^{\text{m}} = 18^{\text{h}} 30^{\text{m}}$ .

The letters T.A.N. are printed when twilight lasts all night.

Lighting-up time is a crude attempt to approximate to civil twilight over the British Isles.

Under the heading ASTRONOMICAL NOTES will be found notes describing the position and visibility of all the planets and also of other phenomena; these are intended to guide naked-eye observers, or those using small telescopes.

THIRD PAGE OF EACH MONTH

The Moon moves so rapidly among the stars that its position is given only to the degree of accuracy that permits linear interpolation. The right ascension and declination are geocentric, i.e. for an imaginary observer at the centre of the Earth. To an observer on the surface of the Earth the position is always different, as the altitude is always less on account of parallax which may reach  $1^{\circ}$ .

The lunar terminator is the line separating the bright from the dark part of the Moon's disk. Apart from irregularities of the lunar surface, the terminator is elliptical, because it is a circle seen in projection. It becomes the full circle forming the limb, or edge, of the Moon at New and Full Moon. The selenographic longitude of the terminator is measured from the mean centre of the visible disk, which may differ from the visible centre by as much as  $8'$ , because of libration.

Instead of the longitude of the terminator the Sun's selenographic colongitude is tabulated. It is numerically equal to the selenographic longitude of the morning terminator, measured eastward from the mean centre of the disk. Thus its value is approximately  $270^{\circ}$  at New Moon,  $360^{\circ}$  at First Quarter,  $90^{\circ}$  at Full Moon and  $180^{\circ}$  at Last Quarter.

The Position Angle of the Bright Limb is the position angle of the midpoint of the illuminated limb, measured eastward from the north point on the disk. The column PHASE shows the percentage of the area of the Moon's disk illuminated; this is also the illuminated percentage of the diameter at right angles to the line of cusps. The terminator is a semi-ellipse whose major axis is the line of cusps, and whose semi-minor axis is determined by the tabulated percentage; from New Moon to Full Moon the east limb is dark, and vice versa.

The times given as moonrise and moonset are those when the upper limb of the Moon is on the horizon of an observer at sea-level. The Sun's horizontal parallax is about  $9'$ , and is negligible when considering sunrise and sunset, but that of the Moon averages about  $57'$ . Hence the computed time represents the moment when the true zenith distance of the Moon is  $90^{\circ} 50'$  (as for the Sun) minus the horizontal parallax. The time required for the Sun or Moon to rise or set is about four minutes (except in high latitudes).

The tables have been constructed for the meridian of Greenwich, and for latitudes  $52^{\circ}$  and  $56^{\circ}$ . They give Greenwich Mean Time (G.M.T.) throughout the year. To obtain the G.M.T. of the phenomenon as seen from any other latitude and longitude, usual interpolate or extrapolate for latitude by the usual rules of proportion. To the time thus found the longitude (expressed in time) is to be added if west (as it usually is in Great Britain) or subtracted if east. If the longitude is expressed in degrees and minutes of arc, it must be converted to time at the rate of  $1^{\circ} = 4^{\text{m}}$  and  $15' = 1^{\text{m}}$ .

The G.M.T. of transit of the Moon over the meridian of Greenwich is given: these times are independent of latitude, but must be corrected for longitude. For places in the British Isles it suffices to add the longitude if west, and vice versa. For more remote places a further correction is necessary because of the rapid movement of the Moon relative to the stars. The entire correction is conveniently determined by first finding the west longitude  $\lambda$  of the place. If the place is in west longitude,  $\lambda$  is the ordinary west longitude; if the place is in east longitude  $\lambda$  is the complement to  $24^{\text{h}}$  (or  $360^{\circ}$ ) of the longitude and will be greater than  $12^{\text{h}}$  (or  $180^{\circ}$ ). The correction then consists of two positive portions, namely  $\lambda$  and the fraction  $\lambda/24$  (or  $\lambda^{\circ}/360$ ) multiplied by the difference between consecutive transits. Thus for Sydney, N.S.W., the longitude is  $10^{\text{h}} 05^{\text{m}}$  east, so  $\lambda = 13^{\text{h}} 55^{\text{m}}$  and the fraction  $\lambda/24$  is 0.58. The transit on the local date 1983 Oct. 11 is found as follows:

G.M.T. of transit at Greenwich . . . . Oct	10	15	21
$\lambda$ . . . . .		13	55
$0.58 \times (15^{\text{h}} 21^{\text{m}} - 14^{\text{h}} 29^{\text{m}})$ . . . . .			30
G.M.T. of transit at Sydney . . . . .	11	05	46
Corr. to N.S.W. Standard Time . . . . .		10	00
Local standard time of transit . . . . .	11	15	46

It is evident of course, that for any given place the quantities  $\lambda$  and the correction to local standard time may be combined permanently, being here  $23^{\text{h}} 55^{\text{m}}$ .

Positions of Mercury are given for every third day, and those of Venus and Mars for every fifth day; they may be interpolated linearly. The column PHASE shows the illuminated percentage of the disk. In the case of the inner planets this approaches 100 at superior conjunction and 0 at inferior conjunction. When the phase is less than 50 the planet is crescent-shaped or horned; for greater phases it is gibbous. In the case of the exterior planet Mars, the phase approaches 100 at conjunction and opposition, and is a minimum at the quadratures.

Since the planets cannot be seen when on the horizon, the actual times of rising and setting are not given; instead, the time when the planet has an apparent altitude of  $5^{\circ}$  has been tabulated. If the time of transit is between  $00^{\text{h}}$  and  $12^{\text{h}}$  the time refers to an altitude of  $5^{\circ}$  above the eastern horizon; if between  $12^{\text{h}}$  and  $24^{\text{h}}$ , to the western horizon. The phenomenon tabulated is the one that occurs between sunset and sunrise; unimportant exceptions to these rules may occur because changes are not made during a month, except in the case of Mercury. The times given may be interpolated for latitude and corrected for longitude as in the case of the Sun and Moon.

The G.M.T. at which the planet transits the Greenwich meridian is also given. The times of transit are to be corrected to local meridians in the usual way, as already described.

PAGE FOUR OF EACH MONTH

The G.M.T.'s of Sunrise and Sunset may be used not only for these phenomena, but also for Lighting-up Times, which, under the Road Traffic Act, 1956, are from half an hour after sunset to half an hour before sunrise throughout the year.

The particulars for the four outer planets resemble those for the planets on Page III of each month, except that, under Uranus and Neptune, times when the planet is  $10^{\circ}$  high instead of  $5^{\circ}$  high are given; this is because of the inferior brightness of these planets. The polar diameter of Jupiter is about  $3^{\circ}$  less than the equatorial diameter, while that of Saturn is about  $2^{\circ}$  less. The diameters given for the rings of Saturn are those of the major axis (in the plane of the planet's equator) and the minor axis respectively. The former has a small seasonal change due to the slightly varying distance of the Earth from Saturn, but the latter varies from zero when the Earth passes through the ring plane every 15 years to its maximum opening half-way between these periods. The rings were open at their widest extent in the middle of 1973.

TIME

From the earliest ages, the natural division of time into recurring periods of day and night has provided the practical time scale for the everyday activities of mankind. Indeed, if any alternative means of time measurement is adopted, it must be capable of adjustment so as to remain in general agreement with the natural time scale defined by the diurnal rotation of the Earth on its axis. Ideally the rotation should be measured against a fixed frame of reference; in practice it must be measured against the background provided by the celestial bodies. If the Sun is chosen as the reference point, we obtain Apparent Solar Time, which is the time indicated by a sundial. It is not a uniform time, but is subject to variations which amount to as much as a quarter of an hour in each direction. Such wide variations cannot be tolerated in a practical time scale, and this has led to the concept of Mean Solar Time in which all the days are exactly the same length and equal to the average length of the Apparent Solar Day.

The positions of the stars in the sky are specified in relation to a fictitious reference point in the sky known as the First Point of Aries (or the Vernal Equinox). It is therefore convenient to adopt this same reference point when considering the rotation of the Earth against the background of the stars. The time scale so obtained is known as Apparent Sidereal Time.

Greenwich Mean Time

The daily rotation of the Earth on its axis causes the Sun and the other heavenly bodies to appear to cross the sky from East to West. It is convenient to represent this relative motion as if the Sun really performed a daily circuit around a fixed Earth. Noon in Apparent Solar Time may then be defined as the time at which the Sun transits across the observer's meridian. In Mean Solar Time, noon is similarly defined by the meridian transit of a fictitious Mean Sun moving uniformly in the sky with the same average speed as the true Sun. Mean Solar Time observed on the meridian of the transit circle telescope of the Royal Observatory at Greenwich is called Greenwich Mean Time (G.M.T.). The mean solar day is divided into 24 hours and, for astronomical and other scientific purposes, these are numbered 0 to 23, commencing at midnight. Civil time is usually reckoned in two periods of 12 hours, designated a.m. (before noon) and p.m. (after noon).

Universal Time

Before 1925 January 1 G.M.T. was reckoned in 24 hours commencing at noon: since that date it has been reckoned from midnight. In view of the risk of confusion in the use of the designation G.M.T. before and after 1925, the International Astronomical Union recommended in 1928 that astronomers should, for the present, employ the term Universal Time, U.T. (or Weltzeit, W.Z.) to denote G.M.T. measured from Greenwich Mean Midnight.

In precision work it has now become necessary to take account of small variations, hitherto negligible, in Universal Time. These arise from small irregularities in the rotation of the Earth. Observed astronomical time is designated U.T.0. Observed time corrected for the effects of the motion of the poles (giving rise to a "wandering" in longitude) is designated U.T.1. There is also a seasonal fluctuation in the rate of rotation of the Earth arising from meteorological causes, often called the annual fluctuation. U.T.1 corrected for this effect is designated U.T.2 and provides a time scale free from short-period fluctuations. It is still subject to small secular and irregular changes.

Apparent Solar Time

As has been mentioned, the time shown by a sundial is called Apparent Solar Time. It differs from Mean Solar Time by an amount known as the Equation of Time, which is the total effect of two causes which make the length of the apparent solar day non-uniform. One cause of variation is that the orbit of the Earth is not a circle, but an ellipse, having the Sun at one focus. As a consequence, the angular speed of the Earth in its orbit is not constant; it is greatest at the beginning of January when the Earth is nearest the Sun. The other cause is due to the obliquity of the ecliptic; the plane of the equator (which is at right-angles to the axis of rotation of the Earth) does not coincide with the ecliptic (the plane defined by the apparent annual motion of the Sun around the celestial sphere) but is inclined to it at an angle of  $23^{\circ} 26'$ . As a result, the apparent solar day is shorter than average at the equinoxes and longer at the solstices. From the combined effects of the components due to obliquity and eccentricity, the equation of time reaches its maximum values in February ( $-14$  mins.) and early November ( $+16$  mins.). It has a zero value on four dates during the year, and it is only on these dates (approx. April 15, June 14, Sept. 1, and Dec. 25) that a sundial shows Mean Solar Time.

Sidereal Time

A sidereal day is the duration of a complete rotation of the Earth with reference to the First Point of Aries. The term sidereal (or "star") time is perhaps a little misleading since the time scale so defined is not exactly the same as that which would be defined by successive transits of a selected star, as there is a small progressive motion between the stars and the First Point of Aries due to the precession of the Earth's axis. This makes the length of the sidereal day shorter than the true period of rotation by 0.008 seconds. Superimposed on this steady precessional motion are small oscillations called nutation, giving rise to fluctuations in apparent sidereal time amounting to as much as 1.2 seconds. It is therefore customary to employ Mean Sidereal Time, from which these fluctuations have been removed. The conversion of G.M.T. to Greenwich sidereal time (G.S.T.) may be performed by adding the value of the G.S.T. at  $0^h$  on the day in question (page II of each month) to the G.M.T. converted to sidereal time using the table on p. 146.

Example. To find the G.S.T. at August  $8^d 02^h 41^m 11^s$  G.M.T.

G.S.T. at $0^h$ .. .. .	21	03	45
G.M.T. .. .. .	2	41	11
Acceleration for $2^h$ .. .. .			20
" " $41^m 11^s$ .. .. .			7
Sum = G.S.T. = .. .. .	23	45	23

If the observer is not on the Greenwich meridian then his longitude, measured positively westwards from Greenwich, must be subtracted from the G.S.T. to obtain Local Sidereal Time (L.S.T.). Thus, in the above example, an observer  $5^h$  east of Greenwich, or  $19^h$  west, would find his L.S.T. as  $4^h 45^m 23^s$ .

Ephemeris Time

In the study of the motions of the Sun, Moon and planets, observations taken over an extended period are used in the preparation of tables giving the apparent position of the body each day. A table of this sort is known as an ephemeris, and may be used in the comparison of current observations with tabulated positions. A detailed examination of the observations made over the past 300 years shows that the Sun, Moon and planets appear to depart from their predicted positions by amounts proportional to their mean motions. The only satisfactory explanation is that the time scale to which the observations were referred was not uniform as had been supposed. Since the time scale was based on the rotation of the Earth, it follows that this rotation is subject to irregularities. The fact that the discrepancies between the observed and ephemeris positions were proportional to the mean motions of the bodies made it possible to secure agreement by substituting a revised time scale and recomputing the ephemeris positions. The time scale which brings the ephemeris into agreement with the observations has been named Ephemeris Time (E.T.).

The new unit of time has been defined in terms of the apparent annual motion of the Sun. Thus the second is now defined in terms of the annual motion of the Earth in its orbit around the Sun ( $1/31556925.9747$  of the Tropical Year for 1900 January  $0^d 12^h$  E.T.) instead of in terms of the diurnal rotation of the Earth on its axis ( $1/86400$  of the Mean Solar Day). In many branches of scientific work other than astronomy there has been a demand for a unit of time that is invariable, and the second of Ephemeris time was adopted by the Comité International des Poids et Mesures in 1956. The length of the unit has been chosen to provide general agreement with U.T. throughout the 19th and 20th centuries. During 1983 the estimated difference E.T. - U.T. is 54 seconds. The precise determination of E.T. from astronomical observations is a lengthy process, as the accuracy with which a single observation of the Sun can be made is far less than that obtainable in, for instance, a comparison between clocks. It is therefore necessary to average the observations over an extended period. Largely on account of its faster motion, the position of the Moon may be observed with greater accuracy, and a close approximation to Ephemeris Time may be obtained by comparing observations of the moon with its ephemeris position. Even in this case, however, the requisite standard of accuracy can only be achieved by averaging over a number of years.

Atomic Time

The fundamental standards of time and frequency must be defined in terms of a periodic motion adequately uniform, enduring and susceptible of measurement. This has led in the past to the adoption of standards based on the observed motions in the Solar System. Recent progress has made it possible to consider the use of other natural standards, such as atomic or molecular oscillations. The oscillations so far employed are not in fact continuous periodic motions such as the revolution of the electrons in their orbits around the nuclei. The continuous oscillations are generated in an electrical circuit, the frequency of which is then compared or brought into coincidence with the frequency characteristic of the absorption or emission by the atoms or molecules when they change between two selected energy levels. At the National Physical Laboratory regular comparisons have been made since the middle of 1955 between quartz clocks of high stability and a frequency defined by atoms of caesium. The standard has proved of great value in the precise calibration of frequencies and time intervals: it has also been possible to build up a scale of "atomic time" by using continuously-running quartz clocks calibrated in terms of the caesium frequency standard.

Radio Time Signals

The establishment of a uniform time system by the assessment of the performance of standard clocks in terms of astronomical observations is the work of a national observatory, and standard time is then made generally available by means of radio time signals. In the United Kingdom, the Royal Greenwich Observatory is responsible for the legal standard of time, and controls the "6-pips" radio signals emitted by the British Broadcasting Corporation. Signals by land line from the Observatory correct the Post Office Speaking Clock, TIM.

For survey and scientific purposes in which the highest accuracy is required, special signals are transmitted from the Post Office Radio Station at Rugby. The International Signals, consisting of a five-minute series of pips, one-tenth of a second long, with the pips at the minutes lengthened for identification, are radiated at 02.54-03.00, 08.54-09.00, 14.54-15.00, 20.54-21.00 from GBR (16 kHz) and associated H.F. transmitters. The seconds pulses superposed on the MSF standard frequency transmissions, which consists of five cycles of a 1,000 c.p.s. tone, are derived from the same master control at the transmitting station, and are radiated for ten minutes in each quarter-hour on 2, 5, and 10 MHz for 24 hours per day, and continuously on 60 kHz. The carrier frequencies of all the MSF transmissions, and of GBR, are closely controlled, and measured regularly at the National Physical Laboratory in terms of the caesium atomic resonance.

The new Coordinated Universal Time (U.T.C.) system standard frequency emissions and radio time signals are broadcast on MSF, GBR, and by other national transmitters, eg. by WWV and WWVH in the U.S.A. in conformity with the International Atomic Time Scale in which the time intervals between pips correspond exactly to the seconds defined as follows: "The second is the duration of 9 192 631 770 periods of the radiation corresponding to the transition between the 2 hyperfine levels of the ground state of the caesium 133 atom."

As the rate of rotation of the Earth is variable the time signals will be adjusted by the introduction of a leap second when necessary in order that UTC shall not depart from UT by more than 0.9. For convenience it has been decided to introduce leap seconds, when necessary, on the last second of a month preferably on 31 Dec. and/or 30 June. In the case of a positive leap second 23<sup>h</sup> 59<sup>m</sup> 60<sup>s</sup> will be followed one second later by 0<sup>h</sup> 00<sup>m</sup> 00<sup>s</sup> of the first day of the month. In the case of a negative leap second (required if the Earth were to have a sudden change of rate and begin to gain relative to UTC) 23<sup>h</sup> 59<sup>m</sup> 58<sup>s</sup> will be followed one second later by 0<sup>h</sup> 00<sup>m</sup> 00<sup>s</sup> of the first day of the month.

From 1972 Jan. 1 the six pips on the BBC have consisted of 5 short pips from second 55 to second 59 followed by one lengthened pip, the start of which indicates the exact minute.

SUMMER TIME

In the United Kingdom, Summer Time, one hour in advance of G.M.T. will be kept between 01<sup>h</sup> G.M.T. on the last Sunday in March and 01<sup>h</sup> G.M.T. on the day following the fourth Saturday in October. Thus, in 1983, Summer Time will be in force between March 27 and October 23.

Variations from the standard time of some countries occurs during part of the year: they are decided annually and are usually referred to as Summer Time or Daylight Saving Time. These variations occur in:

The Commonwealth.—Parts of Australia; Bahamas; Canada; Channel Islands; Gibraltar; Hong Kong; New Zealand; Bermuda; Malta.

Foreign Countries.—Albania; Argentina; Austria; Brazil; Bulgaria; Canary Is.; Chile; parts of China; Costa Rica; Cuba; Cyprus Larnaca; Czechoslovakia; Denmark; Dominican Republic; Faroe; Finland; Formosa; France; Germany; Greece; Hungary; Iceland; Israel; Italy; Libya; Macau; Mexico; Morocco; Norway; Pescadores Is.; Poland; Portugal; Romania; Sicily; Sudan; Sweden; Switzerland; Taiwan; Turkey; Uruguay; parts of U.S.A.; U.S.S.R.

In the Dominican Republic, the Irish Republic, and Paraguay, the variation occurs in winter and is called Winter Time.

STANDARD TIME

In the year 1880 it was enacted by statute that the word "time", when it occurred in any legal document relating to Great Britain, was to be interpreted, unless otherwise specifically stated, as the Mean Time of the Greenwich meridian.* Since the year 1883 the system of Standard Time by Zones has been gradually accepted, and now almost throughout the world a Standard Time which differs from that of Greenwich by an integral number of hours, either fast or slow, is used.

The large territories of the United States, Canada and U.S.S.R. are divided into zones approximately  $7\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$  on either side of central meridians. The important ones are given below; there are in addition zones from 5 to 13 hours fast in the U.S.S.R. centred at  $60^{\circ}$  E. to  $180^{\circ}$  E.

THE DATE OR CALENDAR LINE

The line where the change of date occurs is a modification of the 180th meridian, and is drawn so as to include islands of any one group on the same side of the line, or for political reasons. It is indicated by joining up the following nine points:

Lat.	Long.	Lat.	Long.	Lat.	Long.
$60^{\circ}$ S.	$180^{\circ}$	$15^{\circ}$ S.	$172\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ W.	$53^{\circ}$ N.	$170^{\circ}$ E.

SUNRISE AND SUNSET

The local mean time of sunrise or sunset (as defined on page 138) may be found by determining the appropriate hour angle from the table above and applying it to the time of transit given in the ephemeris for each month. The hour angle is negative for sunrise and positive for sunset. A small correction to the hour angle, which always has the effect of increasing it numerically, is necessary to allow for the Sun's semi-diameter (16') and for refraction (34'). This correction may be obtained from Table 2. The resulting local mean time may be converted into the standard time of the country by taking the difference between the longitude of the standard meridian of the country and that of the place, and adding it to the local mean time if the place is west of the standard meridian, and subtracting it if the place is east of the standard meridian.

Example.—Required the N.Z. Mean Time (12h fast on G.M.T.) of sunset on May 24 at Auckland. The latitude is 36° 50' south (or minus) and the longitude 11h 39m east. Taking the declination as +20°.7, we find

MOONRISE AND MOONSET

It is possible to calculate the times of moonrise and moonset using Table 1 though the method is more complicated because the apparent motion of the Moon is much more rapid than that of the Sun.

The parallax of the Moon, about 57', is near to the sum of the semi-diameter and refraction but has the opposite effect on these times. It is thus convenient to neglect all three quantities in the method outlined below.

Notation

- φ = latitude of observer
- λ = longitude of observer (measured positively towards the west)
- T<sub>-1</sub> = time of transit of Moon on previous day
- T<sub>0</sub> = time of transit of Moon on day in question
- T<sub>1</sub> = time of transit of Moon on following day
- δ<sub>0</sub> = approximate declination of Moon
- δ<sub>R</sub> = declination of Moon at moonrise
- δ<sub>S</sub> = declination of Moon at moonset
- h<sub>0</sub> = approximate hour angle of Moon
- h<sub>R</sub> = hour angle of Moon at moonrise
- h<sub>S</sub> = hour angle of Moon at moonset
- t<sub>R</sub> = time of moonrise
- t<sub>S</sub> = time of moonset

Method

1. With arguments φ, δ<sub>0</sub> enter Table 1 on p. 144 to determine h<sub>0</sub> where h<sub>0</sub> is negative for moonrise and positive for moonset.
  - 2. Form approximate times from
    - t<sub>R</sub> = T<sub>0</sub> + λ + h<sub>0</sub>
    - t<sub>S</sub> = T<sub>0</sub> + λ + h<sub>0</sub>
  - 3. Determine δ<sub>R</sub>, δ<sub>S</sub> for times t<sub>R</sub>, t<sub>S</sub> respectively.
  - 4. Re-enter Table 1 on p. 144 with—
    - (a) arguments φ, δ<sub>R</sub> to determine h<sub>R</sub>
    - (b) arguments φ, δ<sub>S</sub> to determine h<sub>S</sub>
  - 5. Form
    - t<sub>R</sub> = T<sub>0</sub> + λ + h<sub>R</sub> + AX
    - t<sub>S</sub> = T<sub>0</sub> + λ + h<sub>S</sub> + AX

where A = (λ + h)

X = (T<sub>0</sub> - T<sub>-1</sub>) if (λ + h) is negative and X = (T<sub>1</sub> - T<sub>0</sub>) if (λ + h) is positive

AX is the respondent in Table 3.

Example.—To find the times of moonrise and moonset at Vancouver (φ = +49°, λ = +8<sup>h</sup> 12<sup>m</sup>) on 1983 October 10. The starting data (from p. 128) are

 T<sub>-1</sub> = 14 29
 T<sub>0</sub> = 15 21
 T<sub>1</sub> = 16 13
 δ = -19°

1. h<sub>0</sub> = 4<sup>h</sup> 26<sup>m</sup>
2. Approximate values
  - t<sub>R</sub> = 10<sup>d</sup> 15<sup>h</sup> 21<sup>m</sup> + 8<sup>h</sup> 12<sup>m</sup> + (-4<sup>h</sup> 26<sup>m</sup>)
  - = 10<sup>d</sup> 19<sup>h</sup> 07<sup>m</sup>
  - t<sub>S</sub> = 10<sup>d</sup> 15<sup>h</sup> 21<sup>m</sup> + 8<sup>h</sup> 12<sup>m</sup> + (+4<sup>h</sup> 26<sup>m</sup>)
  - = 11<sup>d</sup> 03<sup>h</sup> 59<sup>m</sup>
3. δ<sub>R</sub> = -22° 0
 δ<sub>S</sub> = -22° 7
4. h<sub>R</sub> = -4<sup>h</sup> 08<sup>m</sup>
 h<sub>S</sub> = +4<sup>h</sup> 04<sup>m</sup>
5. t<sub>R</sub> = 10<sup>d</sup> 15<sup>h</sup> 21<sup>m</sup> + 8<sup>h</sup> 12<sup>m</sup> + (-4<sup>h</sup> 08<sup>m</sup>) + 8<sup>m</sup>

To get the L.M.T. of the phenomenon the longitude is subtracted from the G.M.T. thus

To convert an interval of mean time to the corresponding interval of sidereal time, enter the acceleration table with the given mean time (taking the hours and the minutes and seconds separately) and add the acceleration obtained to the given mean time. To convert an interval of sidereal time to the corresponding interval of mean time, take out the retardation for the given sidereal time and subtract.

The columns for the minutes and seconds of the argument are in the form known as Critical Tables. To use these tables, find in the appropriate left-hand column the two entries between which the given number of minutes and seconds lies; the quantity in the right-hand column between these two entries is the required acceleration or retardation. Thus the acceleration for 11<sup>m</sup>26<sup>s</sup> (which lies between the entries 9<sup>m</sup>07<sup>s</sup> and 15<sup>m</sup>13<sup>s</sup>) is 2<sup>s</sup>. If the given number of minutes and seconds is a tabular entry, the required acceleration or retardation is the entry in the right-hand column above the given tabular entry; e.g. the retardation for 45<sup>m</sup>46<sup>s</sup> is 7<sup>s</sup>.

Given S.T. ....	14	27	35
Retardation for 14 <sup>h</sup> .....			2 18

Corresponding M.T. .... 14 25 12

For further explanation, see p. 141.

THE SUMMER TIME ACTS

In 1916 an Act ordained that during a defined period of that year the legal time for general purposes in Great Britain should be one hour in advance of Greenwich Mean Time. The practice was stabilized (until the war) by the Summer Time Acts, 1922 to 1925, which enacted that "For the purposes of this Act, the period of summer time shall be taken to be the period beginning at two o'clock, Greenwich Mean Time, in the morning of the next day following the third Saturday in April, or, if that day is Easter Day, the day next following the second Saturday in April and ending at two o'clock, Greenwich Mean Time, in the morning of the day next following the first Saturday in October."

During the Second World War the duration of Summer Time was extended and in the years 1941-45 and in 1947, Double Summer Time (2 hrs. in advance of Greenwich Mean Time) was in force. Summer

Time was extended in each year from 1948 to 1952 and again in 1961-1964, by Order in Council.

The duration of Summer Time during the last few years is given in the following table.

1958 Apr. 20—Oct. 5	1972 Mar. 19—Oct. 29

CELESTIAL PHENOMENA FOR OBSERVATION IN 1983

ECLIPSES, 1983

There will be three eclipses during 1983, two of the Sun and one of the Moon. Penumbral eclipses are not mentioned in this section as they are difficult to observe.

1. A total eclipse of the Sun on June 11. The path of totality begins in the south-western part of the Indian Ocean, crosses south-eastern Indonesia, the southern part of New Guinea and ends among the islands of the Republic of Vanuatu (the New Hebrides) in the Pacific Ocean. The partial phase is visible from Madagascar, Sri Lanka, south-eastern Asia, Australia, Tasmania, part of New Zealand and part of Antarctica. The eclipse begins at 02<sup>h</sup> 10<sup>m</sup> and ends at 07<sup>h</sup> 16<sup>m</sup>; the total phase begins at 03<sup>h</sup> 11<sup>m</sup> and ends at 06<sup>h</sup> 14<sup>m</sup>. The maximum duration of totality is 5<sup>m</sup> 11<sup>s</sup>.

2. A partial eclipse of the Moon on June 25. The beginning of the umbral phase is visible from the western part of the Atlantic Ocean, South America, North America except the northern part, the Pacific Ocean, Antarctica, New Zealand and the extreme eastern part of Australia; the end is visible in South America except the north-eastern part, North America except the north-eastern part, the Pacific Ocean, Antarctica, New Zealand and Australia except the extreme western part. The eclipse begins at 07<sup>h</sup> 14<sup>m</sup> and ends at 09<sup>h</sup> 30<sup>m</sup>. At the time of maximum eclipse 0.34 of the Moon's diameter is obscured.

3. An annular eclipse of the Sun on December 4. It is visible as a partial eclipse in the north-eastern part of South America, the extreme south-eastern part of Canada, the southern tip of Greenland, Iceland, Europe except the northern part (but including the British Isles), Africa except the extreme south and the south-western part of Asia. The eclipse begins at 09<sup>h</sup> 41<sup>m</sup> and ends at 15<sup>h</sup> 20<sup>m</sup>. The annular phase begins in the North Atlantic Ocean, crosses Africa near the equator and ends in the north-eastern part of Somalia.

Observers in the British Isles will only be able to witness a small partial eclipse as the Moon obscures a small portion of the southern limb of the Sun. From Greenwich the eclipse will be seen to start at 11<sup>h</sup> 40<sup>m</sup> and end at 12<sup>h</sup> 28<sup>m</sup>. Both duration and magnitude decrease as one goes further north and at Edinburgh it starts at 11<sup>h</sup> 40<sup>m</sup> and ends at 12<sup>h</sup> 16<sup>m</sup>.

LUNAR OCCULTATIONS

The list on the opposite page includes most of the occultations visible under favourable conditions in the British Isles. No occultation is included unless the star is at least 10° above the horizon and the Sun sufficiently far below the horizon to permit the star to be seen with the naked eye or in a small telescope. The altitude limit is reduced from 10° to 2° for stars and planets brighter than magnitude 2.0 and such occultations are also predicted in daylight.

The column Phase shows whether a disappearance (1) or reappearance (2) is to be observed. The column headed "El. of Moon" gives the elongation of the Moon from the Sun, in degrees. The elongation increases from 0° at New Moon to 180° at Full Moon and on to 360° (or 0°) at New Moon again. Times and position angles (P), reckoned from the north point in the direction north, east, south, west, are given for Greenwich (Lat. 51° 30', Long. 0°) and Edinburgh (Lat. 56° 00', Long. 3° 12' west).

The coefficients a and b are the variations in the G.M.T. for each degree of longitude (positive to the west) and latitude (positive to the north) respectively: they enable approximate times (to within about 1<sup>m</sup> generally) to be found for any point in the British Isles. If the point of observation is  $\Delta\lambda$  degrees west and  $\Delta\phi$  degrees north, the approximate time is found by adding  $a.\Delta\lambda + b.\Delta\phi$  to the given G.M.T.

As an illustration the reappearance of Jupiter on September 12 at Liverpool will be found from both Greenwich and Edinburgh.

	Greenwich	Edinburgh
Longitude .....	0-0	+3-2
Long. of Liverpool .....	+3-0	+3-0
$\Delta\lambda$ .....	+3-0	-0-2
Latitude .....	+51-5	+56-0
Lat. of Liverpool .....	+53-4	+53-4
$\Delta\phi$ .....	+1-9	-2-6
	h m	h m
G.M.T. ....	19 34.7	19 24.5
a . $\Delta\lambda$ .....	-3-6	+0-2
b . $\Delta\phi$ .....	-2-9	+3-6
	19 28.2	19 28.3

If the occultation is given for one station but not the other, the reason for the suppression is given by the following code.

N = star not occulted.

A = star's altitude less than 10° (2° for bright stars and planets).

S = Sun not sufficiently below the horizon.

G = occultation is of very short duration.

It will be noticed that in some cases the coefficients a and b are not given: this is because the occultation is so short that prediction for other places by means of these coefficients would not be reliable.

$\alpha$ Andromedæ Alpheratz .....	2.1	0	07.5	+29 00	A0p	The positions of heavenly bodies on the celestial sphere are defined by two co-ordinates, right ascension and declination, which are analogous to longitude and latitude on the surface of the Earth. If we imagine the plane of the terrestrial equator extended indefinitely, it will cut the celestial sphere in a great circle known as the celestial equator. Similarly the plane of the Earth's orbit, when extended, cuts in the great circle called the ecliptic. The two intersections of these circles are known as the First Point of Aries and the First Point of Libra. If from any star a perpendicular be drawn to the celestial equator, the length of this perpendicular is the star's declination. The arc, measured eastwards along the equator from the First Point of Aries to the foot of this perpendicular, is the right ascension. An alternative definition of right ascension is that it is the angle at the celestial pole (where the Earth's axis, if prolonged, would meet the sphere) between the great circles to the First Point of Aries and to the star.

$\alpha$ Virginis Spica .....	1.0	13 24.3	-11 04	B2	The brightness of a heavenly body is denoted by its magnitude. Omitting the exceptionally bright stars Sirius and Canopus , the twenty brightest stars are of the first magnitude, while the faintest stars visible to the naked eye are of the sixth magnitude. The magnitude scale is a precise one, as a difference of five magnitudes represents a ratio of 100 to 1 in brightness. Typical second magnitude stars are Polaris and the stars in the Belt of Orion. The scale is most easily fixed in memory by comparing the stars with Norton's Star Atlas (see page 138). The stars Sirius and Canopus and the planets Venus and Jupiter are so bright that their magnitudes are expressed by negative numbers. A small telescope will show stars down to the ninth or tenth magnitude, while stars fainter than the twentieth magnitude may be photographed by long exposures with the largest telescopes.

THE EARTH

The shape of the Earth is that of an oblate spheroid or solid of revolution whose meridian sections are ellipses not differing much from circles, whilst the sections at right angles are circles. The length of the equatorial axis is about 12,756 kilometres, and that of the polar axis is 12,714 kilometres. The mean density of the Earth is 5.5 times that of water, although that of the surface layer is less. The Earth and Moon revolve about their common centre of gravity in a lunar month; this centre in turn revolves round the Sun in a plane known as the ecliptic, that passes through the Sun's centre. The Earth's equator is inclined to this plane at an angle of 23½°. This tilt is the cause of the seasons. In mid-latitudes, and when the Sun is high above the Equator, not only does the high noon altitude make the days longer, but the Sun's rays fall more directly on the Earth's surface; these effects combine to produce summer. In equatorial regions the noon altitude is large throughout the year, and there is little variation in the length of the day. In higher latitudes the noon altitude is lower, and the days in summer are appreciably longer than those in winter.

The average velocity of the Earth in its orbit is 30 kilometres a second. It makes a complete rotation on its axis in about 23<sup>h</sup> 56<sup>m</sup> of mean time, which is the sidereal day. Because of its annual revolution round the Sun, the rotation with respect to the Sun, or the solar day, is more than this by about four minutes (see p. 140). The extremity of the axis of rotation, or the North Pole of the Earth, is not rigidly fixed, but wanders over an area roughly 20 metres in diameter.

TERRESTRIAL MAGNETISM

A magnetic compass points along the horizontal component of a magnetic line of force. These directions converge on the "magnetic dip-poles". At these poles a freely suspended magnetized needle would become vertical. Not only do the positions of these poles change with time, but their exact location is ill-defined, particularly so in the case of the north dip-pole where the lines of force, on the north side of it, instead of converging radially, tend to bunch into a channel. Although it is therefore unrealistic to attempt to specify the locations of the dip-poles exactly, the present adopted positions are  $77^{\circ}3$  N.,  $101^{\circ}8$  W. and  $65^{\circ}6$  S.,  $139^{\circ}4$  E. The two magnetic dip-poles are thus not antipodal, the line joining them passing the centre of the Earth at a distance of about 1,200 kilometres. The distances of the magnetic dip-poles from the north and south geographical poles are about 1,300 and 2,700 kilometres respectively.

There is also a "magnetic equator", at all points of which the vertical force is zero and a magnetized needle remains horizontal. This line runs between  $2^{\circ}$  and  $10^{\circ}$  north of the geographical equator in the eastern hemisphere, turns sharply south off the West African coast, and crosses South America through Brazil, Bolivia and Peru; it recrosses the geographical equator in mid-Pacific.

Reference has already been made to secular changes in the Earth's field. The following table indicates the changes in magnetic declination (or variation of the compass). Similar, though much smaller, changes have occurred in "dip" or magnetic inclination. Secular changes differ throughout the world. Although the London observations strongly suggest a cycle of several hundred years, an exact repetition is unlikely.

London		Greenwich
1580	$11^{\circ} 15' E.$	1850	$22^{\circ} 24' W.$
1622	$5 56 E.$	1900	$16 29 W.$
1665	$1 22 W.$	1925	$13 10 W.$
1730	$13 00 W.$	1950	$9 07 W.$
1773	$21 09 W.$	1975	$6 39 W.$

In order that up-to-date information on the variation of the compass may be available, many governments publish magnetic charts on which there are lines (called isogonic) passing through all places at which specified values of declination will be found at the date of the chart.

In the British Isles, isogonic lines now run approximately north-east to south-west. Though there are considerable local deviations due to geographical causes, a rough value of magnetic declination may be obtained by assuming that at  $50^{\circ}$  N. on the meridian of Greenwich, the value in 1982 is  $4^{\circ} 54'$  west and allowing an increase of  $14'$  for each degree of latitude northwards and one of  $31'$  for each degree of longitude westwards. For example, at  $53^{\circ}$  N.,  $5^{\circ}$  W., declination will be about  $4^{\circ} 54' + 42' + 155'$ , i.e.  $8^{\circ} 14'$  west. The average annual change at the present time is about  $12'$  decrease.

The number of magnetic observatories now approaches 200—widely scattered over the globe. There are three in Great Britain maintained by the Government: at Hartland, North Devon, at Eskdalemuir in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, and at Lerwick, Shetland Islands. Some recent annual mean values of the magnetic elements for Hartland are given below.

The normal worldwide terrestrial magnetic field corresponds approximately to that of a very strong small bar magnet near the centre of the Earth but with appreciable smooth spatial departures. The origin and slow secular change of the normal field is not yet fully understood but is generally ascribed to electric currents associated with fluid motions within the Earth's core. Superposed on the normal field are local and regional anomalies whose magnitudes may in places exceed that of the normal field; these are due to the influence of mineral deposits in the Earth's crust. A small proportion of the field is of external origin, mostly associated with electric currents in the ionosphere. The configuration of the external field and the ionization of the atmosphere depend on the incident particle and radiation flux. There are, therefore, short-term and non-periodic as well as diurnal, 27-day, seasonal and 11-year periodic changes in the magnetic field, dependent upon the position of the Sun and the degree of solar activity.

Magnetic Storms. Occasionally—sometimes with great suddenness—the Earth's magnetic field is subject for several hours to marked disturbance. In extreme cases, departures in field intensity as much as one tenth the normal value are experienced. In many instances, such disturbances are accompanied by widespread displays of aurorae, marked changes in the incidence of cosmic rays, an increase in the reception of "noise" from the Sun at radio frequencies together with rapid changes in the ionosphere and induced electric currents within the earth which adversely affect radio and telegraphic communications. The disturbances are generally ascribed to flux changes in the stream of neutral and ionized particles which emanates from the Sun and through which the Earth is continuously passing. Some of these changes are associated with visible eruptions on the Sun, usually in the region of sun-spots. There is a marked tendency for disturbances to recur after intervals of about 27 days, the apparent period of rotation of the Sun on its axis, which is consistent with the sources being located on particular areas of the Sun.

SATELLITE ORBITS

To consider the orbit of an artificial satellite it is best to imagine that one is looking at the Earth from a distant point in space. The Earth would then be seen to be rotating about its axis inside the orbit described by the rapidly revolving satellite. The inclination of a satellite orbit to the Earth's equator (which generally remains almost constant throughout the satellite's lifetime) gives at once the maximum range of latitudes over which the satellite passes. Thus a satellite whose orbit has an inclination of  $53^\circ$  will pass overhead all latitudes between S,  $53^\circ$  and N,  $53^\circ$ , but would never be seen in the zenith of any place nearer the poles than these latitudes. If we consider a particular place on the earth, whose latitude is less than the inclination of the satellite's orbit then the Earth's rotation carries this place under first the northbound part of the orbit and then, later on, under the southbound position of the orbit, these two occurrences being always less than 12 hours apart for satellites moving in direct orbits (i.e. to the east). For satellites in retrograde orbits the words "northbound" and "southbound" should be interchanged in the preceding statement. As the value of the latitude of the observer increases and approaches the value of the inclination of the orbit, so this interval gets shorter until (when the latitude is equal to the inclination) only one overhead passage occurs each day.

SATELLITE LAUNCHINGS

Apart from their names, e.g. Cosmos 6 Rocket or Injun 3, the satellites are also classified according to their date of launch. Thus 1961  $\alpha$  refers to the launching of Samos 2. The next satellite launching was 1961  $\beta$  and so on. A number following the Greek letter is intended to indicate the relative brightness of the satellites put in orbit. From the beginning of 1963 the Greek letters are replaced by numbers and the numbers by roman letters e.g. 1963-01A. In this table are given the designation and names of the main objects in orbit (in the order A, B, C . . . etc.), the launch date and some initial orbital data. These are the inclination to the equator ( $i$ ), the nodal period of revolution ( $P$ ), the eccentricity,  $e$ , and the perigee height. The names of those satellites which have already disintegrated in the Earth's atmosphere or returned to the Earth's surface are printed in italics.

OBSERVATION OF SATELLITES

The regression of the orbit around the Earth causes alternate periods of visibility and invisibility, though this is of little concern to the radio or radar observer. To the visual observer the following cycle of events normally occurs (though the cycle may start in any position): invisibility, morning observations before dawn, invisibility, evening observations after dusk, invisibility, morning observations before dawn, and so on. With reasonably high satellites and for observers in high latitudes around the summer solstice the evening observations follow the morning observations without interruption as sunlight passing over the polar regions can still illuminate satellites which are passing over temperate latitudes at local midnight. At the moment all satellites rely on sunlight to make them visible though a satellite with a flashing light has been suggested for a future launching. The observer must be in darkness or twilight in order to make any useful observations and the durations of twilight and the sunrise, sunset times given on page II of each month will be a useful guide.

Some of the satellites are visible to the naked eye and much interest has been aroused by the spectacle of a bright satellite disappearing into the Earth's shadow. The event is even more fascinating telescopically as the disappearance occurs gradually as the satellite traverses the Earth's penumbral shadow, and during the last few seconds before the eclipse is complete the satellite may change colour (under suitable atmospheric conditions) from yellow to red. This is because the last rays of sunlight are refracted through the denser layers of our atmosphere before striking the satellite.

Some satellites rotate about one or more axes so that a periodic variation in brightness is observed. This was particularly noticeable in several of the U.S.S.R. satellites.

Satellite research has already provided some interesting results. Among them may be mentioned a revised value of the Earth's oblateness. 1/298-2, and the discovery of the Van Allen radiation belts.

ROYAL OBSERVATORIES

Royal Greenwich Observatory Herstmonceux, East Sussex

The Royal Observatory was established at Greenwich in 1675 by Charles II for improving methods of navigation. Latterly the growth of London, with its smoke and bright lights, seriously hampered astronomical observations there, and it was decided in 1946 to move the telescopes to Herstmonceux Castle in Sussex. The removal was completed by 1958. The meridian of zero longitude still passes through the old site, which now houses the Department of Navigation and Astronomy of the National Maritime Museum.

At the Observatory astronomical measurements are made of the positions, motions and distances of the heavenly bodies, and of such physical characteristics as their luminosities, masses and temperatures. Two meridian instruments and six equatorially-mounted telescopes are devoted to this work. The Isaac Newton telescope has been removed from Herstmonceux and is being installed on the island of La Palma in the Canaries. The Observatory is responsible for the time service of the United Kingdom and the time zones of the world are based on Greenwich Mean Time.

H.M. Nautical Almanac Office

The Nautical Almanac was first published for 1767 by the Board of Longitude. The Office is now a department of the Royal Greenwich Observatory. Annual publications—Astronomical Almanac, Nautical Almanac, Air Almanac, Star Almanac.

Royal Observatory Blackford Hill, Edinburgh

The Observatory was founded by the Astronomical Institution in 1818 and its Royal Charter dates from 1822. Its endowments include the Crawford Library of historical books and manuscripts. It is now responsible for some major national astronomical facilities funded by the Science and Engineering Research Council, including a 1.2 m Schmidt telescope in Australia, a 3.8 m infrared telescope in Hawaii and COSMOS, a fast automatic plate measuring machine. The Observatory is also part of the U.K. Starlink network for astronomical image and data processing. The Observatory specializes in the development of advanced technologies and the application of these to studies of the properties of matter in extreme environments in space. The Astronomy Department of Edinburgh University is housed in the Observatory. Director and Astronomer Royal for Scotland, Prof. M. S. Longair.

FUEL AND POWER

ELECTRICITY SUPPLY

England and Wales

In the year ended March 31, 1982, the electricity industry sold 196,163 million units to all consumers, a reduction of 0.1 per cent over 1980-81. Average price per unit to consumers was 4.068p compared with 3.586p in 1980-81. At the end of the year there were 20,663,882 consumers, 0.70 per cent more than at March 31, 1981.

75,274 million units were supplied to industry (a decrease of 1.7 per cent), 72,143 million to domestic users (0.2 per cent more) and 39,382 million to commercial users (2.9 per cent more), 14,651 million units were sold on off-peak tariffs, a decrease of 1.2 per cent over 1980-81.

On March 31, 1982, the Central Electricity Generating Board had 108 power stations (1981, 128) with a maximum output capacity of 55,185 MW, a decrease of 2.68 per cent in capacity over 1981. In 1981-82, 2,396 MW of new plant was commissioned. C.E.G.B. power stations supplied 210,000 million kWh in 1981-82, 0.6 per cent less than in 1980-81. Maximum simultaneous demand met during the year was 42,597 MW (1980-81, 42,600).

Transmission lines (double and single circuit) in service at the end of the year totalled 7,757 route km., and distribution lines 600,697 circuit km.

The industry employed 146,655 persons at March 31, 1982, 8,255 less than in 1980-81.

BRITISH RAILWAYS IN 1981

The British Railways Board was set up, along with our other separate nationalized transport undertakings, by the terms of the Transport Act, 1962. This Act dissolved the British Transport Commission and shared its assets between the new bodies which assumed their responsibilities on January 1, 1963. Under the Act the finances of the railways were reconstructed and previous restrictions were modified to give them greater commercial freedom than they had enjoyed in the past.

The Transport Act of 1968 reduced the railways' commencing debt and enabled the Secretary of State for the Environment to make grants for the maintenance of unremunerative passenger services.

The Railways Act of 1974 further reduced the Board's capital debt but increased its borrowing powers. It also introduced a new system of financial support in accordance with E.E.C. regulations; the Secretary of State is authorized to impose general obligations on the Board in respect of passenger services and is empowered to compensate the Board for meeting these obligations. The Secretary of State's power to make grants for unremunerative passenger services was withdrawn.

For the purposes of management and operation the railways are divided into Regions. They cover the following areas:

1. London Midland Region—bounded by a line joining Carlisle, Oldham, Nottingham, Bedford, London, Banbury, Kidderminster, Aberystwyth.
2. Western Region—west of a line joining Yeovil, Westbury, Reading, London and the southern border of the L.M. Region.
3. Southern Region—south of a line joining Dorchester, Salisbury, London and the Thames.
4. Eastern Region—east of a line joining London, Peterborough, Sheffield, Bradford and Carlisle.
5. Scottish Region—north of a line joining Carlisle and Berwick.

Staff.—On Dec. 31, 1981, British Rail employed a total staff of 170,397 compared with 178,059 on Dec. 31, 1980.

Financial Results, 1981.—The Profit and Loss Account for 1981 showed a deficit of £37,200,000, compared with one of £76,900,000 for 1980 while the railway working surplus (before taking interest charges or revenue from other activities into account) was £25,200,000, compared with a loss of £28,700,000 for the previous year.

OPERATING STATISTICS

At the end of 1981, British Rail had 26,570 miles of standard gauge lines and sidings in use, representing 10,831 miles of route of which 2,317 miles were electrified. Standard rail on main line has a weight of 110 lbs. per yard. British Rail had 3,131 locomotives (diesel and diesel electric, 2,864 and electric, 267); 3,096 diesel multiple-unit vehicles, 7,306 electric multiple-unit vehicles and 5,070 locomotive-hauled passenger carriages with a capacity of 1,043,675 seats or berths in 1981. Loaded train miles run in passenger service totalled 208,889,000. 718,488,000 passenger journeys were made during the year, including 322,525,000 made by holders of season tickets. The average distance of each passenger journey on ordinary fare was 34.9 miles; and on season ticket, 16.4 miles. Passenger stations in use in 1981 numbered 2,361 and freight stations 378.

Freight.—There were 87,955 freight-vehicles and 2,796 other vehicles in the non-passenger-carrying stock. 95,152,000 tonnes of coal and coke were carried in 1981, 18,187,000 tonnes of iron and steel and 33,828,000 tonnes of other traffic. Loaded train miles run in freight service totalled 30,417,000.

ROADS

On April 1, 1981, the total mileage of public roads in Great Britain, excluding green lanes, was 212,501 of which 161,649 were in England, 31,049 in Scotland and 19,803 in Wales.

Highway Authorities

The powers and responsibilities of highway authorities in England and Wales are set out in the Highways Acts 1980. They are concerned mainly with the construction, improvement and maintenance of highways. The Secretary of State for Transport and the Secretary of State for Wales are the highway authorities for the trunk roads in England and in Wales respectively. (Trunk roads constitute the national system of routes for through traffic and include most motorways.)

Under the Local Government Act 1972, since April 1, 1974, the county councils are the highway authorities for all highways in England (outside Greater London) and Wales, other than trunk roads. However, the district councils have a right to maintain unclassified urban roads, footpaths and bridleways and may under agency arrangements carry out other highway functions on behalf of the county councils. In Greater London the most important non-trunk roads are metropolitan roads, for which the Greater London Council is highway authority. The Common Council of the City of London and the London borough councils are highway authorities for all other non-trunk roads in their areas.

For Scotland there is separate legislation under which the Secretary of State for Scotland is the highway authority for trunk roads. The highway authorities for non-trunk public roads are the Regional and Islands Councils. There are general powers available in the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973, which would enable them if they wished to delegate functions to the District Councils.

On April 1, 1975, a new system of grant-aiding local authority expenditure on transport came into effect. From that date transport expenditure by the G.L.C., and all county councils in England and Wales became eligible for an annual block grant. The grant, known as Transport Supplementary Grant, represents about one-third of Central Government's aid towards all local transport services; the balance being assisted through the rate support grant along with other rate borne expenditure. For the financial year 1982-83 local authorities in England received a total of £456,900,000 in transport supplementary grants.

Motorways

The network in England and Wales is based on five main routes—London-Yorkshire (M1), London-South Wales (M4), Birmingham-Bristol-Exeter (M5), Birmingham-Carlisle (M6) and Lancashire-Yorkshire (M62). Other important motorways in use or under construction include: Medway Towns (M2); London-Basingstoke (M3); London-Cambridge (M11); Rotherham-Goole (M18); London-Folkestone (M20); London orbital route (M25); London-Oxford (M40); North Cheshire (M56); and South Humberside (M180). Motorways in use or under construction in Scotland include: Edinburgh-Glasgow-Greenock (M8); Edinburgh-Stirling (M9); Maryville-Mollisburn (M73); Draffon (Stonehouse)-Maryville (M74); Stirling-Haggs (M80); Friarton Bridge, Perth (M85); Inverkeithing-Perth (M90) and (M80)-Kincardine Bridge (M876).

On April 1, 1981, 1,760 miles of trunk and principal motorway were open to traffic in Great Britain (England 1,520, Scotland 174 and Wales 66), 64 miles were under construction (England 55, Wales 9).

Motor Vehicles

The number of vehicles in Great Britain with current licences in 1981 totalled 19,355,000; cars 15,267,000; motor cycles, scooters and mopeds 1,371,000; public transport vehicles 110,000; goods vehicles 1,652,000; agricultural tractors 365,000. There were 410,000 vehicles exempt from licensing.

Driving Tests

The number of driving tests conducted in Great Britain in the year 1981 was 2,031,300, of which 52.4 per cent resulted in failure.

Expenditure

Expenditure on roads in Great Britain during 1979-80 was £1,610.8m compared with £1,337.6m in 1978-79. The expenditure during 1979-80 may be broken down as follows: New Construction and Improvement £825.1m (Trunk roads £457.1m; Principal and other roads, £368.2m); Maintenance £785.7m (Trunk roads, £136.3m, Principal and other roads, £649.4m); Cleansing, Gritting and Snow-Clearing, and other expenditure. In addition, the cost of Road Lighting was £129.4m, of vehicle parking £63.1m (gross) and of administration £232.1m.

Expenditure on new construction and in improvement of trunk roads (including motorways) in England during 1979-80 was £326.2m. In Scotland and Wales, the figures were £68.1m and £62.8m respectively. Expenditure on new construction and improvement of principal roads in 1979-80 was £182.9m in England, £65.5m in Scotland (part of which covered new construction and improvement on other roads) and £21.0m in Wales.

Road Casualties

In 1981 there were 57 vehicles for every kilometre of road or one vehicle for every 18 metres. Sixteen road users were killed and 874 injured on an average day. Of those killed 39% were car users, 32% pedestrians, 21% motor cyclists. Nine per cent of those killed were children.

TIDAL CONSTANTS

THE TIME OF HIGH WATER at the undermentioned Ports and Places may be approximately found by taking the appropriate Time of High Water at the Standard Port (as shown on pp. 172, 173, etc.) and adding thereto the quantities annexed. The columns headed "Springs" and "Neaps" show the height of the tide above datum for Mean High Water Springs and Mean High Water Neaps respectively.

Tidal data is no longer available for a number of places which formerly appeared in the list below. These places (with the name of the substitute now recorded) are: Air Point (Mostyn Quay); Ardrishaig (East Loch Tarbert); Arisaig (Loch Moidart); Ayr Pt., I.o.M. (Peel), Beachy Head (Eastbourne); Beaumaris (Menai Bridge); Brieile (Scheveningen); Broughty Ferry (Newburgh); Burryport (Whiteford Lighthouse); Caen (Cayeux); Caernarvon (Llanddwyd Isl.); Dumbarton (Bowling); Fareham (Itchenor); Fifeness (Anstruther Easter); Glasson Dock (Tarn Pt.); Gravesend (Tilbury); Greenwich (R. Albert Dock); Hythe (Totland Bay); Lancaster (Duddon Bar); Lynmouth (Porlock Bay); Nash Pt. (Chepstow); Needles Pt. (Freshwater Bay); Neath (Porthcawl); Nore Lt. (Chatham); Port Harrington (Hestan Islet); Portishead (Avonmouth); St. Agnes (Coverack); St. Mary's (Sennen Cove); Start Pt. (Lulworth Cove); Stockton (Seaham); Sutton Bridge (Blacktoft); Torbay (Torquay); Worms Head (Ferryside); Honfleur Harbour (Duclair).

NAUTICAL MEASURES

Distance is measured in nautical (or sea) miles. The nautical mile is traditionally defined as the length of a minute of arc of a great circle of the earth; but as this length varies in different latitudes (owing to the fact that the earth is not a perfect sphere), 6,080 feet, a "rounded off value" of the mean length, has been adopted in British practice as the standard length of the nautical mile. On this basis 33 nautical miles exactly equal 38 statute miles; the statute (land) mile contains 5,280 feet. A cable, as a measure used by seamen, is 600 feet (100 fathoms) approximately one-tenth of a nautical mile. Soundings at sea are recorded in fathoms (6 feet); 100 fathoms = 1 cable length; 10 cables = 1 nautical mile.

NOTE.—The British standard nautical mile of 6,080 feet is now obsolete. The international nautical mile of 1,852 metres was adopted in the Hydrographic Department in 1970. Also, the cable and the fathom are obsolescent. Distances are tending to be expressed in decimal parts of a sea mile, or in metres, rather than cables. Depths are expressed in metres on all new Admiralty charts.

Speed is measured in nautical miles per hour, called knots. A knot is a measure of speed and is not used to express distance. A ship moving at the rate of 30 nautical miles per hour is said to be "doing 30 knots" and as the nautical mile is longer than the land or statute mile this represents a land speed of over 34½ miles per hour.

Net tonnage.—The gross tonnage less certain deductions for crew space, engine room, water ballast and other spaces not used for passengers or cargo.

Gross tonnage.—The total volume of all the enclosed spaces of a vessel, the unit of measurement being a ton of 100 cubic feet.

TIME MEASURES

Kelvin (1883) estimated the age of the earth's crust at 20–400 million years. Study of radio-activity has since shown cooling to have been slower. Holmes and others gave 1,500–2,000 million years as the age of the oldest known rocks. Jeffreys suggests an age not exceeding 8,000 million years for the separate existence of the earth, which, probably with other related planets, separated from the sun after a star-collision. Very early rocks, almost without traces of fossils, are variously named in North America and Europe and account for a period down to about 5,000 million years ago.

PALÆOZOIC (Old Animal Life) PERIODS include:—

Cambrian, Ordovician and Silurian rocks, all named from Wales (Cambria, Ordovices, Silures, the two latter ancient Celtic peoples). These rocks account for about 200 million years and there then followed a major phase of mountain-building, called Caledonian because studied early in Scotland, characterized by N.E.–S.W. lines of hills and valleys in several areas.

Devonian, including the Old Red Sandstone.

Carboniferous, including Mountain Limestone, Millstone Grit and Coal Measures.

These rocks account for about 100 million years and then there followed a major phase of mountain-building called Hercynian because widespread in W. Germany and adjacent areas. In Britain there are E.–W. lines of hills and valleys, and some N.–S.

MESOZOIC (Middle Forms of Life) PERIODS include:—

Permian rocks, widespread in Perm district, U.S.S.R. Triassic, including New Red Sandstone. Jurassic, important in the Jura Mts. Cretaceous, including the Greensands and the Chalk of England. In the Mesozoic, modern large land groups of animals, reptiles, birds and mammals first appear, but almost no modern genera or species of animals are known.

CAINOZOIC or CENOZOIC (Recent forms of Life) PERIODS include:—

Eocene. A few existing genera or species. Oligocene. A minority of existing forms. Miocene. Approach to a balance of existing and extinct forms. Pliocene. A majority of existing forms. Pleistocene. A very large majority of existing forms. Holocene. Existing forms only, save for a few exterminated by man. In the last 50 million years, from the Miocene through the Pliocene, the Alpine-Himalayan and the circum-Pacific phases of mountain building reached their climax.

During the Pleistocene period ice sheets repeatedly locked up masses of water as land ice, its weight depressed the land, but the locking up of water lowered sea-level by 100–200 metres. Milankovitch has worked out variations of radiation theoretically receivable from the sun and has reached conclusions not very markedly different as to the dates from those of Penck who studied sediments, and both can fit into Deperet's scheme based on study of river terraces. Milankovitch gives 600,000 years for the Pleistocene.

Phases of the Pleistocene:—

(a) Early Glaciations (probably 2), Gunz glaciations of Penck's Alpine series. About 600 to 500 thousand years ago.

(b) An interglacial phase with high sea level, Milazian terraces (of Deperet's series) around the Mediterranean. About 500,000 years ago.

(c) A second pair of Glaciations, the Mindel of Penck's series. About 500 to rather before 400 thousand years ago.

(d) A long interglacial phase with high sea level, but less high than during (b). Tyrrhenian terraces around the Mediterranean. From about 400 to about 200 thousand years ago.

(e) The penultimate series of glaciations (probably 3), the Riss of Penck's series. About 200 to 150 thousand years ago.

(f) An interglacial phase with fairly high sea level, less high than during (d). Monastirian terraces around the Mediterranean. From about 150 to about 120 thousand years ago.

(g) The ultimate series of glaciations (probably 3, preceded perhaps by a cool phase), the Wurm of Penck's series. From about 115 to rather more than 20 thousand years ago.

(h) The last glacial retreat merging into the Holocene period about 10,000 or 8,000 years ago.

MAN IN THE PLEISTOCENE

In the East African Miocene fragmentary remains of apes with possible human links in thigh bone characters have been found by Hopwood and Leakey.

In S. Africa at Taungs, Sterkfontein and Kromdraai have been found remains of Australopithecus, Plesianthropus and Paranthropus, possibly linked with early man in limb characters and some features of skull and teeth though the brains are small and rather ape-like. The cave deposits in which they occur are supposed to be late Pliocene or early Pleistocene.

Java and Peking finds began with Dubois' discovery (1892) of an imperfect skull cap, some teeth and a possibly related femur indicating the erect posture. Later finds by von Koenigswald and by Weidenreich (1937-41) have emphasized the human relationship of the Java specimens, and also give evidence of gigantism (the name Meganthropus has been used). The specimens are usually given a Middle Pleistocene age. Oppenorth (1932) discovered robust skulls and human Pleistocene bones on a terrace of the Solo river, Java. Twelve specimens from Chou Kou Tien near Peking studied by Black and Weidenreich and called Sinanthropus are broadly like the Java finds; the name Pithecanthropus had better be used for all.

A jaw from Mauer, Heidelberg, found 1902, and dated to the mid Pleistocene is very large but human in form. A skull cap from Neanderthal near Düsseldorf, Germany, has been under discussion for 100 years. It and later found congeners belong to the onset of the 4th series of Glaciations (Penck's Wurm). The best preserved of these skulls is that of La Chapelle aux Saints (France) with very strong brow-ridges. Related skulls of rather earlier date from Steinheim, Ehringsdorf, Krapina and elsewhere are less specialized and more akin to modern man. Skulls from Sacco Pastore and Circeo in Italy are related to the Neanderthal group.

Mt. Carmel has yielded to Professor Dorothy Garrod and Dr. McCown several mid- or late-Pleistocene specimens apparently related both to modern types and to the Neanderthal group.

A skull from Galilee, and a skull from Kabwe (formerly Broken Hill), Zambia, are related to the Neanderthal group.

Oakley has estimated the age of Pleistocene fossil bones from their fluorine content. The back part of a skull from Swanscombe, N. Kent, has in this way been dated to the mid Pleistocene. Its discoverer, Marston, has won widespread support for his view linking it with modern types.

Controversy over the Piltdown skull and jaw is ended. The skull was dated by Oakley's method as late Pleistocene, or later, so the old name Eoanthropus is inappropriate. The ape-like jaw was found to be modern and to have nothing to do with the skull.

With the last retreat of the ice sheets it seems that the Neanderthal group, and probably the Pithecanthropus group, became extinct. Well-known specimens of man of modern type with diversity of form have been found at Combe Capelle, Cro-Magnon, Chancelade and elsewhere in the later Pleistocene in France and others in Czechoslovakia.

HUMAN CULTURAL STAGES

Until about 8 or 7 thousand years ago men lived by hunting and collecting. In the middle of the Pleistocene they already made finely shaped hand axes (Abbevillean and Acheulian) from stone cores by chipping off flakes, using flint, chert, obsidian, rhyolite, quartzite, etc. in many regions, and these cultures spread from Africa to Spain, France and Britain during some interglacial periods. Apparently the men hunted and made pitfalls for animals as Leakey has shown at Olorogessailie in Kenya, while women and children collected. Fire was used very early. In the continental interior of Eurasia rough stone flakes were long used rather than shaped stone cores and apparently in cold periods at any rate this culture spread west to Britain. In the later part of the Riss-Wurm interglacial, stone flakes became finer especially in regions where contact was made with makers of core-tools, and in some groups both cores and flakes were used.

With the last retreat of the ice-sheets stone flakes became the dominant tools, with diverse types suited to scraping, boring, sawing, etc.—Aurignacian, followed in France by Solutrian, in which long leaf-like flakes were treated as cores and shaped very skilfully by pressing off flakes. The Magdalenian stage next following used flakes but specialized in implements of bone, horn and ivory. In some areas the Aurignacian grades into the Magdalenian and this seems to be largely the case in parts of Britain. All the above cultures are often grouped as Palæolithic.

About 8 or 7 thousand years ago people in S.W. Asia began to cultivate cereals on river mud laid down by annual floods, thus keeping the soil fertile and allowing durable settlement with concomitant advances in mud brick construction, pot-making, stone grinding, which had begun earlier and gave an improved control of shape, carpentering, weaving and other inventions. In all this development the Nile valley was early concerned and its regular floods from summer rains in Abyssinia could be managed to give such an advantage that Egypt gained a unique primacy in early history. Domestication of animals was added very early to cultivation of crops, most probably as a source of milk, flesh, leather, sinews, etc. Neolithic Culture was thus characterized by stone axes shaped by grinding or rubbing, by cultivation usually by domestic animals, often by durable settlements and a variety of arts and crafts.

Especially after the practice of castration of surplus male animals was introduced, domestic beasts were used for work, notably for pulling a modified hoe to scratch the drying surface of river-mud and so keep it from caking too hard. This is the early plough, valuable in lands where plant food in the soil is drawn up nearly to the surface as moisture rises and evaporates. Animals were also used as porters and tractors.

Heating stones in fires, probably for water-heating, led to the discovery of impure copper and the invention of bronze (standardized at about 10 per cent. tin and 90 per cent. copper) at the beginning of the Bronze Age in S.W. Asia and/or Egypt. By that time, about 5,000 years ago, cities and trade were developing and the basic arts were spreading to the Indus basin, the Mediterranean and the less areas of Central Europe. Western Europe on the one hand and N. China on the other were affected somewhat later but more than 4,000 years ago; and China rapidly advanced to a high skill in pottery and bronze. Over 3,000 years ago in Anatolia the smelting of iron was developed, and it spread thence in the next centuries, beginning the Iron Age. Iron nails and tools made possible larger boats, houses, furniture and especially larger ploughs, working deeper into the earth and so suited to cooler lands, where plant food was often deep in the soil because evaporation was not very strong and rain might occur at every season. So the farmer needed to bring up the deeper layers to the surface in north-west Europe. With the spread of iron, especially about 2,000 to 1,000 years ago, northwest Europe emerged from its former low status and went ahead, still more after houses were improved with more privacy, chimneys and beds.

The evolution of culture in the Americas is much discussed. Early drifts of hunters via Alaska may have occurred in the late Pleistocene. Probably a good deal of Neolithic culture (stone implements, pottery, etc.) spread by the same route to America about or after 5,000 years ago but did not take Asiatic cereals or domestic animals. America also received contributions to its life by maritime routes especially following the North Pacific currents.

TIME MEASUREMENT AND CALENDARS

MEASUREMENTS OF TIME

Measurements of Time.—These are based on the time taken by the earth to rotate on its axis (Day); by the moon to revolve round the earth (Month); and by the earth to revolve round the sun (Year). From these, which are not commensurable, certain average or mean intervals have been adopted for ordinary use. Of these the first is the Day, which begins at midnight and is divided into 24 hours of 60 minutes, each of 60 seconds. The hours are counted from midnight up to 12 noon (when the sun crosses the meridian), and these hours are designated A.M. (ante meridiem); and again from noon up to 12 at midnight, which hours are designated P.M. (post meridiem), except when the Twenty-four Hour reckoning is employed. The 24-hour reckoning ignores A.M. and P.M., and the hours are numbered 0 to 23 from midnight to midnight.

Colloquially the 24 hours are divided into day and night, day being the time while the sun is above the horizon (including the four stages of twilight defined on p. 139). Day is subdivided further into morning, the early part of daytime, ending at noon; afternoon from noon to 6 p.m. and evening, which may be said to extend from 6 p.m. until midnight. Night, the dark period between day and day, begins at the close of Astronomical Twilight (see p. 139) and extends beyond midnight to sunrise the next day.

The names of the Days—Sunday, Monday, Tuesday (Tiw = God of War), Wednesday (Woden or Odin), Thursday (Thor), Friday (Frig = wife of Odin), and Saturday are derived from Old English translations or adaptations of the Roman titles (Sol, Luna, Mars, Mercurius, Jupiter, Venus and Saturnius).

The Week is a period of 7 days.

The Month in the ordinary calendar is approximately the twelfth part of a year, but the lengths of the different months vary from 28 (or 29) days to 31.

The Year.—The Equinoctial or Tropical Year is the time that the earth takes to revolve round the sun from equinox to equinox, or 365.2422 mean solar days. The Calendar Year consists of 365 days, but a year the date of which is divisible by 4, without remainder, is called bissextile (see Roman Calendar) or Leap Year and consists of 366 days, one day being added to the month February, so that a date "leaps over" a day of the week. The last year of a century is not a leap year unless its number is divisible by 400 (e.g. the years 1800 and 1900 had only 365 days).

The Historical Year.—Before the year 1752, two Calendar systems were in use in England. The Civil or Legal Year began on March 25, while the Historical Year began on January 1. Thus the Civil or Legal date 1658 March 24, was the same day as 1659 March 24 Historical; and a date in that portion of the year is written as: March 24 165<sup>8</sup>, the lower figure showing the Historical year.

The Masonic Year.—Two dates are quoted in warrants, dispensations etc., issued by the United

Grand Lodge of England, those for the current year being expressed as Anno Domini 1983—Anno Lucis 5983. This Year of Light is based on the Book of Genesis I: 3, the 4000 year difference being derived from Ussher's Notation, published in 1654, which places the Creation of the World in 4,000 B.C.

Regnal Years.—These are the years of a sovereign's reign, and each begins on the anniversary of his or her accession: e.g. Regnal year 31 of the present Queen began on Feb. 6, 1982. The system was used for dating Acts of Parliament until 1962. The Summer Time Act of 1925, for example, is quoted as 15 and 16 Geo. V. c. 64, because it became law in the session which extended over part of both of these regnal years. The regnal years of Edward VII began on January 22, which was the day of Queen Victoria's death in 1901, so that Acts passed in that reign are, in general, quoted with only one year number, but year 10 of the series ended on May 6, 1910, being the day on which King Edward died, and Acts of the Parliamentary Session 1910 are headed 10 Edw. VII. and 1 Geo. V.; Acts passed in 1936 were dated 1 Edw. VIII. and 1 Geo. VI.; Acts passed in 1952 were dated 16 Geo. VI. and 1 Elizabeth II. Since 1962 Acts of Parliament have been dated by the calendar year.

New Year's Day.—In England in the seventh century, and as late as the thirteenth, the year was reckoned from Christmas Day, but in the twelfth century the Anglican Church began the year with the Feast of The Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin (Lady Day) on March 25 and this practice was adopted generally in the fourteenth century. The Civil or Legal year in the British Dominions (exclusive of Scotland), as opposed to the Historical, which already began on Jan. 1, began with "Lady Day" until 1751. But in and since 1752 the civil year has begun with Jan. 1. Certain dividends are still paid by the Bank of England on dates based on Old Style. New Year's Day in Scotland was changed from March 25 to Jan. 1 in 1600. On the Continent of Europe Jan. 1 was adopted as the first day of the year by Venice in 1522, Germany in 1544, Spain, Portugal, and the Roman Catholic Netherlands in 1556, Prussia, Denmark and Sweden in 1559, France 1564, Lorraine 1579, Protestant Netherlands 1583, Russia 1725, and Tuscany 1751.

The Longest Day.—The longest day measured from sunrise to sunset at any place is the day on which the Sun attains its greatest distance from the Equator, north or south, accordingly as the place is in the northern or southern hemisphere; in other words, it is the day of the Calendar on which a Solstice falls. If a Solstice falls on June 21 late in the day, by Greenwich Time, that day will be the longest of the year at Greenwich, though it may be by only a second of time or a fraction thereof, but it will be on June 22 (local date) in Japan, and therefore June 22 will be the longest day there and at places in Eastern longitudes.

But leaving this question of locality and confining consideration to Greenwich, the Solstices are events in the Tropical Year whose length is 365 $\frac{1}{4}$  days less about 11 minutes, and therefore, if a Solstice happens late on June 21 in one year, it will be nearly six hours later in the next, or early on June 22, and that will be the longest day. This delay of the Solstice is not permitted to continue because the extra day in Leap Year brings it back a day in the Calendar. For the remainder of this century the longest day will fall each year on June 21.

Because of the 11 minutes above mentioned the additional day in Leap Year brings the Solstice back too far by 44 minutes, and the time of the Solstice in the Calendar is earlier as the century progresses. In the year 2000 the Summer Solstice reaches its earliest date for 100 years, i.e., June 21<sup>d</sup> 02<sup>h</sup>.

To remedy this the last year of a century is in most cases not a Leap Year, and the omission of the extra day puts the date of the Solstice later by about six hours too much, compensation for which is made by making the fourth centennial year a Leap Year.

The Shortest day.—Similar considerations apply to the shortest day of the year, or the day of the Winter Solstice. For the remainder of this century the shortest day will fall on Dec. 21 in two years of four and on Dec. 22 in the remaining two years. In the year 2000 the Winter Solstice reaches its earliest date, Dec. i.e., 21<sup>d</sup> 13<sup>h</sup>. The difference due to locality also prevails in the same sense as for the longest day.

At Greenwich the Sun sets at its earliest by the clock about ten days before the shortest day, which is a circumstance that may require explanation. The daily change in the time of sunset is due in the first place to the Sun's movement southwards at this time of the year, which diminishes the interval between the Sun's southing or Apparent noon, and its setting, and, secondly, because of the daily decrease of the Equation of Time subtractive from Apparent time, which causes the time of Apparent noon to be continuously later, day by day, and so in a measure counteracts the first effect. The rates of the resulting daily acceleration and retardation are not equal, nor are they uniform, but are such that their combination causes the date of earliest sunset to be Dec. 12 or 13 at Greenwich. In more southerly latitudes the effect of the movement of the Sun is less, and the change in the time of sunset depends on that of the Equation of Time to a greater degree, and the date of earliest sunset is earlier than it is at Greenwich.

Lord Mayor's Day.—The Lord Mayor of London was previously elected on the Feast of St. Simon and St. Jude (Oct. 28), and from the time of Edward I, at least, was presented to the King or to the Barons of the Exchequer on the following day, except that day be a Sunday. The day of election was altered to Oct. 16 in 1346, and after some further changes was fixed for Michaelmas Day in 1546, but the ceremonies of admittance and swearing-in of the Lord Mayor continued to take place on Oct. 28 and 29 respectively until 1751. In 1752, when Sept. 3 was reckoned as Sept. 14 at the reform of the Calendar, the Lord Mayor was continued in office until Nov. 8, the "New Style" equivalent of Oct. 28. The Lord Mayor is now presented to the Lord Chief Justice at the Royal Courts of Justice on the second Saturday in November to make the final declaration of office, having been sworn in at Guildhall on the preceding day.

Dog Days.—The days about the heliacal rising of the Dog Star, noted from ancient times as the hottest and most unwholesome period of the year in the Northern Hemisphere. Their incidence has been variously calculated as depending on the Greater or Lesser Dog Star (Sirius or Procyon) and their duration has been reckoned as from 30 to 54 days. A generally accepted period is from July 3 to Aug. 15.

Metonic (Lunar, or Minor) Cycle.—In the year

432 B.C. Meton, an Athenian astronomer, found that 235 Lunations are very nearly, though not exactly equal in duration to 19 Solar Years, and, hence, after 19 years the Phases of the Moon recur on the same days of the month (nearly). The dates of Full Moon in a cycle of nineteen years were inscribed in figures of gold on public monuments in Athens, and the number showing the position of a year in the Cycle is called the Golden Number of that year.

Solar (or Major) Cycle.—A period of twenty-eight years, in any corresponding year of which the days of the week recur on the same day of the month.

Julian Period.—Proposed by Joseph Scaliger in 1582. The period is 7980 Julian years, and its first year coincides with the year 4713 B.C. 7980 is the product of the number of years in the Solar Cycle, the Metonic Cycle and the cycle of the Roman Indication (28 × 19 × 15).

Roman Indication.—A period of fifteen years, instituted for fiscal purposes about A.D. 300.

THE FOUR SEASONS

Spring, the first season of the year, is defined astronomically to begin in the Northern Hemisphere at the Vernal Equinox when the Sun enters the sign Aries (i.e. about March 21) and crosses the Equator, thus causing day and night to be of equal length all over the world; and to terminate at the Summer Solstice. In Great Britain, Spring in popular parlance comprises the months of February, March and April. In the Southern Hemisphere Spring corresponds with Autumn in the Northern Hemisphere.

Summer, the second and warmest season, begins astronomically at the Summer Solstice when the Sun enters the sign of Cancer (about June 21). The Sun then attains its greatest northern declination and appears to stand still, the times of sunrise and sunset and the consequent length of the day showing no variation for several days together, before and after the Longest Day (June 21 or 22). Summer terminates at the Autumnal Equinox. In popular parlance Summer in Great Britain includes the months of May, June, July and August, Midsummer Day being June 24.

Autumn, the third season, begins astronomically at the Autumnal Equinox (i.e., about September 21) when the Sun enters the sign Libra, the beginning of which sign is at the intersection of the Equator and the Ecliptic, the point in the sky where the Sun crosses from N. to S. of the Equator and causes the length of day and night to be equal all over the world. In Great Britain it is popularly held to include the months of September and October. A warm period sometimes occurs round about St. Luke's Day (Oct. 18) and is known as "St. Luke's Summer." Autumn ends at the Winter Solstice. In the Southern Hemisphere it corresponds with Spring of the Northern.

Winter, the fourth and coldest season, begins astronomically at the Winter Solstice (i.e. about Dec. 21) when the Sun enters the sign of Capricornus, and ends at the Vernal Equinox. In Great Britain the season is popularly held to comprise the months of November, December and January, mid-winter being marked by the Shortest Day. A warm period sometimes occurs round about Martinmas (Nov. 11) and is known as "St. Martin's Summer." In the Southern Hemisphere it corresponds with Summer of the Northern.

THE CHRISTIAN CALENDAR

In the Christian chronological system the years are distinguished by cardinal numbers before or after the Incarnation, the period being denoted by the letters B.C. (Before Christ) or, more rarely, A.C. (Ante Christum), and A.D. (Annus Domini). The correlative dates of the epoch are the 4th year of the 194th Olympiad, the 753rd year from the Foundation of Rome, A.M. 3761 (Jewish Chronology), and the 4714th year of the Julian Period. This was introduced into Italy in the sixth century, and though first used in France in the seventh it was not universally established there until about the eighth century. It has been said that the system was introduced into England by St. Augustine (A.D. 596), but was probably not generally used until some centuries later. It was ordered to be used by the Bishops at the Council of Chelsea, A.D. 816. The actual date of the birth of Christ is somewhat uncertain. Dec. 25, 4 B.C., is supported by several lines of argument.

Old and New Style.—In the Julian Calendar all the centennial years were Leap Years, and for this reason towards the close of the sixteenth century there was a difference of 10 days between the tropical and calendar years; or, in other words, the equinox fell on March 11 of the Calendar, whereas at the time of the Council of Nicaea, A.D. 325, it had fallen on March 21. In 1582 Pope Gregory ordained that Oct. 5th should be called Oct. 15th and that of the end-century years only the fourth should be a Leap Year (see p. 186). This change was adopted by Italy, France, Spain, and Portugal in 1582; by Prussia, the German Roman Catholic States, Switzerland, Holland, and Flanders on Jan. 1, 1583, Poland 1586, Hungary 1587, the German and Netherland Protestant States and Denmark 1700, Sweden (gradually) by the omission of eleven leap days, 1700–1740; Great Britain and her Dominions (including the North American Colonies) in 1752, by the omission of eleven days (Sept. 3 being reckoned as Sept. 14). This Gregorian Calendar was adopted by Japan in 1872, China in 1912, Bulgaria in 1915, Turkey and Soviet Russia in 1918, by Yugoslavia and Rumania in 1919, and by Greece in February, 1923. The Greek and Rumanian Churches accepted the Gregorian Calendar in 1924, though some Orthodox Churches still follow the Paschalian one. The difference between the Old and New Styles was 11 days after 1752, 12 days after 1800, and has been 13 days since 1900. It happened that a change of the beginning of the year from March 25 to January 1 was made in England in 1752, the year in which the change from Julian to Gregorian Calendar was made, and for that reason the words Old and New Style have been used in a sense which is not strictly correct, but is nevertheless expressive.

The Dominical Letter is one of the letters A–G which are used to denote the Sundays in successive years. If the first day of the year is a Sunday the letter is A; if the second, B; the third, C; and so on. Leap year requires two letters, the first for Jan. 1—Feb. 29, the second for March 1—Dec. 31.

Epiphany.—The Feast of the Epiphany, commemorating the manifestation of the infant Jesus to the Gentiles, later became associated with the offering of gifts by the Magi. The day was of exceptional importance from the time of the Council of Nicaea (A.D. 325) as the primate of Alexandria was charged at every Epiphany Feast with the announcement in a letter to the Churches of the date of the forthcoming Easter. The day was of considerable importance in Britain as it influenced dates, ecclesiastical and lay, e.g. Plow Monday, when work was resumed in the fields, falls upon the Monday in the first full week after the Epiphany.

Lent.—The Teutonic word Lent, which denotes the Fast preceding Easter, originally meant no more than the Spring season; but from Anglo-Saxon times, at least, it has been used as the equivalent of the more significant Latin term Quadragesima, meaning the "Forty Days" or, more literally, the fortieth day. As early as the fifth century some of the Fathers of the Church put forward the view that the forty days Fast is of Apostolic origin, but this is not supported or believed by modern scholars; and it appears to some that it dates from the early years of the fourth century. There is some suggestion that the Fast was kept originally for only forty hours. Ash Wednesday is the first day of Lent, which ends at midnight before Easter Day.

Sexagesima and Septuagesima.—It has been suggested that the unmeaning application of the names Sexagesima and Septuagesima to the second and third Sundays before Lent was made by analogy with the names Quadragesima and Quinquagesima. Another less likely conjecture is that Septuagesima means the seventh day before the Octave of Easter. It is not certain whether the name Quinquagesima is due to the fact that the Sunday in question is the fiftieth day before Easter (reckoned inclusive) or was simply formed on the analogy of Quadragesima (New English Dictionary).

Palm Sunday commemorates the triumphal entry of Our Lord into Jerusalem and is celebrated in Britain (when palm is not available) by branches of willow gathered for use in the decoration of churches on that day.

Maundy Thursday, the day before Good Friday, the name itself being a corruption of dies mandati (day of the mandate) when Christ washed the feet of the disciples and gave them the mandate to love one another.

Easter-Day is the first Sunday after the full moon which happens upon, or next after, the 21st day of March; and if the full moon happens upon a Sunday, Easter-Day is the Sunday after. This definition is contained in an Act of Parliament (24 Geo. II., cap. 23), and explanation is given in the preamble to the Act that the day of Full Moon depends on certain tables that have been prepared. These are the tables whose essential points are given in the early pages of the Book of Common Prayer. The Moon referred to is not the real Moon of the heavens, but a hypothetical Moon on whose "Full" the date of Easter depends, and the lunations of this "Calendar" Moon consist of twenty-nine and thirty days alternately with certain necessary modifications to make the date of its Full agree as nearly as possible with that of the real Moon, which is known as the Paschal Full Moon.

A Fixed Easter.—As at present ordained, Easter falls on one of 35 days—(March 22–April 25). On June 15, 1928, the House of Commons agreed to a motion for the third reading of the Bill that Easter Day shall, in the Calendar year next but one after the commencement of the Act and in all subsequent years, be the first Sunday after the second Saturday in April. Easter would thus fall between April 9 and 15, both inclusive—that is, on the second or third Sunday in April. A clause in the Bill provided that before it shall come into operation regard shall be had to any opinion expressed officially by the various Christian Churches. Efforts have been made recently by the World Council of Churches to secure a unanimous choice of date for Easter by its 239 member Churches. Press reports suggested the second Sunday in April as their most likely choice.

Holy Days and Saints Days were the normal factors in early times for settling the dates of future and recurrent appointments, e.g. the Quarter Days in England and Wales are the Feast of the Nativity, the Feast of the Annunciation, the Feast of St. John the Baptist and the Feast of St. Michael and All the Holy Angels, while Term Days in Scotland are Candlemas (Feast of the Purification), Whitsunday (a fixed date), Lammas (Loaf Mass) and Martinmas (St. Martin's Day). Law Sittings in England and Wales commence on the Feast of St. Hilary and the term which begins on Old Michaelmas Day ends on the feast of St. Thomas the Apostle.

The number of Saints commemorated in the Calendar of the Book of Common Prayer is 73, but (with the exception of All Saint's Day) "days" are appointed only for those whose names are mentioned in Scripture. Red Letter Days (see also p. 225) were Holy Days and Saints Days indicated in early ecclesiastical calendars by letters printed in red ink. The days to be distinguished in this way were finally approved at the Council of Nicaea, A.D. 325, and special services are set apart for them in the Book of Common Prayer.

Rogation Days.—These are the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday preceding Ascension Day, "Holy Thursday", and in the fifth century were ordered by the Church to be observed as Public Fasts with solemn processions and supplications. The processions were discontinued as religious observances at the Reformation, but survive in the ceremony known as "Beating the Parish Bounds".

Ember Days.—The Ember Days at the Four Seasons are the Wednesday, Friday and Saturday after (1) the First Sunday in Lent, (2) the Feast of Pentecost, (3) September 14, (4) December 13.

Whit Sunday.—It is generally said that this name is a variant of White Sunday, and was so called from the albs or white robes of the newly baptized. But other derivations have been suggested.

Trinity Sunday.—The festival in honour of the Trinity is observed on the Sunday following Whit Sunday, and subsequent Sundays are reckoned in the Church of England as "after Trinity"; in the Roman Catholic Church Sundays are reckoned "after Pentecost".

Thomas Becket, called by his contemporaries Thomas of London (born 1118; murdered Dec. 29, 1170), was consecrated Archbishop of Canterbury on the Sunday after Whit Sunday and his first act was to ordain that the day of his consecration should be held as a new festival in honour of the Holy Trinity. The observance thus originated spread from Canterbury throughout the whole of Christendom.

Advent Sunday is the Sunday nearest to St. Andrew's Day, Nov. 30, which allows three Sundays between Advent and Christmas Day in all cases. The Sunday preceding Advent is the 27th after Trinity if Easter falls on one of the days, March 22–26 inclusive. It is the 22nd after Trinity when Easter Day is on April 24 or 25. If the date of Easter were determined as proposed (see Fixed Easter) there would generally be 24 Sundays after Trinity, the number being 25 only in the years when Easter fell on April 9. With a Fixed Easter there would never be a sixth Sunday after Epiphany. There would be a fifth Sunday when Easter Day fell on April 15 or April 14, the year being a leap year.

NOTES CONCERNING TABLE OF MOVABLE FEASTS

Ash Wednesday (first day in Lent) can fall at earliest on February 4 and at latest on March 10.

Easter Day can fall at earliest on March 22 and at latest on April 25.

Ascension Day can fall at earliest on April 30 and at latest on June 3.

Whit Sunday can fall at earliest on May 10 and at latest on June 13.

Rogation Sunday is the Sunday next before Holy Thursday (Ascension Day).

Trinity Sunday is the Sunday next after Whit Sunday.

Corpus Christi falls on the Thursday next after Trinity Sunday.

There are not less than xxii and not more than xxvii Sundays after Trinity.

Advent Sunday is the Sunday nearest to November 30.

PUBLIC HOLIDAYS

BANK HOLIDAYS IN ENGLAND, WALES, NORTHERN IRELAND AND THE CHANNEL ISLANDS ARE (1983):—Jan. 3; April 4; May 2; May 30; Aug. 29; Dec. 26 and 27.

Liberation Day (May 9) is a bank and public holiday in the Channel Islands.

Banks are also closed on Good Friday and Christmas Day and on all Saturdays.

The Stock Exchange is closed on Bank Holidays, Good Friday, Christmas Day and New Year's Day; and on Saturdays throughout the year.

Custom House and Docks, as Banks; with the Queen's Birthday (when decreed).

Excise and Stamp Offices, as Banks; with Whit Tuesday and Coronation Day, if and when decreed.

Law Offices.—Good Friday, Easter Monday and Tuesday, Spring Bank Holiday (see col. 1), Christmas Day, and first week-day after Christmas.

BANK HOLIDAYS IN SCOTLAND ARE (1983):—Jan. 3 and 4; May 2 and 30; Aug. 1; Dec. 26 and 27.

Banks in Scotland are also closed on Good Friday, Christmas Day and on Saturdays.

Scotland has special Term (Quarter) Days:—Candlemas, Feb. 2; Whitsunday, May 15 (fixed date); Lammas, Aug. 1; and Martinmas, Nov. 11; the Removal Terms are May 28 and Nov. 28.

THE JEWISH CALENDAR

Origin.—The story in the Book of Genesis that the Flood began on the seventeenth day of the second month; that after the end of 150 days the waters were abated; and that on the seventeenth day of the seventh month the Ark rested on Mount Ararat, indicates a calendar of some kind and that the writers recognized 30 days as the length of a lunation. There is other mention of months by their original numbers in the Book of Genesis and in establishing the rite of the Passover Moses spoke of Abib as the month when the Israelites came out from Egypt and Abib was to be the first month of the year.

In the first Book of Kings three months are mentioned by name, Zif the second month, Ethanim the seventh and Bul the eighth, but these are not names now in use. After the Dispersion, Jewish communities were left in considerable doubt as to the times of Fasts and Festivals, and this led to the formation of the Jewish Calendar as used to-day, which, it is said by some, was done in A.D. 358 by Rabbi Hillel II, a descendant of Gamaliel—though some assert that it did not happen until much later. This calendar is luni-solar, and is based on the lengths of the lunation and of the tropical year as found by Hipparchus (Circ. 120 B.C.)

which differ little from those adopted at the present day. The year 5743 A.D. (1982-83) is the 5th year of the 303rd Metonic (Minor or Lunar) Cycle of 19 years and the 3rd year of the 206th Solar (or Major) Cycle of 28 years since the Era of the Creation, which the Jews hold to have occurred at the time of the Autumnal Equinox in the year known in the Christian Calendar as 3760 B.C. (954 of the Julian Period) and the epoch or starting point of Jewish Chronology corresponds to Oct. 7, 3761 B.C. At the beginning of each Solar Cycle the Teku ah of Nisan (the vernal equinox) returns to the same day and to the same hour.

The hour is divided into 1080 minims and the month between one new moon and the next is reckoned as 29 days, 12 hours, 793 minims. The normal calendar year, called a Common Regular year, consists of 12 months of 30 days and 29 days alternately. Since 12 months such as these comprise only 354 days, in order that each of them shall not diverge greatly from an average place in the solar year, a thirteenth month is occasionally added after the fifth month of the Civil year (which commences on the first day of the month Tishri), or as the penultimate month of the Ecclesiastical (which commences on the first day of month Nisan), the years when this happens being called Embolismic. Of the 19 years that form a Metonic cycle, 7 are embolismic; they occur at places in the cycle indicated by the numbers 3, 6, 8, 11, 14, 17, 19, these places being chosen so that the accumulated excesses of the solar years should be as small as possible. The first of each month is called the day of New Moon, though it is not necessarily the day of astronomical New Moon, that being the day on which conjunction of Sun and Moon occurs, but there is generally a difference of a day or two. In practice, in a month which follows one of 30 days, the day preceding its first day is also observed as a day of New Moon. The dates in the Christian calendar of the first days of the months depend on that of the first of Tishri, which therefore controls the dates of fasts and festivals in the Jewish year. For certain ceremonial reasons connected with these, the first of Tishri must not fall on a Sunday, Wednesday or Friday, and if this should happen as the result of the computation it is postponed to the next day in the Christian calendar. Also, if the New Moon of Tishri falls on any day of the week at noon or later than noon, then the following day is to be taken for the celebration of that New Moon and is Tishri I, provided that it is not one of the forbidden days, in which case there is a further postponement of a day. These rules and others have been considered in detail, and finally a calendar scheme has been drawn up in which a Jewish year is of one of the following six types: Common Deficient (353 days), Common Regular (354 days), Common Abundant (355 days), Embolismic Deficient (383 days), Embolismic Regular (384 days), or Embolismic Abundant (385 days).

The Regular year has an alternation of 30 and 29 days. In an Abundant year, whether Common or Embolismic, Marcheshvan, the second month of the Civil year, has 30 days instead of 29; in Deficient years Kislev, the third month, has 29 instead of 30. The additional month in Embolismic years which is called Adar I, and precedes the month called Adar in Common years and Adar II, or Ve-Adar, in Embolismic, always has 30 days, but neither this, nor the other variations mentioned, is allowed to change the number of days in the other months which still follow the alternation of the normal twelve. In Embolismic years the month intercalated precedes Adar and usurps its name, but the usual Adar festivals are kept in Ve-Adar.

These are the main features of the Jewish Calendar which must be considered permanent, because as a Jewish law it cannot be altered except by a great Synhedrion.

The Jewish day begins between sunset and nightfall. The time used is that of the meridian of Jerusalem, which is 2h. 21m. in advance of Greenwich Mean Time. Rules for the beginning of Sabbaths and Festivals were laid down for the latitude of London in the eighteenth century and hours for nightfall are now fixed annually by the Chief Rabbi.

THE ROMAN CALENDAR

Roman historians adopted as an epoch the Foundation of Rome, which is believed to have happened in the year 753 B.C., and the ordinal number of the years in Roman reckoning is followed by the letters A.U.C. (Ab Urbe Condita), so that the year 1980 is 2733 A.U.C. (MMDCCLXXXIII). The Calendar that we know has developed from one established by Romulus, who is said to have used a year of 304 days divided into ten months, beginning with March, to which Numa added January and February, making the year consist of 12 months of 30 and 29 days alternately, with an additional day so that the total was 355. It is also said that Numa ordered an intercalary month of 22 or 23 days in alternate years, making 90 days in eight years, to be inserted after Feb. 23, but there is some doubt as to the origination and the details of the intercalation in the Roman Calendar, though it is certain that some scheme of this kind was inaugurated and not fully carried out, for in the year 46 B.C. Julius Cæsar, who was then Pontifex Maximus, found that the Calendar had been allowed to fall into some confusion. He therefore sought the help of the Egyptian astronomer Sosigenes, which led to the construction and adoption (45 B.C.) of the Julian Calendar, and, by a slight alteration, to the Gregorian now in use. The year 46 B.C. was made to consist of 445 days, and is called the Year of Confusion. In the Roman (Julian) Calendar the days of the month were counted backwards from three fixed points, or days, and an intervening day was said to be so many days before the next coming point, the first and last being counted. These three points were (1) the Kalends; (2) the Nones; and (3) the Ides. Their positions in the months and the method of counting from them will be seen in the table below. The year containing 366 days was called bissexillis annus, as it had a doubled sixth day (bissexus dies) before the March Kalends on Feb. 24—ante diem sextum Kalendas Martias, or VI Kal. Mart.

THE MOSLEM CALENDAR

The basic date of the Moslem Calendar is the Hejira, or Flight of Muhammad from Mecca to Medina, the corresponding date of which is A.D. 622, July 16, in the Julian Calendar. Hejira years are used principally in Iran, Turkey, Arabia, Egypt, in certain parts of India and in Malaya. The system was adopted about A.D. 632, commencing from the first day of the month preceding the Hejira. The years are purely lunar and consist of 12 months containing in alternate sequence 30 or 29 days, with the intercalation of one day at the end of the 12th month at stated intervals in each cycle of 30 years, the object of the intercalation being to reconcile the date of the first of the month with the date of the actual New Moon. Some adherents still take the date of the evening of the first visibility of the crescent as that of the first of the month. In each cycle of 30 years 19 are common and contain 354 days and 11 are intercalary (355 days), the latter being called kabishah.

The mean length of the Hejira year is 354 days, 8 hours, 48 minutes and the period of mean lunation is 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes.

To ascertain if a Hejira year is common or kabishah divide it by 30; the quotient gives the number of completed cycles and the remainder shows the place of the year in the current cycle. If the remainder is 2, 5, 7, 10, 13, 16, 18, 21, 24, 26 or 29 the year is kabishah and consists of 355 days.

Hejira year A.H. 1403 (remainder 23) is a common year.; A.H. 1404 (remainder 5) is a kabishah year.

OTHER EPOCHS AND CALENDARS

China.—Until the year A.D. 1911 a Lunar Calendar was in force in China, but with the establishment of the Republic the Government adopted the Gregorian Calendar, and the new and old systems were used simultaneously by the people for several years. Since 1930 the publication and use of the old Calendar have been banned by the Government, and an official Chinese Calendar, corresponding with the European or Western system, is compiled, but the old Lunar Calendar is still in use to some extent in China. The old Chinese Calendar, with a cycle of 60 years, is still in use in Tibet, Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaysia and elsewhere in South-East Asia.

Ethiopia.—In the Coptic Calendar, which is used by part of the population of Egypt and Ethiopia, the year is made up of 12 months of 30 days each, followed, in general, by 5 complementary days. Every fourth year is an Intercalary or Leap year and in these years there are 6 complementary days. The Intercalary year of the Coptic Calendar immediately precedes the Leap year of the Julian Calendar. The Era is that of Diocletian or the Martyrs, the origin of which is fixed at A.D. 284, Aug. 29 (Julian date).

Greece.—Ancient Greek chronology was reckoned in Olympiads, cycles of 4 years corresponding with the periodic Olympic Games held on the plain of Olympia in Elis once in 4 years, the intervening years being the first, second, etc., of the Olympiad which received the name of the victor at the Games. The first recorded Olympiad is that of Choroebus, 776 B.C.

India.—In addition to the Moslem reckoning there are six eras used in India. The principal astronomical system was the Kaliyuga Era, which appears to have been adopted in the fourth century A.D. It began on Feb. 18, 3102 B.C. The chronological system of Northern India, known as the Vikrama Samvat Era, prevalent in Western India, began on Feb. 23, 57 B.C. The year A.D. 1983 is, therefore, the year 2040 of the Vikrama Era.

The Saka Era of Southern India dating from March 3, A.D. 78, was declared the uniform national calendar of the Republic of India with effect from March 22, 1957, to be used concurrently with the Gregorian Calendar. As revised, the year of the new Saka Era begins at the spring equinox, with five successive months of 31 days and seven of 30 days in ordinary years; six months of each length in leap years. The year A.D. 1983 is 1905 of the revised Saka Era.

In the Hills, the Saptarshi Era dates from the moment when the Saptarshi, or saints, were translated and became the stars of the Great Bear in 3076 B.C.

The Buddhists reckoned from the death of Buddha in 543 B.C. (the actual date being 487 B.C.); and the epoch of the Jains was the death of Vardhamana, the founder of their faith, in 527 B.C.

Iran.—The chronology of Iran (Persia) is the Era of Hejira, which began on A.D. 622, July 16. The Zoroastrian Calendar was used in pre-Moslem days and is still employed by Zoroastrians in Iran and India (Parsees) with era beginning A.D. 632, June 16.

Japan.—The Japanese Calendar is the Gregorian, and is essentially the same as that in use by Western nations, the years, months and weeks being of the same length and beginning on the same days as those of the Western Calendar. The numeration of the years is different, for Japanese chronology is based on a system of epochs or periods, each of which begins at the accession of an Emperor or other important occurrence, the method being not unlike the former British system of Regnal years, but differing from it in the particular that each year of a period closes on Dec. 31. The Japanese scheme begins about A.D. 650 and the three latest epochs are defined by the reigns of Emperors, whose actual names are not necessarily used:

Epoch Meiji	from 1868 Oct. 13 to 1912 July 31
„ Taishō	„ 1912 Aug. 1 to 1926 Dec. 25
„ Shōwa	„ 1926 Dec. 26

Hence the year Shōwa 58 begins 1983 Jan. 1. The months are not named. They are known as First Month, Second Month, etc., first month being the equivalent to January. The days of the week are Nichiyōbi (Sun-day), Getsuyōbi (Moon-day), Kayōbi (Fire-day), Suiryōbi (Water-day), Mokyūyōbi (Wood-day), Kinyōbi (Metal-day), Doyōbi (Earth-day).

The World

The Superficial Area of the Earth is estimated to be 196,836,000 square miles, of which 55,786,000 square miles are Land and 141,050,000 square miles Water. The Diameter of the Earth at the Equator is 7,926½ English miles, and at the Poles 7,900 English miles. The Equatorial Circumference is 24,901·8 English miles, divided into 360 Degrees of Longitude, each of 69·17 English (or 60 Geographical) miles; these Degrees are measured from the Meridian of Greenwich, and numbered East and West of that point to meet in the Antipodes at the 180th Degree. Distance North and South of the Equator is marked by Parallels of Latitude, which proceed from zero (at the Equator) to 90° at the Poles.

The velocity of a given point of the Earth's surface at the Equator exceeds 1,000 miles an hour (24,901·8 miles in 24 hours); the Earth's velocity in its orbit round the Sun is about 66,600 miles an hour (584,000,000 miles in 365½ days). The Earth is distant from the Sun 93,000,000 miles, on the average.

AREA AND POPULATION

The total population of the world in mid-1975, was estimated by the United Nations Statistical Office at 3,967,000,000 compared with 3,003,000,000 in 1960 and 2,070,000,000 in 1930. Figures of areas in the following table are of land area and inland water, but exclude uninhabited polar regions and some uninhabited islands. Figures for Europe and Asia exclude U.S.S.R. which is shown separately. Figures for Oceania exclude Hawaii which is included with North America, being the 50th State of U.S.A.

* Excludes U.S.S.R. (shown separately); includes European and Asiatic Turkey.

A United Nations report (The Future Growth of World Population) in 1958, pointed out that the population of the world had increased since the beginning of the 20th Century at an unprecedented rate: in 1850 it was estimated at 1,094,000,000 and in 1900 at 1,550,000,000, an increase of 42 per cent in 50 years. By 1925 it had risen to 1,907,000,000—23 per cent in 25 years—and by 1950 it had reached 2,500,000,000, an increase of 31 per cent in 25 years. Levels of population and the trend in distribution of the population by continents as forecast for the year 2000 were:—

	2000
	Estimated Population	Per cent
Europe (including U.S.S.R.) .....	947	15·1
Asia (excluding U.S.S.R.) ..	3,870	61·8

Oceania .....	29	0·5
World .....	6,267	100

THE CONTINENTS

Europe (including European Russia) forms about one-fourteenth of the land surface of the globe. Its length from the North Cape, 71° 12' N., to Cape Matapan, in the south of Greece, 36° 23' N., is about 2,400 miles, and its breadth from Cape St. Vincent to the Urals is about 3,300 miles. The political boundary between Europe and Asia extends some distance beyond the Urals, to include the mining regions; in the south-east it follows the valley of the Manych, north of the Caucasus.

Asia (including Asiatic Russia) extends over nearly one-third of the land surface of the globe. The distance between its extreme longitudes, the west coast of Asia Minor (26° E.) and the East Cape (170° W.), is 6,000 miles. The extreme latitudes, Cape Chelyuskin (78° 30' N.) and Cape Bulus (76 miles north of the Equator), are 5,350 miles apart. Asia is bounded by the ocean on all sides except the west. The Isthmus of Suez connects it with Africa. The land boundary between Europe and Asia is formed on the west mainly by the Ural Mountains and the Ural River. In the south-west the valley of the Manych, which stretches from the Caspian Sea to the mouth of the Don, is now taken as the line between the two continents, although the Caucasus was formerly considered as belonging to Europe. The islands of the archipelago which lie in the south-east between the continents of Asia and Australia may be divided into two groups by a line passing east of Timor, Timor Laut, the Kei Islands and the Moluccas.

Africa is about three times the area of Europe. Its extreme longitudes are 17° W. at Cape Verde and 51° 27' 52" E. at Ras Hafun. The extreme latitudes are Cape Blanco in 37° N. and Cape Agulhas in 35° S., at a distance of about 5,000 miles. It is surrounded by seas on all sides, except in the narrow isthmus through which is cut the Suez Canal, and may be considered as a great peninsula of the Eurasian continent.

North America, including Mexico, is a little less than twice the size of Europe. Its extreme longitudes extend from a little west of 170° W. to 52½° W. in the east of Newfoundland, and its extreme latitudes from about 80° N. lat. to 15° N. lat. in the south of Mexico. It is surrounded by seas on all sides except in the south, where it joins the Isthmian States of Central America, which have an area of about 200,000 square miles. The area of the West Indies is about 65,000 square miles, a little more than half that of the United Kingdom. They extend from about 27° N. latitude to 10° N. latitude.

South America is a little more than 1½ times the size of Europe. The extreme longitudes are Cape Branco 35° W. and Punta Parina 81° W., and the extreme latitudes, Punta Gallinas, 12½° N. and Cape Horn 56° S. South America is surrounded by the ocean, except where it is joined to Central America by the narrow isthmus through which is cut the Panama Canal.

Oceania extends over an area 1½ times the size of Europe, from Australia (in the West) to the most easterly islands of Polynesia, and from New Zealand (in the south) to the Sandwich Islands (Hawaii) in the north.

Countries and Their Capitals

The appended tables of area and population are based on such information as is immediately available.

With regard to areas it will be realized that no complete survey of many countries has yet been either achieved or even undertaken and that consequently accurate area figures are not available.

The populations given hereunder are derived from various sources; some have as their basis an authenticated census; some are official and some are unofficial estimates. In certain cases where later information becomes available during printing the new figures are given in the overseas sections of the ALMANACK. What has been said about the survey of many of the world's countries applies equally to the question of census.

THE SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD

- I. THE PYRAMIDS OF EGYPT.—From Gizeh (near Cairo) to a southern limit 60 miles distant. The oldest is that of Zoser, at Saggara, built about 2,700 B.C.. The Great Pyramid of Cheops covers more than 12 acres and was originally 481 ft. in height and 756 × 756 ft. at the base.
- II. THE HANGING GARDENS OF BABYLON.—Adjoining Nebuchadnezzar's palace, 60 miles south of Baghdad. Terraced gardens, ranging from 75 to 300 ft. above ground level, watered from storage tanks on the highest terrace.
- III. THE TOMB OF MAUSOLUS.—At Halicarnassus, in Asia Minor. Built by the widowed Queen Artemisia about 350 B.C. The memorial originated the term mausoleum.
- IV. THE TEMPLE OF DIANA AT EPHEBUS.—Ionic temple erected about 350 B.C. in honour of the goddess and burned by the Goths in A.D. 262.
- V. THE COLOSSUS OF RHODES.—A bronze statue of Apollo, set up about 280 B.C. According to legend it stood at the harbour entrance of the seaport of Rhodes.
- VI. THE STATUE OF JUPITER OLYMPUS.—At Olympia in the plain of Elis, constructed of marble inlaid with ivory and gold by the sculptor Phidias, about 430 B.C.
- VII. THE PHAROS OF ALEXANDRIA.—A marble watch tower and lighthouse on the island of Pharos in the harbour of Alexandria.

OCEAN AREAS AND DEPTHS

The greatest known Ocean Depth (in the Pacific, off the Philippines, 36,198 feet) is not much greater than the greatest land height (in the Himalayas); but the mean depth of the Ocean floor exceeds 12,000 feet, while the mean height of the surface of the land area of the Earth above sea level is only 2,300 feet. The following table gives the areas of the principal oceans and seas, with the greatest known depth of each:—

THE CINQUE PORTS

As their name implies the Cinque Ports were originally five in number, Hastings, New Romney, Hythe, Dover and Sandwich. They were in existence before the Norman Conquest and were the Anglo-Saxon successors to the Roman system of coast defence organized from the Wash to Spithead to resist Saxon onslaughts. William the Conqueror reconstituted them and granted peculiar jurisdiction, most of which was abolished in 1855. Only jurisdiction in Admiralty still survives.

At some time after the Conquest the "antient towns" of Winchelsea and Rye were added with equal privileges. The other members of the Confederation, known as Limbs, are:—Lydd, Faversham, Folkstone, Deal, Tenterden, Margate and Ramsgate.

The Barons of the Cinque Ports have the ancient privilege of attending the Coronation Ceremony and are allotted special places in Westminster Abbey.

SOME FAMOUS BRIDGES

Among the outstanding suspension bridges of the World are the Verrazano Narrows Bridge, New York (main span, 4,260 ft.); the Golden Gate Bridge, San Francisco (4,200 ft.); Mackinac Bridge, Michigan (3,800 ft.); Bosphorus, Turkey (3,523 ft.); George Washington Bridge, New York (3,500 ft.); the Ponte

Salazar (Tagus Bridge), Portugal (3,323 ft.); Forth Road Bridge, Scotland (3,300 ft.); Severn Bridge, England (3,240 ft.); Tacoma Bridge, Washington, U.S.A. (2,800 ft.); Orinoco Bridge, Venezuela (2,336 ft.) and the Kanmon Bridge, Japan (2,336 ft.). Lengths shown above are all those of the main or longest span. The Humber Bridge was opened in 1981 and has the longest single central span, 4,626 ft., of any suspension bridge in the world.

The Transbay Bridge (suspension and cantilever), crossing San Francisco Bay from Oakland to San Francisco is 7½ miles long, with spans of 2,310 ft. each. Among important steel arch bridges are the Bayonne Bridge, from New Jersey to Staten Island, U.S.A. (1,652 ft.); Sydney Harbour Bridge, Australia (1,650 ft.); the Runcorn-Widnes Bridge, England (1,082 ft.); and the Glen Canyon Bridge over the Colorado River, U.S.A. (1,028 ft.). Major concrete trestle bridges include the Lake Pontchartrain Causeway, U.S.A. of 2,170 spans extending 24 miles and the Oosterscheldebrug, Netherlands, 3½ miles long. Gladesville Bridge, Sydney, Australia, is a concrete arch bridge of 1,000 ft. span. The Tay Bridge in Scotland is a steel box girder bridge supported on twin piers (42 spans), 7,365 ft long.

The Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel (17.6 miles long) joining Cape Charles, Virginia, to Chesapeake Beach has 12.5 miles of concrete trestle bridge.

INLAND WATERWAYS.—The British Waterways Board are the navigational authority for nearly 2,000 miles of canals and river navigations in England, Scotland and Wales. Some 340 miles are maintained and are being developed as commercial waterways for use by freight-carrying vessels, and another 1,100 miles are being developed for boating, fishing and other amenities. Over a third has now been restored to full navigational use and other stretches are available to small boats. The Manchester Ship Canal, Bridgewater Canal, Rochdale Canal, River Thames and Fenland Waterways are among those which are the responsibility of other authorities.

DISTANCE OF THE HORIZON

The limit of distance to which one can see varies with the height of the spectator. The greatest distance at which an object on the surface of the sea, or of a level plain, can be seen by a person whose eyes are at a height of five feet from the same level is nearly three miles. At a height of 20 feet the range is increased to nearly six miles, and an approximate rule for finding the range of vision for small heights is to increase the square root of the number of feet that the eye is above the level surface by a third of itself, the result being the distance of the horizon in miles, but is slightly in excess of that in the table below, which is computed by a more precise formula. The table may be used conversely to show the distance of an object of given height that is just visible from a point in the surface of the earth or sea. Refraction is taken into account both in the approximate rule and in the Table.

At a height of	the range is	At a height of	the range is	At a height of	the range is
5 ft.	2.9 miles	500 ft.	29.5 miles	4,000 ft.	83.3 miles

WELSH SOVEREIGNS AND PRINCES

WALES was ruled by Sovereign Princes from the "earliest times" until the death of Llywelyn in 1282. The first English Prince of Wales was the son of Edward I, and was born in Caernarvon town on April 25, 1284. According to a discredited legend, he was presented to the Welsh chieftains as their Prince, in fulfilment of a promise that they should have a Prince who "could not speak a word of English" and should be native born. This son, who afterwards became Edward II, was created "Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester" at the famous Lincoln Parliament on February 7, 1301. The title Prince of Wales is borne after individual conferment and is not inherited at birth; it was conferred on Prince Charles by Her Majesty the Queen on July 26, 1958. He was invested at Caernarvon on July 1, 1969.

WOMEN

Women take the same rank as their husbands or as their eldest brothers; but the daughter of a Peer marrying a Commoner retains her title as Lady or Honourable. Daughters of Peers rank next immediately after the wives of their elder brothers, and before their younger brothers' wives. Daughters of Peers marrying Peers of lower degree take the same order of precedence as that of their husbands; thus the daughter of a Duke marrying a Baron becomes of the rank of Baroness only while her sisters married to commoners retain their rank and take precedence of the Baroness. Merely official rank on the husband's part does not give any similar precedence to the wife.

LOCAL PRECEDENCE

ENGLAND AND WALES.—No written code of county or city order of precedence has been promulgated, but in Counties the Lord Lieutenant stands first, and secondly (normally) the Sheriff, and therefore in Cities and Boroughs the Lord Lieutenant has social precedence over the Mayor; but at City or Borough functions the Lord Mayor or Mayor will preside. At Oxford and Cambridge the High Sheriff takes precedence of the Vice-Chancellor.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY, 1983

The date for the observance of the Queen's Birthday in 1983 both at home and abroad will be Saturday, June 11.

ROYAL SALUTES

On the Anniversaries of the Birth, Accession and Coronation of the Sovereign and on the Anniversaries of the birth of H.M. the Queen Mother and H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh a salute of 62 guns is fired on the wharf at the Tower of London.

On extraordinary and triumphal occasions, such as on the occasion of the Sovereign opening, pro-roguing or dissolving Parliament in Person, or when passing through London in procession, except when otherwise ordered, 41 guns only are fired.

On the occasion of the birth of a Royal infant a salute of 41 guns is fired from the two Saluting Stations in London, i.e. Hyde Park and the Tower of London.

Constable of the Royal Palace and Fortress of London, General Sir Peter Hunt, G.C.B., D.S.O., O.B.E. (1980).
Lieutenant of the Tower of London, Lt.-Gen. Sir Terence McMeekin, K.C.B., O.B.E.

Master Gunner of St. James's Park, General Sir Harry Tuzo, G.C.B., O.B.E., M.C. (1977).
Master Gunner within the Tower, Col. R. A. Burford, T.D.

THE ROYAL ARMS

QUARTERLY.—1st and 4th gules, three lions passant guardant in pale or (England); 2nd or, a lion rampant within a double tressure flory counter-flory gules (Scotland); 3rd azure, a harp or, stringed argent (Ireland); the whole encircled with the Garter.

SUPPORTERS.—Dexter: a lion rampant guardant or, imperially crowned. Sinister: a unicorn argent, armed crined and unguled or, gorged with a coronet composed of crosses patées and fleurs de lis, a chain affixed passing between the forelegs and reflexed over the back.

BADGES.—The red and white rose united (England), a thistle (Scotland); a harp or, the strings argent, with a shamrock leaf vert (Ireland); upon a mount vert, a dragon passant wings elevated gules (Wales).

THE UNION JACK

The national flag of the United Kingdom is the Union Flag, generally known as the Union Jack, the name deriving from the use of the Union Flag on the jack-staff of naval vessels. It is a combination of the cross of the patron saint of England, St. George (cross gules in a field argent), the cross of the patron saint of Scotland, St. Andrew (saltire argent in a field azure) and a cross similar to that of St. Patrick, patron saint of Ireland (saltire gules in a field argent). The Union Flag was first introduced in 1606 after the union of England and Scotland, the cross of St. Patrick being added in 1801.

ANNUITIES TO THE ROYAL FAMILY

The annuity payable to Her Majesty is known as the Civil List, and is payable out of the Consolidated Fund under the authority of a Civil List Act following the recommendation of a Parliamentary Select Committee. The amount of the Civil List was fixed in the Civil List Act 1952 at £475,000, was increased from January 1, 1972, under the Civil List Act 1972 to £980,000, and has been variously increased since.

The allocation for the calendar year 1982 was as follows:—

The Queen .....	£3,541,300
Queen Elizabeth The Queen Mother .....	306,600
The Duke of Edinburgh .....	171,100
Prince Andrew .....	20,000
Prince Edward .....	16,183
The Princess Anne .....	106,500
The Princess Margaret .....	104,500
Princess Alice, Duchess of Gloucester .....	42,000
* Duke of Gloucester .....	83,900
* Duke of Kent .....	113,000
* Princess Alexandra .....	107,800

	4,612,883
* Refunded by The Queen .....	304,700
Total .....	4,308,183

These figures combine the sums payable directly from the Consolidated Fund with the supplements provided by the Royal Trustees from the grant made to them in the vote for economic and financial administration in the Estimates.

THE FLYING OF FLAGS

Days for hoisting the Union Flag on Government and Public Buildings (from 8 A.M. to sunset).

February 6 (1952).—Her Majesty's Accession.

Nov. 20 (1947).—Her Majesty's Wedding Day.

Nov. 30.—St. Andrew's Day (in Scotland only).

And on the occasion of the opening and closing of Parliament by the Queen, flags should be flown on public buildings in the Greater London area, whether or not Her Majesty performs the ceremony in person.

The only additions to the above list will be those notified to the Department of the Environment by Her Majesty's command and communicated by the Ministry to the other Departments. The list applies equally to Government and Public Buildings in London and elsewhere in the United Kingdom. In cases where it has been the practice to fly the Union Jack daily, e.g. on some Custom Houses, that practice may continue.

Flags will be flown at half-mast on the following occasions:...

(a) From the announcement of the death up to the funeral of the Sovereign, except on Proclamation Day, when they are hoisted right up from 11 A.M. to sunset.

(b) The funerals of members of the Royal Family, subject to special commands from Her Majesty in each case.

(c) The funerals of Foreign Rulers, subject to special commands from Her Majesty in each case.

(d) The funerals of Prime Ministers and ex-Prime Ministers of the United Kingdom.

(e) Other occasions by special command of Her Majesty.

On occasions when days for flying flags coincide with days for flying flags at half mast the following rules will be observed. Flags will be flown: (a) although a member of the Royal Family, or a near relative of the Royal Family, may be lying dead, unless special commands be received from Her Majesty to the contrary, and (b) although it may be the day of the funeral of a Foreign Ruler. If the body of a very distinguished subject is lying at a Government Office the flag may fly at half mast on that office until the body has left (provided it is a day on which the flag would fly) and then the flag is to be hoisted right up. On all other Public Buildings the flag will fly as usual.

The Royal Standard is only to be hoisted when the Queen is actually present in the building, and never when Her Majesty is passing in procession.

THE MILITARY KNIGHTS OF WINDSOR

Founded in 1348 after the Wars in France to assist English Knights, who, having been prisoners in the hands of the French, had become impoverished by the payments of heavy ransoms. They received a pension and quarters in Windsor Castle. Edward III founded the Order of the Garter later in the same year, incorporating the Knights of Windsor and the College of St. George into its foundation and raising the number of Knights to 26 to correspond with the number of the Knights of the Garter. Known later as the Alms Knights or Poor Knights of Windsor, their establishment was reduced under the will of King Henry VIII to 13 and Statutes were drawn up by Queen Elizabeth I.

In 1833 King William IV changed their designation to The Military Knights and granted them their present uniform which consists of a scarlet tail-coat with white cross sword-belt, crimson sash and cocked hat with plume. The badges are the Shield of St. George and the Star of the Order of the Garter. The Knights receive a small stipend in addition to their Army pensions and quarters in Windsor Castle. They take part in all ceremonies of the Noble Order of the Garter and attend Sunday morning service in St. George's Chapel as representatives of the Knights of the Garter.

Applications for appointment should be made to The Military Secretary, Ministry of Defence, Army Dept. Governor, Maj.-Gen. Sir Peter Gillett, K.C.V.O., C.B., O.B.E.

Military Knights, Lt.-Colonel R. J. L. Penfold; Lt.-Colonel R. W. Dobbin, O.B.E.; Major H. Smith, M.B.E.; Lt.-Colonel A. R. Clark, M.C.; Lt.-Colonel C. A. Harvey; Major A. E. Wollaston, M.V.O.; Brigadier A. L. Atkinson, O.B.E.; Brigadier A. C. Tyler, C.B.E., M.C.; Major W. L. Thompson, M.B.E., D.C.M.; Major L. W. Dickerson; Major J. C. Cowley.

THE PEERAGE

The rules which govern the creation and succession of Peerages are extremely complicated. There were separate Peerages of England, of Scotland, and of Ireland, until the unions of the three countries: of England and Scotland, forming Great Britain, in 1707; and of Great Britain and Ireland, forming the United Kingdom, in 1801. Some Scottish Peers received additional Peerages of Great Britain or of the United Kingdom, since 1707; and some Irish Peers additional Peerages of the United Kingdom since 1801.

All Peers of England, Scotland, Great Britain, or the United Kingdom who are of full age and of British nationality are entitled to seats in the House of Lords. But Peers of Ireland who have no additional United Kingdom Peerage are not entitled to sit, although they are eligible for election to the House of Commons and to vote (if of voting age) in Parliamentary elections (which other Peers are not). The two Archbishops and 23 of the diocesan Bishops of the Church of England also have seats in the House of Lords.

Certain ancient Peerages pass on death to the nearest heir, male or female, and several are now held by women who are thus Peeresses in their own Right. They are entitled to sit in the House of Lords if they are of full age and British nationality.

Since 1876 the Crown has conferred non-hereditary or Life Peerages in the degree of Baron on eminent judges to enable them to carry out the judicial function of the House of Lords. They are known as Law Lords. Under an Act passed in 1958 the Crown may confer Life Peerages on men and women giving them, in the degree of Baron or Baroness, seats in the House of Lords.

In 1963 an Act was passed enabling Peers to disclaim their Peerages for life: living Peers, within 12 months after the passing of the Act (July 31, 1963), future Peers within 12 months (one month if an M.P.) after the date of their succession, or of attaining their majority if later.

No fees for Dignities have been payable since 1937. No hereditary Peerages have been created since 1964.

CONTRACTIONS AND SYMBOLS

Contractions and Symbols.—S. or I. appended to the date of creation denotes a Scottish or Irish title, the further addition of a * implies that the Peer in question holds also an Imperial title, which is specified (after the name) by its more definite description as Engl., Brit., or U.K. When both titles are alike, as in the case of Argyll, this star is appended to the conjoined date below, and it then denotes that such date is that of the imperial creation. The mark ° signifies that there is no "of" in the Marquessate or Earldom so designated; b. signifies born; s., succeeded; m., married; w., widower or widow; M., minor; † Information on Eldest Son or Heir not ascertained at time of going to press.

PEERESSES IN THEIR OWN RIGHT

Peerages are occasionally granted immediately to ladies of distinction or the widows of distinguished men; but frequently the instances falling under this heading are the result of regular inheritance in lines which are open to females in default of males. A Peeress in her Own Right retains her title after marriage, and if her husband's rank is the superior she is designated by the two titles jointly, the inferior one last: her hereditary claim still holds good in spite of any marriage whether higher or lower. No rank held by a woman can confer any title or even precedence upon her husband but the rank of a Peeress in her Own Right is inherited by her eldest son (or perhaps daughter), to whomsoever she may have been married.

THE PREFIX RIGHT HONOURABLE

"Right Honourable."—By long established custom, or courtesy, members of her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council are entitled to be designated "The Right Honourable," but, in practice, this prefix is sometimes absorbed in other designations; for example, a Prince of the Blood admitted a Privy Councillor remains "His Royal Highness"; a Duke remains "His Grace"; a Marquess is still styled "Most Honourable". The style of all other Peers whether Privy Councillors or not, is "Right Honourable", although it is more usual to describe them with the prefix "The", omitting the more elaborate styles. A Privy Councillor who is not a Peer should be addressed as The Right (or Rt.) Hon.—. A Peer below the rank of Marquess who is a Privy Councillor should be addressed as The Right (or Rt.) Hon. the Lord (or Earl or Viscount)—, p.c., or, less elaborately, The Lord (or Earl or Viscount)—p.c.

THE ORDER OF ST. JOHN

The Most Venerable Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem

St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, E.C.1

Grand Prior, H.R.H. The Duke of Gloucester, G.C.V.O.

Lord Prior, Sir Maurice Dorman, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. Chancellor, The Earl St. Aldwyn, P.C., K.B.E., T.D.

COURTESY TITLES (in actual existence in 1982)

Holders of Courtesy Titles are addressed in the same manner as holders of substantive titles.

*From this list it will be seen that, for example, the "Marquess of Blandford" is heir to the Dukedom of Marlborough, and "Viscount Althorp" to the Earldom of Spencer. Titles of second heirs are also given, and the Courtesy Title of the father of a second heir is indicated by *; e.g., Earl of Burlington, eldest son of *Marquess of Hartington.*

THE PRIVY COUNCIL

The Privy Council consists of certain eminent persons whose names are given below. Members of the Cabinet must be Privy Counsellors, and they principally form the active Privy Council. The Council is summoned as such to act "with others" upon the demise of the Crown, and many matters are referred by the Sovereign to Committees of the Council, some of which are standing Committees, and others constituted to deal with particular cases, e.g. the Judicial Committee.

BARONETS, KNIGHTS GRAND CROSS, KNIGHTS GRAND COMMANDERS, KNIGHTS COMMANDERS AND KNIGHTS BACHELOR

of England, Great Britain, U.K.,
(and Ireland marked 1.)

Badge of Baronets of Scotland or Nova Scotia
(marked s. or n.s.).

NOTES CONCERNING BARONETS

Clause II. of the Royal Warrant of February 8, 1910, ordains as follows:—"That no person whose name is not entered upon the Official Roll shall be received as a Baronet, or shall be addressed or mentioned by that title in any Civil or Military Commission, Letters Patent or other official document." When an obelisk (†) precedes a name it indicates that, at the time of going to press, the Baronet concerned has not been registered on the Official Roll of the Baronetage. The date of creation of the Baronetcy is given in parenthesis ( ).

Baronets are addressed as "Sir" (with Christian name) and in writing as "Sir Robert A—, Bt." Baronet's wives are addressed (formally) as "Your Ladyship" or "Lady A—," without any Christian name unless a daughter of a Duke, Marquess or Earl, in which case "The Lady Mary A—"; if daughter of a Viscount or Baron "The Hon. Lady A—."

NOTES CONCERNING KNIGHTS GRAND CROSS, ETC.

Knights Grand Cross, Knights Grand Commanders and Knights Commanders are addressed in the same manner as Baronets (q.v.), but in writing the appropriate initials (G.C.B., K.C.B., &c.) are appended to surname after "Bt." if they are also baronets or in place of "Bt." if they are not. Knights Bachelor are addressed as "Sir — (first or Christian name)" and in writing as "Sir — B —." The wife of a Knight Grand Cross, Knight Grand Commander, Knight Commander or Knight Bachelor is addressed as stated for the wife of a Baronet.

NOTES CONCERNING KNIGHTS BACHELOR

The Knights Bachelor do not constitute a Royal Order, but comprise the surviving representation of the ancient State Orders of Knighthood. The Register of Knights Bachelor, instituted by James I. in the 17th century, lapsed, and in 1908 a voluntary Association under the title of "The Society of Knights" (now "The Imperial Society of Knights Bachelor" by Royal command) was formed with the primary objects of continuing the various registers dating from 1257 and obtaining the uniform registration of every created Knight Bachelor. In 1926 a design for a badge to be worn by Knights Bachelor was approved and adopted, a miniature reproduction being shown above; in 1974 a neck badge and miniature were added. The Officers of the Society are:—Knight Principal, Sir Anthony Wagner, K.C.B., K.C.V.O.; Deputy Knight Principal, Sir Gilbert Inglefield, G.B.E., T.D.; Prelate, Rt. Rev. G. A. Ellison, P.C., K.C.V.O.; Hon. Registrar, Sir Arthur Driver; Hon. Treasurer, Sir John Howard; Registry and Library, 21 Old Buildings, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.2.

BARONETAGE AND KNIGHTAGE

Dames Grand Cross and Dames Commanders of the Order of the Bath, the Order of St. Michael and St. George, the Royal Victorian Order and the Order of the British Empire

NOTE.—Dames Grand Cross (G.C.B., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. or G.B.E.) and Dames Commanders (D.C.B., D.C.M.G., D.C.V.O. or D.B.E.) are addressed in a manner similar to that of Knights Grand Cross or Knights Commanders, e.g. "Miss Florence Smith" after receiving the honour would be addressed as "Dame Florence", and in writing as "Dame Florence Smith, G. (or D.) C.B., G. (or D.) C.M.G., G. (or D.) C.V.O., or G. (or D.) B.E." Where such award is made to a lady already in enjoyment of a higher title the appropriate letters are appended to her name, e.g. "The Countess of — G.C.V.O." Peeresses in their own right, and Life Peeresses, are not included in this list. Dames Grand Cross rank after wives of Baronets and before wives of Knights Grand Cross. Dames Commanders rank after the wives of Knights Grand Cross and before the wives of Knights Commanders.

THE VICTORIA CROSS, V.C.

FOR CONSPICUOUS BRAVERY

The ribbon is Crimson for all Services (until 1918 it was Blue for Royal Navy).

Instituted on January 29, 1856, the Victoria Cross was awarded retrospectively to 1854, the first being held by Lieut. C. D. Lucas, R.N. for bravery in the Baltic Sea on June 21, 1854 (gazetted Feb. 24, 1857). The first 62 Crosses were presented by Queen Victoria in Hyde Park, London, on June 26, 1857.

The V.C. is worn before all other decorations, on the left breast, and consists of a cross-pattée of bronze, 1½ inches in diameter, with the Royal Crown surmounted by a lion in the centre, and beneath there is the inscription "For Valour." Holders of the V.C. receive a tax-free annuity of £100, irrespective of need or other conditions. In 1911, the right to receive the Cross was extended to Indian soldiers, and in 1920 a Royal Warrant extended the right to Matrons, Sisters and Nurses, and the Staff of the Nursing Services and other services pertaining to Hospitals and Nursing, and to Civilians of either sex regularly or temporarily under the orders, direction or supervision of the Naval, Military, or Air Forces of the Crown.

THE GEORGE CROSS, G.C. (1940)

FOR GALLANTRY

The ribbon is dark blue threaded through a bar adorned with laurel leaves.

INSTITUTED September, 24th, 1940 (with amendments, November 3rd, 1942).

The George Cross is worn before all other decorations (except the V.C.) on the left breast § and consists of a plain silver cross with four equal limbs, the cross having in the centre a circular medallion bearing a design showing St. George and the Dragon. The inscription "For Gallantry" appears round the medallion and in the angle of each limb of the cross is the Royal cypher "G VI" forming a circle concentric with the medallion. The reverse is plain and bears the name of the recipient and the date of the award. The cross is suspended by a ring from a bar adorned with laurel leaves on dark blue ribbon 1½ inches wide.

The cross is intended primarily for civilians and awards to the fighting services are confined to actions for which purely military honours are not normally granted. It is awarded only for acts of the greatest heroism or of the most conspicuous courage in circumstances of extreme danger. From April 1, 1965, holders of the Cross have received a tax-free annuity of £100.

§ When worn by a woman it may be worn on the left shoulder from a ribbon of the same width and colour fashioned into a bow.

Empire Gallantry Medal.—The Royal Warrant which ordained that the grant of the Empire Gallantry Medal should cease authorized holders of that medal to return it to the Central Chancery of the Orders of Knighthood and to receive in exchange the George Cross. A similar provision applied to posthumous awards of the Empire Gallantry Medal made after the outbreak of war in 1939.

In October 1971 all surviving holders of the Albert Medal and the Edward Medal exchanged those decorations for the George Cross.

THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE ORDER (1886)—D.S.O.

Ribbon, Red, with Blue Edges.

Bestowed in recognition of especial services in action of commissioned officers in the Navy, Army and Royal Air Force and (1942) Mercantile Marine. The members are Companions only and rank immediately before the 4th Class of the Royal Victorian Order. A Bar may be awarded for any additional act of service.

THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION

THE EXECUTIVE

The Crown (the Queen in Council) "makes peace and war, issues charters, increases the peerage, is the fountain of honour, of office, and of justice." The Sovereign entrusts the executive power to Ministers of the Crown, appointed on the advice of the accredited leader of the party in Parliament which enjoys, or can secure, a majority of votes in the House of Commons.

The Cabinet

The Cabinet has no corporate existence, but under the Ministers of the Crown Act (1937) provision was made for 17 Ministers of the first rank (Cabinet Ministers) and this number has been increased by later legislation. The Ministers of the Crown (Parliamentary Secretaries) Act (1960) laid down an aggregate limit of 33 Parliamentary Secretaries. Parts of these Acts were repealed by the Ministers of the Crown Act (1964) which varied the number of Parliamentary Secretaries (other than Treasury Secretaries) to 36.

The Prime Minister

The Prime Minister is appointed by the Sovereign. When a party is in opposition and its leadership becomes vacant it makes its free choice among the various personalities available; but if the party is in office, the Sovereign's choice may anticipate, and in a certain sense forestall, the decision of the party. In 1905 the office of Prime Minister, which had been in existence for nearly 200 years, was officially recognized and its holder was granted a place in the Table of Precedence.

The Leader of the Opposition

In 1937 the office of Leader of the Opposition was similarly recognized and a salary of £2,000 per annum was assigned to the post, thus following a practice which had prevailed in the Dominion of Canada since 1906. In July 1982 the salary was £26,575. The present Leader of the Opposition is the Right Hon. Michael Foot.

LEGISLATION

Legislation is initiated in the Houses of Parliament in the form of Bills. Public Bills are of two kinds, those introduced by the Government of the day, and those introduced by a private member. A Bill (except a Money Bill, which must originate in the House of Commons) can be introduced in either House and when presented receives its First Reading, after which it is printed and circulated to members. The next stage is the Second Reading, in the debate on which the broad issues raised are discussed. If passed it reaches the Committee Stage and is referred to a Committee (of the whole House, Select, or Standing). Bills of major importance are usually sent to a Committee of the whole House. In committee, a Bill is discussed clause by clause, and is returned to the House with or without amendment. A Private Bill, which is introduced to enable an individual or a body corporate to acquire or vary certain powers, is referred to a Select Committee, and if opposed, witnesses may be called and counsel heard by the Committee. The next step is the Report Stage, when the Bill is accepted by the House, or sent back to the same, or sent back to another Committee for further consideration. Finally the Bill receives its Third Reading (during which, in the House of Commons, only verbal amendments are permissible) and is sent to the other House. When a Bill has been passed by both Houses it becomes an Act of Parliament, on receiving the Royal Assent, which is signified by the Sovereign on the Throne, or by Commissioners (normally three Peers), in the Chamber of the House of Lords. The power to withhold assent (colloquially known as the Royal Veto) resides in the Sovereign, but has not been exercised in the United Kingdom since 1707, in the reign of Queen Anne.

COUNCILLORS OF STATE

On every occasion that the Sovereign leaves the realm for distant parts of the Commonwealth or a foreign country, it is necessary to appoint Councillors of State under Letters Patent to carry out the chief functions of the Monarch, including the holding of Privy Councils and the signature of Acts passed by Parliament. The normal procedure is to appoint as Councillors three or four members of the Royal Family among those remaining in the United Kingdom. For instance, during the Queen's visit to Canada in 1967, the Councillors of State were the Prince of Wales, Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother, Princess Margaret and the Duke of Gloucester.

In the event of the Sovereign on accession being under the age of eighteen years or at any time unavailable or incapacitated by infirmity of mind or body for the performance of the royal functions, provision is made for a Regency. Since the Prince of Wales attained the age of 18 in November 1966, the provisions of the Regency Act as to age no longer apply in the event of his accession to the throne.

THE HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT

Parliament emerged during the late thirteenth and early fourteenth centuries as a result of diverse forces including the general need for a superior court to deal with legal and administrative problems on a national basis, the financial needs of the Crown, ambition of the baronage to influence the King's government and the King's desire to make his government more effective by involving in it all important sections of the community. The nucleus of early Parliaments were the officers of the King's household and the King's judges, who were joined by such ecclesiastical and lay magnates as the King might summon and occasionally by the knights of the shire, burgesses and proctors of the lower clergy. The Commons were summoned to all the Parliaments of Edward III and by the end of the reign a "House of Commons" was beginning to appear. The first known Speaker was elected in 1377. The House of Lords is the ultimate Court of Appeal for all Courts in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, except for criminal cases in Scotland. The Lords surrendered the ancient right of peers to be tried for treason or felony by their peers in 1948. Each House has the right to control its own internal proceedings and to commit for contempt.

The Commons claim exclusive control in respect of national taxation and expenditure and in respect of local rates and charges upon them. Bills such as the Finance Bill, which imposes taxation, and the Consolidated Fund Bills, which authorize expenditure, and are commonly known as Supply Bills, must begin in the Commons and have not been amended by the Lords in any respect in modern times. A bill of which the financial provisions are subsidiary may begin in the Lords; and the Commons may waive their rights in regard to Lords amendments affecting finance.

Normally a bill must be agreed to by both Houses before it receives the Royal Assent, but under the Parliament Acts, 1911 and 1949—(a) a bill which the Speaker has certified as a Money Bill, i.e. as concerned solely with national taxation, expenditure or borrowing, if not agreed to by the Lords within one month of its being sent to them, receives the Royal Assent and becomes law without their concurrence; (b) any other public bill (except one to extend the life of a Parliament) which has been passed by the Commons in two successive sessions and twice rejected by the Lords, receives the Royal Assent and becomes law, provided that one year has elapsed between its Second Reading in the first session and its Third Reading in the second session in the Commons.

The Parliament Act of 1911 also limited the duration of Parliament, if not previously dissolved, to 5 years. The term is reckoned from the date given on the writs for the new Parliament. During the War of 1914–18 the duration of Parliament was extended by successive Acts from 5 to 8 years, but a General Election was held before the end of the term finally prescribed and the Parliament which first met on Jan. 31, 1911, was dissolved on Nov. 25, 1918. At the outbreak of war in 1939 a similar course was followed and Parliament which first met on Nov. 26, 1935, was not dissolved until June 15, 1945.

Payment of Members.—Members of the House of Lords are unpaid. They are entitled to reimbursement of travelling expenses between their homes and London on parliamentary business and to recover certain other expenses incurred for the purpose of attendance at sittings of the House with a maximum for each day of £25.40 for overnight subsistence, £12.10 for day subsistence and incidental travel and £11.00 for secretarial costs, postage and certain additional expenses.

Since 1911 Members of the House of Commons have received payments and travelling facilities. Their salary of £400 was increased to £600 in 1937, to £1,000 in 1947, to £1,750 in 1957, to £3,250 in 1964, to £4,500 in January 1972, to £5,750 in June 1975, to £6,062 in June 1976, to £6,270 in July 1977, to £6,897 in June 1978, to £9,450 in June 1979, to £10,725 in June 1980, to £13,950 in June 1981 and to £14,510 in June 1982; they are entitled to claim income tax relief on expenses incurred in the course of their Parliamentary duties. In October 1969 Members were allowed to claim up to £500 a year for secretarial expenses; the allowance was increased to £1,000 a year from January 1972, to £1,750 a year from August 1, 1974, to £3,200 a year from June 1975, to £3,512 a year from June 1976, to £3,687 a year from June 1977, to £4,200 a year from June 1978, to £4,600 a year from June 1979, to £6,750 a year from February 1980, to £8,000 a year from August 1980, to £8,480 a year from June 1981 and to £8,820 a year from June 1982. Also since January 1972, Members can claim reimbursement for the additional cost of staying overnight away from their main residence while on Parliamentary business; this was limited to £750 a year in 1972 and increased to £1,050 a year in August 1974, to £1,814 a year from July 1975, to £2,038 a year from July 1976, to £2,534 a year from July 1977, to £3,046 a year from July 1978, to £3,866 a year from July 1979 and to £4,903 a year from August 1980 and to £5,206 a year from August 1981. From March 1980 provision was made enabling each Member in receipt of Secretarial and Research Allowance to contribute sums to an approved pension scheme for the provision of a pension, or other benefits, for or in respect of persons whose salary is met by him. The maximum sum available was fixed at £786 for the year ending 31 March 1981; this was increased to £838 to March 1982 and to £848 to March 1983. The cost of travel allowances for 1980/81 was stated in July 1981 to be £2,129,000 (car mileage claims £1,512,045, rail travel £366,670 and air travel £250,285).

The Members' Pensions Act 1965 introduced the first comprehensive pension scheme providing Members of Parliament and their dependants with a legal right to a pension. Under the Parliamentary and Other Pensions Act 1972 the pension scheme was modified to include provision for Ministers and other office holders. The Scheme was further amended in 1976 under the terms of the Parliamentary and other Pensions and Salaries Act 1976 to provide for pensions to be based on a notional pensionable salary of £8,000 notwithstanding that a lower rate of salary was actually authorised for payment. The Parliamentary Pensions Act 1978 further modified earlier acts to provide, inter alia, for ill-health retirement pensions and for the improvement in the level of benefits payable to widows and widowers of Members in certain circumstances. The pension scheme is funded by an Exchequer contribution of approximately two and three quarters times the contributions paid by, or on behalf of, a participant which is 6 per cent of salary per annum (currently 6 per cent of £14,510 or £870 per annum). Members receive pensions from age 65, or on ceasing to be a Member if later, provided they have served for 4 years or more. Pensions are based on one sixtieth of salary for each year of reckonable service. The House of Commons Members' Fund provides for annual or lump sum grants to ex-Members, their widows and children whose incomes are below certain limits. Alternatively payments of £1,060 per annum to ex-Members with at least ten years' service and who left the House of Commons before October 1964 and £530 per annum to their widows are made as of right. Members contribute £24 per annum and the Exchequer up to £215,000 per annum to the Fund. The estimated income of the Fund in 1980-81 was £163,177, and the estimated expenditure on grants and payments was £66,711. The estimated capital account in 1981 was £421,638.

THE HOUSE OF LORDS

The House of Lords consists of Lords Spiritual and Temporal. The Lords Spiritual are the two Archbishops, the Bishops of London, Durham and Winchester, and the 21 Senior Bishops from the remaining English sees. The Lords Temporal are: Peers and Peeresses in their own right by descent of England, Scotland, Great Britain or the United Kingdom, hereditary peers of first creation, Lords of Appeal in Ordinary and retired Lords of Appeal in Ordinary (who are life peers), and Life Peers and Life Peeresses created under the Life Peerages Act, 1958. Under the Peerage Act, 1963, a person inheriting a peerage may within one year (or one month in the case of a Member of the House of Commons) disclaim the peerage for life. The subsequent descent of the peerage after his death is not affected.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

By the Representation of the People Act (1885) membership was increased from 658 (at which it had stood since 1801 through the Act of Union with Ireland) to 670, and by a similar Act (1918) it was increased to 707. By the Government of Ireland Act (1920) and the Irish Free State Agreement Act (1922) membership was decreased to 615, Irish representation being reduced from 105 to 13 members. By the Representation of the People Act of 1945 25 new constituencies were created, making the total 640; and by a similar Act of 1948 the total membership was reduced to 625. As the result of Orders in Council made in 1955 under the House of Commons (Redistribution of Seats) Act, 1949, the total membership was increased to 630 and under the same Act provision was made in 1970 for further increase to 635. The House of Commons (Redistribution of Seats) Act 1979 provides for the increase of Northern Ireland representation from 12 to 16, 17 or 18, and the total to 639-641, although it has not yet come into effect.

THE PALACE OF WESTMINSTER

An ordinance issued in the reign of Richard II stated that "Parliament shall be holden or kept wheresoever it pleaseth the King" and at the present day the Sovereign summons parliament to meet and prescribes the time and place of meeting. The royal palace of Westminster, originally built by Edward the Confessor (Westminster Hall being added by William Rufus), was the normal place of Parliament from about 1340. St. Stephen's Chapel (first mentioned in the reign of John) was used from about 1550 for the meetings of the House of Commons, which had previously been held in the Chapter House or Refectory of Westminster Abbey. The House of Lords met in an apartment of the royal palace.

The disastrous fire of 1834 destroyed the whole palace, except Westminster Hall, and the present Houses of Parliament were erected on the site from the designs of Sir Charles Barry and Augustus Pugin, between the years 1840 and 1867, at a cost of £2,198,000.

The Chamber of the House of Commons was destroyed by enemy action in 1941 and the foundation stone of a new building, from the designs of Sir Giles

Gilbert Scott, was laid by the Speaker on May 26, 1948. The new Chamber was used for the first time on Oct. 26, 1950.

The Victoria Tower of the House of Lords is 330 feet high and when Parliament is sitting the Union Jack flies from sunrise to sunset from its flagstaff. The clock tower of the House of Commons is 316 feet high and contains "Big Ben," the 13½-ton hour bell named after Sir Benjamin Hall, First Commissioner of Works when the original bell was cast in 1856. The dials of the clock are 23 feet in diameter, the hands being 9 feet and 14 feet long (including balance piece). The chimes and strike of "Big Ben" have achieved world-wide fame from broadcasting.

A light is displayed in the clock tower from sundown to sunrise during the hours the House is in session.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR

The Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain is (although not addressed as such) the Speaker of the House of Lords. Unlike the Speaker of the House of Commons, he takes part in debates and votes in divisions. He sits on one of the Woolsacks, couches covered with red cloth and stuffed with wool. If the Lord Chancellor wishes to address the house in any way except formally as Speaker, he leaves the Woolsack and steps towards his proper place as a peer, below the Royal Dukes.

PRIME MINISTER'S RESIDENCE

Number 10, Downing Street, S.W.1, is the official town residence of the Prime Minister, No. 11 of the Chancellor of the Exchequer and No. 12 is the office of the Government Whips. The street was named after Sir George Downing, Bt., soldier and diplomatist, who was M.P. for Morpeth from 1660 to 1684.

Chequers, a Tudor mansion in the Chilterns, about 3 miles from Princes Risborough, was presented together with a maintenance endowment by Lord and Lady Lee of Fareham in 1917 to serve, from Jan. 1, 1921, as a country residence for the Prime Minister of the day, the Chequers estate of 700 acres being added to the gift by Lord Lee in 1921. The mansion contains a famous collection of Cromwellian portraits and relics.

PARLIAMENTARY INFORMATION

The following is a short glossary of aspects of work of Parliament:

Adjournment Debate.—Usually a half-hour debate introduced by a backbencher at the end of business for the day. The subjects raised are often local or personal issues.

Bill.—Proposed legislation is termed a Bill. The stages of a Public Bill in the House of Commons are as follows:

First Reading: There is no debate at this stage, which nowadays merely constitutes an order to have the Bill printed.

Second Reading: The debate on the principle of the Bill.

Committee Stage: The detailed examination of a Bill. In most cases this takes place in a Standing Committee, but the whole House may act as a Committee.

Report Stage: Detailed review of a Bill as amended in Committee.

Third Reading: Final debate on a Bill.

Public Bills go through the same stages in the House of Lords, except that in almost all cases the Committee Stage is taken in the Committee of the Whole House.

Some Public Bills may start in the House of Lords, in which case the Lords stages are taken first.

Both Houses have to agree the same text of a Bill, so that the Amendments made by the second House are then considered in the originating House and if not agreed, sent back or themselves amended, until agreement is reached.

Chiltern Hundreds.—A legal fiction, a nominal office of profit under the Crown, the acceptance of which requires a Member to vacate his seat. The Manor of Northstead is similar. These are the only means by which an M.P. may resign.

Closure & Guillotine.—To prevent deliberate waste of time of either house, a motion may be made that the question be now put. In the House of Commons, if the Speaker decides that the rights of a minority are not being prejudiced and 100 members support the motion, it is put to the vote immediately, and, if carried, the original motion is put to the House, without further debate. The Guillotine represents a more rigorous and systematic application of the Closure. Under this system, a Bill proceeds in accordance with a rigid timetable and discussion is limited to the time allotted to each group of clauses. The Closure is possible in the House of Lords, but is hardly ever used. There is, however, no procedure for a guillotine. The completion of business in the Lords is traditionally ensured by mutual agreement from all sides of the House.

Consolidated Fund Bill.—A Bill to authorize issue of sums to maintain Government service. On the second reading of these bills in the Commons Members raise wide-ranging matters. An unofficial ballot is employed to determine who shall speak.

Delegated Legislation.—This consists, principally, of Statutory Instruments within the meaning of the Statutory Instruments Act 1946. These fall into three broad categories:—(i) "Affirmative Instruments", which are subject to approval by resolutions of both Houses before they can come into or remain in force; (ii) "Negative Instruments", which are subject to annulment by resolution of either House; and (iii) "General Instruments", which include those not required to be laid before Parliament and those which are required to be so laid but are not subject to approval or annulment. There are in addition Special Procedure Orders, which are another form of delegated legislation, subject to procedures which allow time for petitions to be lodged against them.

Dissolution.—Parliament comes to an end either by Dissolution by the Sovereign or the expiration of the term of five years for which the House of Commons was elected. Dissolution is normally effected by a Royal Proclamation.

Early Day Motion.—A motion put on the Order Paper by an M.P. without in general the real prospect of its being debated. Such motions are expressions of backbench opinion.

Emergency Debate.—In the Commons a method of obtaining prompt discussion of a matter of urgency is by moving the adjournment under Standing Order No. 9 for the purpose of discussing a specific and important matter that should have urgent consideration. A member may ask leave to make this motion by giving written notice to the Speaker, usually before 12 noon, and if the Speaker considers the matter of sufficient importance and it obtains the support of 40 members, it is discussed usually at 7 p.m. on the following day.

Father of the House.—The Member whose service in the House of Commons, in aggregate, is the longest. The present Father of the House is Mr. J. Parker, elected first for Romford in 1935.

General Synod Measure.—A measure passed by the General Synod of the Church of England under the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919. These measures, once considered by the Ecclesiastical Committee, who make a report, are then considered by both Houses, and if approved, sent for the Royal Assent.

Hansard.—The official report of debates in both Houses (and in Standing Committees) published by H.M.S.O., normally on the day after the sitting concerned.

Hours of Meeting.—The House of Commons meets on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 2.30 p.m., and on Friday at 9.30 a.m. The House of Lords normally meets during the Session at 2.30 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday, and at 3 p.m. on Thursday. In the latter part of the Session, the House usually sits also on Mondays at 2.30 p.m., and occasionally on Fridays at 11 a.m.

Hybridity.—The doctrine of hybridity is difficult to define, but the principle behind it is that an individual singled out by a Public Bill for adverse treatment should be allowed to plead his cause to a Select Committee on a Petition against the Bill or against those provisions of the Bill that will affect him. A Public Bill which is identified as affecting an individual in such a way is known as a hybrid Bill.

The Lord Chancellor is Speaker of the House of Lords. He is a member of the Government, and has none of the powers to maintain order that the Speaker of the House of Commons has. (These powers, in the Lords, are exercised by the House as a whole.) A panel of Deputy Speakers is appointed by Royal Commission. The Chairman of Committees is a salaried officer of the House who takes the chair in Committee of the Whole House and in some Select Committees. He is assisted by a panel of Deputy Chairmen, headed by the salaried Principal Deputy Chairman of Committees, who is also Chairman of the European Communities Committee of the House.

Naming.—When a member has been named, i.e. contrary to the practice of the House called by surname and not addressed as the "Hon. Member for ... (his constituency)", the Leader of the House moves that he "be suspended from the service of the House" for (in the case of a first offence) a period of a week. The period of suspension is increased, should the member offend again.

Parliament Acts 1911 and 1949.—Under these Acts certain Bills may become law without the consent of the Lords.

Since at least the 18th century the Commons have had the privilege of having bills concerned with supply (i.e. taxation and money matters) passed without amendment by the Lords; though until 1911 the Lords retained the right to reject such bills outright.

By the Parliament Act 1911 a Bill which has been endorsed by the Speaker of the House of Commons as a Money Bill and has been passed by the Commons and sent up to the Lords at least one month before the end of a session can become law without the consent of the Lords if it is not passed by them without amendment within a month.

Under the Parliament Act 1911 and 1949, if the Lords reject any other Public Bill (except those dealing with certain subjects such as the prolongation of Parliament) which has been passed by the Commons in two successive sessions then that Bill shall (unless the Commons direct to the contrary) become law without the consent of the Lords.

The effect of the Parliament Acts is therefore that the Lords have power to delay a Public Bill for thirteen months from its first Second Reading in the House of Commons.

Private Bill.—A Bill promoted by a body or an individual to give powers additional to, or in conflict with, the general law, and to which a separate procedure applies.

Private Members' Bill.—A Public Bill promoted by a Member who is not a member of H.M. Government.

Private Notice Question.—A question adjudged of urgent importance on submission to Mr. Speaker, answered at the end of oral questions—usually at 3.30 p.m.

Privilege.—There are certain rights and jurisdictions peculiar to each House of Parliament, but privileges in their accepted meaning are common to both Houses. The right of imprisoning persons who commit what are in the opinion of the House concerned breaches of privilege is beyond question, and such persons cannot be admitted to bail nor is any Court competent to investigate the causes of committal. Breaches of privilege may be described briefly as disobedience to the orders of either House; assaults or insults to Members or libels on them; and interference with the officers of the House in the carrying out of their duties. The House of Lords may imprison for a period or inflict a fine, but the House of Commons only commits generally and the commitment ceases on the prorogation of Parliament. The Bill of Rights established the principle that "freedom of speech and debates and proceedings in Parliament should not be impeached or questioned in any court or place out of parliament". Consequently the House itself is the only authority which can punish a member for intemperance in debate. Freedom from arrest was a much prized privilege, but it applied only to civil arrest for debt (now abolished) and arbitrary arrest by the Government; members are subject to all other processes of the law.

Prorogation.—The bringing to an end, by the Sovereign on advice of the Government, of a Session of Parliament. All Public Bills which have not completed their stages lapse on Prorogation.

Queen's Speech.—The Speech delivered by H.M. The Queen at the State Opening of Parliament, in which the Government's programme for the year is set forth. The Speech is, of course, drafted for and approved by the Cabinet.

Royal Assent.—The Royal Assent is signified by Letters Patent to such Bills and Measures as have passed both Houses of Parliament (or Bills which have been passed under the Parliament Acts 1911 and 1949). The Sovereign has not given Royal Assent in person since 1854. On occasion, for instance in the Prorogation of Parliament, Royal Assent may be pronounced to the two Houses by Lords Commissioners; but more usually Royal Assent is notified to each House sitting separately in accordance with the Royal Assent Act 1967. The Norman formulae for Royal Assent are then endorsed on the Acts by the Clerk of the Parliaments.

Select Committees consisting usually of 10-15 members of all parties are a means used by both Houses in order to investigate certain matters.

Most Select Committees in the House of Commons are now tied to Departments—each Committee investigates subjects within a Government Department's remit. They are: Agriculture, Defence, Education Science and Arts, Employment, Energy, Environment, Foreign Affairs, Home Affairs, Scottish Affairs, Social Services, Transport, Treasury and Civil Service, Welsh Affairs.

There are other House of Commons Select Committees dealing with Public Accounts (i.e. the spending by H.M. Government of money voted by Parliament), European Legislation and Statutory Instruments, and also domestic committees dealing, for example, with Privilege and Services. Public Select Committees usually take evidence in public: their evidence and reports are published by H.M. Stationery Office.

The principal Select Committee in the House of Lords is that on the European Communities, which has seven permanent sub-committees dealing with all areas of community policy. The House of Lords also has a Select Committee on Science and Technology, which appoints sub-committees to deal with specific subjects. In addition, ad hoc Select Committees are set up from time to time to investigate specific subjects, e.g. Unemployment.

The Speaker.—The Speaker of the House of Commons is the spokesman and president of the Chamber. He is elected by the House at the beginning of each Parliament or when the previous Speaker retires or dies. He neither speaks in debates nor votes in divisions except when the voting is equal. His position in the precedence of the Kingdom is high, only the Prime Minister and the Lord President of the Council among Commoners going before him. He takes precedence of all Lords, except the two Archbishops and the Lord Chancellor, and Speakers are almost invariably raised to the Peerage on vacating their office.

The Speaker has a deputy, the Chairman of Ways and Means, and two deputy chairmen, all of whom may preside over sittings of the House of Commons.

None of these members vote except in the case of equality.

Standing Orders.—Rules which have from time to time been agreed by each House of Parliament to regulate the conduct of its business. These orders are not irrevocable, may be revised, amended or repealed, and are from time to time suspended or dispensed with.

State Opening.—This marks the start of each new Parliament or new session of Parliament. Parliament is normally opened, in the presence of both Houses, by the Queen in person, who makes the Speech from the Throne which outlines the Government's policies for the coming session. In the absence of the Queen, Parliament is opened by Royal Commission, and the Queen's Speech is read by one of the Lords Commissioner specially appointed by Letters Patent for the occasion.

Strangers.—Anyone who is not a Member or Officer of the House is a stranger. Visitors are generally admitted to debates of both Houses but may be excluded if the House so decides. In practice this happens only in time of war.

Supply Day.—A day on which the topic for debate is chosen by the Opposition. There are 29 such days in a normal session.

Tacking.—In order that the Commons should not abuse their financial privilege, which debars the Lords from amending Supply Bills, by including in such Bills provisions unconnected with Supply, the Lords passed a resolution in 1702 condemning the abuse of tacking, which is now embodied in a Standing Order of the House of Lords.

Ten Minute Rule.—A colloquial term for Standing Order No. 13, under which backbenchers have an opportunity on Tuesdays and Wednesdays to introduce a bill and speak in its favour for about ten minutes. Time is also available for a short opposing speech.

Vacant Seats.—When a vacancy occurs in the House of Commons during a session of Parliament the Writ for the by-election is moved, by a Whip of the party to whom the member whose seat has been vacated belonged. If the House is in recess, the Speaker can issue a writ, should two members certify to him that a seat is vacant.

Whips.—In order to secure the attendance of Members of a particular party in Parliament on all occasions, and particularly on the occasion of an important division, Whips (originally known as "Whippers-in") are appointed for the purpose. The written appeal or circular letter issued by them is also known as a "whip", its urgency being denoted by the number of times it is underlined. Neglect to respond to a three-lined whip, headed "Most important", is tantamount in the Commons to secession (at any rate temporarily) from the party. Whips are officially recognized by Parliament and are provided with office accommodation in both Houses. Government and some Opposition Whips receive salaries from public funds.

PUBLIC INFORMATION SERVICE.—Enquiries from the general public and organizations of all kinds about the work, composition and history of the House of Commons are answered by the Public Information Office, House of Commons, S.W.1 (01-219 4272). This office also edits the House of Commons Weekly Information Bulletin (published by H.M. Stationery Office). The Information Office, House of Lords, S.W.1 (01-219 3107) fulfils the same functions for the House of Lords.

GOVERNMENT BY PARTY

Before the reign of William and Mary the principal Officers of State were chosen by and were responsible to the Sovereign alone and not to Parliament or the nation at large. Such officers acted sometimes in concert with one another, but more often independently, and the fall of one did not, of necessity, involve that of others, although all were liable to be dismissed at any moment.

In 1693 the Earl of Sunderland recommended to William III the advisability of selecting a Ministry from the political party which enjoyed a majority in the House of Commons and the first united Ministry was drawn in 1696 from the Whigs, to which party the King owed his throne, the principal members being Russell (the Admiral), Somers (the Advocate), Lord Wharton and Charles Montague (afterwards Chancellor of the Exchequer). This group became known as the Junto and was regarded with suspicion as a novelty in the political life of the nation, being a small section meeting in secret apart from the main body of Ministers. It may be regarded as the forerunner of the Cabinet and in course of time it led to the establishment of the principle of joint responsibility of Ministers, so that internal disagreement caused a change of personnel or resignation of the whole body of Ministers.

The accession of George I, who was unfamiliar with the English language, led to a disinclination on the part of the Sovereign to preside at meetings of his Ministers and caused the appearance of a Prime Minister, a position first acquired by Robert Walpole in 1721 and retained without interruption for 20 years and 326 days.

In 1828 the old party of the Whigs became known as Liberals, a name originally given to it by its opponents to imply laxity of principles, but gradually accepted by the party to indicate its claim to be pioneers and champions of political reform and progressive legislation. In 1861 a Liberal Registration Association was founded and Liberal Associations became widespread. As the outcome of a conference at Birmingham in 1877 a National Liberal Federation was formed, with headquarters in London. The Liberal Party was in power for long periods during the second half of the nineteenth century in spite of the set-back during the Home Rule crisis of 1886, which resulted in the secession of the Liberal Unionists, and for several years during the first quarter of the twentieth century, but after a further split into National and Independent Liberals it numbered only 59 in all after the General Election of 1929, with a further fall to 12 (excluding National Liberals) after the 1945 Election. The number is now 11.

Soon after the change from Whig to Liberal the Tory Party became known as Conservative, a name traditionally believed to have been invented by John Wilson Croker in 1830 and to have been generally adopted about the time of the passing of the Reform Act of 1832 to indicate that the preservation of national institutions was the leading principle of the party. After the Home Rule crisis of 1886 the dissentient Liberals entered into a compact with the Conservatives, under which the latter undertook not to contest their seats, but a separate Liberal Unionist organization was maintained until 1912, when it was united with the Conservatives.

The Labour Party.—Labour candidates for Parliament made their first appearance at the General Election of 1892, when there were 27 standing as "Labour" or "Liberal-Labour."

In 1900 the Labour Representative Committee was set up in order to establish a distinct Labour Group in Parliament, with its own whips, its own policy, and a readiness to co-operate with any party which might be engaged in promoting legislation in the direct interest of labour. In 1906 the L.R.C. became known as The Labour Party.

PARLIAMENTARY SUMMARY, LORDS AND COMMONS, 1981-82

End of the Session

The Commons returned on Oct. 19 after the summer recess for an overspill period to deal with business unfinished when they adjourned in August and other business from the House of Lords, which had re-assembled a week earlier on Oct. 6. Before Parliament was prorogued on Oct. 30 to end the current session, the Opposition leader (Mr Michael Foot) moved a motion in the Commons on Oct. 28 declaring no confidence in the Government's economic policies, to which the Prime Minister (Mrs. Thatcher) pointed to what she described as "signs of recovery and hope" in increased manufacturing output, an improvement in company profits and a consistently good export record. The motion was defeated by 312 to 250 votes.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH

The new session of Parliament was opened on Nov. 4 by the Queen who in outlining the Government's legislative programme said: "My Government regard the security of the nation and the preservation of peace as matters of the first importance. Increased resources will be devoted to defence, and the most efficient use made of them.

My Government will continue to play an active role within the North Atlantic Alliance. International efforts to enable Afghanistan to resume her independent and non-aligned status will have my Government's active support.

Despite the situation in Afghanistan and Cambodia, my Government will continue to work for better East-West relations, for an early and successful conclusion to the Madrid Meeting on the Helsinki Final Act, and for specific, equitable and verifiable measures of arms control.

They welcome the forthcoming negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union on limiting long-range theatre nuclear forces.

My Government reaffirm their strong commitment to the European Community. During the remainder of the British Presidency, and thereafter as a Member State, the United Kingdom will play its full part in its development.

My Government are anxious to see satisfactory decisions on restructuring the Community budget and improving the Common Agricultural Policy. They will seek early agreement on a revised Common Fisheries Policy, and will continue to support the accession to the Community of Spain and Portugal.

My Government support the contribution of the Member States of the European Community towards a just, lasting and comprehensive settlement of the Arab-Israel dispute and will continue to work with all the parties to the dispute.

They support the efforts of the Non-Aligned Movement, the Islamic Conference and the United Nations to bring about a negotiated settlement to the conflict between Iran and Iraq.

Efforts to reach an internationally recognised agreement in Namibia will be continued, in co-operation with our allies.

My Government attach great importance to the Commonwealth and the United Nations and will continue to play an active part in both organisations. They will join with other countries and responsible international organisations in efforts to resolve the economic difficulties of both developing and developed countries.

My Government will seek to maintain close relations between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland.

Estimates for the Public Service will be laid before you.

My Government attach the utmost importance to maintaining progress in reducing inflation by the pursuit of firm monetary and fiscal policies, to further improving the efficiency of the economy, and to strengthening industry, so as to restore competitiveness abroad and prosperity at home. They hope to see this assisted by further reductions in the level of wage settlements.

Plans for public expenditure will reflect the importance of restricting the claims of the public sector on the nation's resources. My Government share the nation's concern at the growth of unemployment and will continue to direct help to those groups and individuals most hard-pressed by the recession.

A Bill will be introduced on employment and labour relations.

Measures will be introduced to amend the financial arrangements of the National Coal Board and some other public undertakings, and to facilitate private investment in the oil-producing business of the British National Oil Corporation.

Measures will also be proposed to facilitate private investment and promote competition in the activities of the British Gas Corporation.

State involvement in transport will be further reduced and the fixed penalty system for road traffic offences improved and extended.

My Government's policies will seek to ensure that all individuals, whatever their race, colour or creed, have equal rights, responsibilities and opportunities.

My Government will continue to devote themselves to the complex problems of Northern Ireland. The search will go on for acceptable ways of enabling the people of Northern Ireland to play a fuller part in its administration. My Government will work for improvements in the security situation.

The requirements of law and order and the services employed to uphold them will continue to enjoy my Government's complete support. Legislation will be introduced to improve the criminal justice system in England and Wales.

Measures will be brought forward to amend the law relating to the assumption of civil jurisdiction by courts in the United Kingdom and for the reciprocal enforcement of judgments in civil and commercial matters.

Legislation will be introduced to establish a scheme of unified housing benefit and to place a duty on employers to provide sick pay during the early weeks of sickness.

A Bill will be brought forward to improve the safeguards for detained patients and to make other reforms in the law on mental health in England and Wales.

Measures will be introduced to implement my Government's conclusions on the report of the Committee of Inquiry into Local Government in Scotland and to provide for a modernised code of civic government in Scotland.

Legislation will be introduced to improve the accountability of local authorities for the level of their rates. Other measures will be laid before you."

Debate on The Queen's Speech

In the Commons later, the Labour leader (Mr. Foot) demanded a policy of reflation to help reduce unemployment and declared that the Opposition would do everything in its power to oppose the privatisation measures affecting the British National Oil Corporation and the British Gas Corporation which would be reversed by a Labour Government. Replying, the Prime Minister said conditions had been created in which out of recession could come renewed confidence; it was in the coming year their confidence would be rewarded. Mrs. Thatcher spoke of a "new mood of realism and personal responsibility". Mr. David Steel, the Liberal leader, remarked it was time that this lame duck Parliament came to an end. Debate on the Queen's Speech continued along normal lines until Nov. 11 when it ended with an Opposition motion criticising the Government's economic policies being defeated by 302 to 250 votes. A Government motion approving the Queen's Speech was approved by 301 to 251.

Oil and Gas

On Nov. 10, during a debate on plans to transfer the oil production business of B.N.O.C. to the private sector and to break the British Gas Corporation monopoly, Mr. Wedgwood Benn, speaking from the Opposition Front Bench, told M.P.s that the next Labour Government would re-acquire without compensation North Sea assets sold off by the Government and that it was the long-term policy of Labour to bring all oil into public ownership, including B.P. Earlier Mr. Merlyn Rees, Shadow Energy Secretary, had spoken about a future Labour Government restoring the oil assets to public ownership without "private speculative gains" being made at the nation's expense. The Opposition attack on Government proposals to sell off oil and gas assets was defeated by 298 to 249 votes.

On Jan. 19, Mr. Rees, speaking during the second reading debate on the Oil and Gas (Enterprise) Bill, which enabled shares in these industries to be sold to the public, denied it was Labour party policy to nationalise all companies operating in the North Sea and described Mr. Benn's reference on Nov. 10 as "a little local difficulty". Mr. Rowlands, an Opposition Front Bench speaker, promised that a future Labour Government would reconstruct a new and more powerful National Oil Corporation and provide safeguards and protection for the nation's most precious assets. The Bill was given a second reading by 300 to 247 votes.

M.P.s Suspended

On Nov. 10 the Rev. Ian Paisley (Dem. Unionist, North Antrim), standing in an upper gallery which counts as part of the Chamber, shouted at the Prime Minister when she was about to make a statement on the previous week's Anglo-Irish meeting. "On behalf of the people of Ulster," he bellowed, "I brand you a traitor and a liar," and thereupon departed. Mrs. Thatcher started again but was interrupted by Mr. Peter Robinson (Dem. Unionist, Belfast East) who was also in the upper gallery, but whose words were drowned by noise from M.P.s on the floor of the Chamber. Next day, when Mr. Paisley did not attend as requested, the Speaker (Mr. George Thomas) called on him to be in the Commons on Nov. 16 to explain his behaviour. On Nov. 16, Mr. Paisley and his two fellow Dem. Unionist M.P.s, Mr. Robinson and Mr. John McQuade (Belfast North) were suspended after shouting down a statement by the Northern Ireland Secretary (Mr. Prior) on the security situation after the latest I.R.A. killings, including the murder of Rev. Robert Bradford, Official Unionist M.P. for Belfast South. The Speaker twice suspended the sitting after the three M.P.s called insults from the Upper Gallery and ignored his orders to leave. They left nonetheless after a resolution to suspend them for five sitting days had been passed. The Speaker mentioned that in the light of the tragic events of the weekend he proposed no action against Mr. Paisley and Mr. Robinson for their original behaviour.

Spending on Higher Education

On Nov. 18, Sir Keith Joseph, Education Secretary, was pressed by some of his own backbenchers in the Commons to allow more than three years for planned cutbacks in spending on higher education because of fears that this time-scale could be devastating to certain universities, and anxiety emerged from all sides of the House about the effect the cost of redundancy payments would have on institutions of higher education. But the Opposition motion attacking these cuts was defeated by 284 to 240 votes, whereupon the Liberals forced a division on a Government amendment regretfully accepting that higher education should contribute to the restraint in the rate of increase in public spending, the Government winning the vote by 273 to 21.

Mr. Tebbit, Employment Secretary, outlined his plans in the Commons on Nov. 23 for the Trade Union Bill by which the Government proposed to tighten up the law on industrial relations, but Mr. Varley, Shadow Employment Secretary, pledged that a Labour Government would repeal the measure.

Law and Order

On Nov. 25, Mr. Whitelaw, the Home Secretary, told the Commons he welcomed Lord Scarman's report on last April's Brixton riots, published that day, and accepted his recommendations for some police reforms, but he refused to give a promise of more money for inner city areas to reduce the danger of further rioting. He also accepted that the procedure for handling complaints against the police must be substantially reformed to command public confidence. M.P.s on Nov. 26 approved a resolution moved by Mr. Steel, the Liberal leader, that the House believed the maintenance of law and order and the preservation of liberty depended on a relationship of confidence and co-operation between the police and local communities.

The Crisis in Prisons

On Dec. 2, the Home Secretary announced that courts were to be given powers to impose partly suspended sentences to help ease overcrowding in prisons, during a debate on the crisis in prisons. Mr. Whitelaw also announced the Government's decision to go ahead with the building of two prisons at Bovingdon in Hertfordshire and Lockwood in Oxfordshire starting in 1984-85. A substantially larger sum would be provided in 1982-83 for the prison development programme than had been planned and additional resources would be made available to the probation service for higher growth in 1982-83. Mr. Hattersley, Shadow Home Secretary, said overcrowding had become a national emergency and demanded a programme including a new law and amnesty to remove fines and maintenance defaulters, prostitutes and vagrants from prisons; he also called for moves to reduce the length of sentences and the number of offences dealt with by imprisonment.

STATEMENT ON ECONOMIC MEASURES

In a statement to M.P.s on Dec. 2 with his latest package of economic measures, Sir Geoffrey Howe, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said: "Eighteen months ago the annual increase in the R.P.I. was 22 per cent and a year ago 15 per cent. It is now about 12 per cent. Over the next year we expect a further reduction to about 10 per cent.

"Output is expected to rise by about 1 per cent, and manufacturing output rather more rapidly. The outlook in short, is for gradual recovery."

Sir Geoffrey continued: "We are no longer planning public expenditure in volume terms but in cash. The plans for next year, which appeared in the last White Paper in volume terms, had therefore to be revalued in cash.

"On this basis the starting point for discussions about 1982-83 was a cash total of £110,000 million.

"The net result of the decisions which I am announcing will be to raise that figure by almost £5,000 million to bring the planning total for next year to about £115,000 million.

"The exact total for next year will depend upon decisions which cannot be taken yet about the appropriate provision for certain demand-determined programmes and for the contingency reserve.

"At the time of the Budget we expected cash expenditure in 1982-83 to grow more slowly than we now envisage. We now think it appropriate to increase the planned provision for certain programmes to reflect changed circumstances.

"It is too early to judge with precision what these changes will mean for the next year's P.S.B.R. On the basis of the conventional assumption set out in the Industry Act forecast there is no present reason to depart from the projections published at the time of the last Budget.

"Increases in programmes—whether on account of policy or of changed demands—amount to about £6,000 million.

"But we have made offsetting reductions in previous plans of over £1,000 million. These restrict the net increase to the figure of £5,000 million that I have mentioned.

"The administrative costs of central government are not far short of 10 per cent of total public expenditure.

"We are determined to reduce that proportion and maintain the drive for more efficient management throughout the public sector.

"Our spending plans provide broadly for increases of 4 per cent in the total sums available for the pay of public servants from next settlement dates.

"The provision for administrative costs will be further reduced by the impact of a general reduction of at least 2 per cent in all cash-limited expenditure.

"This will involve economies in the cost of maintenance and improvement of Government buildings as well as in manpower and ancillary services.

"And we shall continue to reduce Civil Service numbers so as to maintain progress towards our aim to have 102,000 fewer staff in post in April 1984 than when this Government came into office."

Sir Geoffrey said they hoped to be able to maintain activity on public housing construction and improvement at approximately the same level as this year.

"There will be some reductions in the cash provision for some other capital programmes, including those for water services, motorways and trunk roads, and certain local authority services.

"There has, however, been a substantial fall in tender prices. Because of this, there should be no significant impact on our published plans for water services, motorways and trunk roads.

"Our cash provision will again allow continued growth in the National Health Service. More of the cost of the Health services will be financed by contributions and charges.

"We will be increasing the health service contribution by 0.1 per cent. The full present range of exemptions from charging remains unchanged.

"Two out of every three prescriptions will continue to be provided free of charge. Where a charge is payable, it will be raised to £1.30.

"There will also be increases in charges for dental and ophthalmic services.

"The increase in student grants for the next academic year will be 4 per cent. The parental contribution scale will remain unchanged, but the minimum award will be kept at the present cash level.

"National Insurance and other social security payments will be updated in line with the forecast movement in prices from November 1981 to November 1982.

"The increase in the R.P.I. to November 1981 will probably be some 2 per cent higher than the 10 per cent increase allowed for when calculating this year's uprating.

"For retirement pensions and other long-term benefits, the shortfall will be made good in the November 1982 uprating.

"We shall thus continue to fulfil our pledge to retirement pensioners that they will be fully protected against inflation.

"In the case of the short-term benefits, however, next year's increase will be equal to the expected increase in the R.P.I. over the next 12 months.

"We are planning to spend very substantial extra sums of money next year on social security, the great bulk of this is on pensions, which alone will cost the fund nearly £1,500 million more next year than this.

"Expenditure on other benefits and outgoings is also expected to increase, in part due to a further small rise in unemployment.

"These increases, together with the slower rate of growth in contribution income, would mean that if we took no action on contributions, there would be substantial deficits in the National Insurance and redundancy funds.

"Those deficits must be financed. In addition we have decided to propose an increase of 0.1 per cent in the allocation to the N.H.S. The taxpayer's contribution to the fund—the so-called Treasury supplement—will at the same time be reduced by 1½ per cent.

"In view of the burdens of National Insurance on employers, the Government think it right that the greater part of the increase in contributions should come from employees.

"We therefore propose that the rate of contributions for employees should be raised by 1 per cent from the beginning of April next: it would then be 8.75 per cent of relevant earnings.

"There will be some increase for the self-employed. The percentage rate for employers will not be changed.

"The lower earnings limit, which sets the starting point of the contributions, will be increased to £29.50 per week, in line with the single rate retirement pension.

"The upper earnings limit, which sets the ceiling up to which payments are made proportionate to income, will be increased to £220 per week, within the normal criteria.

"I turn to other areas where spending next year is to rise. The increases have been concentrated in four main areas—local Government, nationalised industries, defence and employment measures.

"Local authorities are likely to overspend substantially this year. We recognise that it would not be practicable to eliminate this overspend in a single year.

"We therefore propose to allow an increase in the programmes for local authority current expenditure in 1982-83 of some £1,350 million.

"The Secretary of State for the Environment proposes to provide a level of grant support for local authorities in England of 56 per cent." Local authorities would be consulted about this and about commensurate provision in Scotland and Wales.

"The nationalised industries' total bids for increased external finance amounted to about £2,500 million. This would have been in addition to the nearly £1,500 million already provided in the plans.

"We have decided to allow them about half their new bids, some £1,300 million in total.

"Nevertheless, if they continue their drive to contain current costs, they should be able to maintain their aggregate capital investment programme at much the same level as was envisaged in the plans published last March, a level 15 per cent higher in real terms than in 1980-81.

"To enable us to carry through the policies set out in the June Defence White Paper we are increasing the provision for defence next year by a further £480 million. This includes the cost of carrying forward the 1981 Armed Forces pay award."

In all, nearly £800 million would be added to the employment programme next year, already planned at nearly £2,000 million. A substantial proportion of this additional spending would go to help the young unemployed, the Chancellor concluded.

The Debate on the Economic Measures

Mr. Peter Shore, Shadow Chancellor, condemned the proposals for increasing National Insurance contributions and for raising National Health Service charges and council house rents and castigated the Chancellor saying, "You have played the part of principal grave-digger for the British economy and a major reversal of policy in the national interest is desperately needed." A debate on the package of economic measures took place on Dec. 8 when among the critics of Government policy was Mr. Edward Heath, former Conservative Prime Minister, who said he would need a great deal of persuasion that cutting back on benefits for the unemployed was inescapable. The Opposition motion criticising the economic policy was defeated by 307 to 267 votes and then the Chancellor's statement was approved by 307 to 265.

Eleven Tory M.P.s voted against the Government on Dec. 9 and several abstained in a protest against the planned increase in the maximum weight for heavy lorries from 32½ tonnes to 40 tonnes and thereby reduced the Government's overall majority to 29 in a division on a Labour motion condemning the proposal contained in a White Paper issued the previous week. A Government amendment making it clear that full use would be made of a two-month consultation process on the White Paper was carried by 298 to 255 votes.

The Scarman Report

The Scarman Report on the Brixton riots was discussed in the Commons on Dec. 10 when Mr. Whitelaw, Home Secretary, announced new moves to help overcome racial disadvantage and racial discrimination, the Government having decided to support a recommendation from a Commons committee which studied racial disadvantage by introducing "ethnic monitoring" of the work-force in the Civil Service on an experimental basis. Mr. Roy Hattersley, the Labour spokesman, said it was vital for the Report's proposals for the improved consultation between the police and local communities to be implemented. Mr. Gerald Kaufman, winding-up for the Opposition, said the subterranean rumbles which surfaced in Brixton, Moss Side, Toxteth and elsewhere were an ominous warning of what could be a disastrous earthquake which might shake their whole social fabric. Mr. Timothy Raison, Minister of State, Home Office, remarked that there could be no shrinking from law enforcement. The Opposition indicated its criticism of Government policy by forcing the technical motion to adjourn the House, on which the debate occurred, to a vote, which the Government won by 216 to 140. The Lords debated the report on Feb. 4 when Lord Belstead, Under-Secretary, Home Office, said it pointed the way to real opportunities while Lord Elystan-Morgan, Opposition spokesman, said the Report must not be seen as an end but as a beginning and its significance would lie in the future. It was the focal point of a speech by Lord Scarman himself in the Lords debate on Mar. 24 on law and order. On Mar. 25 the Opposition in the Commons opened a debate on the need for effective policing and a reduction in crime, during which the Home Secretary said police were to be given stronger powers to stop and search individuals and to search premises.

In the Commons on Dec. 15 the Opposition motion to refuse a second reading to the Social Security (Contributions) Bill, which implemented the Chancellor of the Exchequer's announcement on Dec. 2 of a one per cent rise in employee National Insurance contributions, was defeated by 286 to 207 votes and the measure was given a second reading by 288 to 228 votes. On Dec. 17 the Bill was given an unopposed third reading. The latest attempt to allow television cameras into Parliament failed in the Commons on Dec. 15 by 176 to 158 votes.

On Dec. 16, Mr. Whitelaw, Home Secretary, ruled out cheaper TV licences for retirement pensioners and said the Government's view was that it was better to give benefits in cash to spend as recipients thought best. The Labour motion calling for a reduced rate licence fee for pensioners was defeated by 296 to 241 votes and a Government amendment endorsing the increased licence fees on the basis they would last at least three years was approved without a vote. On the same day, Mr. Heseltine, Environment Secretary, announced that while abandoning his plan for a local poll as a prerequisite for a supplementary rate he would now ban supplementary rates altogether and on Jan. 18 he successfully moved the second reading of the Local Government Finance (No. 2) Bill to curb the spending of local authorities by prohibiting supplementary rates. Mr. Kaufman, Shadow Environment Secretary, pledged that a Labour government would repeal the Bill.

An unopposed second reading was given on Jan. 20 to the Criminal Justice Bill moved by Mr. Whitelaw and which introduced a more flexible range of non-custodial sentences. The Opposition on Jan. 25 called for more Government help concerning the payment of fuel bills because of the severe weather, but their motion was defeated by 277 to 202 votes, and a Government amendment was carried by 271 to 201 votes, welcoming the steps that it had taken to protect those most at risk from the weather conditions. On the same day the Opposition initiated a Commons debate on steel but their motion calling for Government support for the B.S.C. and its workers to ensure that jobs and production capacity were kept at present levels was defeated by 313 to 208 votes. The Government amendment calling for continuing Government support to encourage the industry to improve its efficiency and competitiveness and to strengthen its overall health and profitability while pursuing a successful privatisation programme was approved without a vote.

During the report stage of the Transport (Finance) Bill, Mr. Albert Booth, Shadow Transport Minister, moved an amendment requiring the Government to announce a ten-year programme of external financing limits for British Rail but this was rejected by 108 to 62 votes, and the Bill which increased B.R.'s borrowing limit by £200 million to £1,100 million was given an unopposed third reading.

Unemployment

Mr. Tebbit, Employment Secretary, moved on Jan. 27 a motion expressing great concern about the difficulties facing those who could not find jobs and stating Government policies were helping to make industry more competitive thus offering the best prospect of a permanent improvement in job opportunities. Thereupon Mr. Varley, the Opposition spokesman, moved a Labour amendment condemning the Government for following economic policies which had brought about more than three million unemployed and destroyed major sections of British industry. The amendment was defeated by 293 to 213 votes, the Government's own motion being carried by 291 to 246 votes. Mr. Shore, Shadow Chancellor of the Exchequer, on Jan. 28 moved a motion blaming the Government's deflationary economic policies as the prime cause of the "massive decline in output and the massive rise in unemployment since the Government came to office," but it was defeated by 298 to 205 votes. A Government amendment declaring that its policies would create better prospects for employment on a lasting and sustainable basis was carried by 289 to 236 votes.

The Bill giving local authorities power to licence sex shops was given a third reading in the Commons on Feb. 4 when a new clause introducing a licensing system for sex shops and cinemas was approved without a division. In the Lords on Feb. 16 a demand that local authorities should have the option to refuse all applications for sex-shop licences was made by the Bishop of London when the measure, the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, was given a second reading. On Mar. 15 in the Lords the Government carried out its promise to empower local authorities when considering how many sex shops there should be in an area to decide on an answer of "nil", the amendment being accepted without a vote.

Debate on the Employment Bill

Mr. Varley, Opposition spokesman on employment, declared in the Commons on Feb. 8 during the second reading debate on the Employment Bill, that a future Labour government would repeal it at the first opportunity. Mr. Tebbit, Employment Secretary, said the laws which gave unions rights were also laws which took away the historic common law rights of the people, but stressed the need for reform "step by step". Mr. William Rodgers (Soc. Dem.) approved of some of the Bill's clauses and suggested improvements in others, and Mr. Cyril Smith (Lib., Rochdale) said he saw things in the Bill which were compatible with more individual liberty and for that reason he would support it. The Bill received a second reading by 348 to 241 votes.

Navy Cuts

Mr. Peter Blaker, Minister of State, Armed Forces, was persistently interrupted from his own benches on Feb. 15 when he attempted to defend the Government's decision to close Chatham dockyard and reduce the number of frigates and destroyers; Tory M.P.s expressed fears that the Royal Navy was being asked to pay too heavy a price in cuts as a corollary of the purchase of a new strategic nuclear deterrent. This rumpus emerged on a motion by Sir Frederick Burden (Con. Gillingham) which voiced grave concern at the dramatic reduction in the R.N.'s surface fleet and deplored the lack of capacity to refit submarines because of the Chatham closure. But there was no backbench revolt in the division lobbies when Mr. Stan Newens (Lab. Harlow) in a tactical approach moved the closure of the debate, which was defeated 184 to 86, a Government majority of 98.

A rate support grant settlement for 1982-83 of £11,500 million was approved on Feb. 16.

The Canadian Constitution

On Feb. 17, Mr. Atkins, Lord Privy Seal, advised the Commons to pass the Bill patriating the Canadian Constitution without amendment; it was, he pointed out, an anachronism that Canada, independent for a long time, should have to come to the U.K. Parliament on matters affecting her constitution. Agreeing, Mr. Denis Healey, Shadow Foreign Secretary, expressed concern about the effects on Canada's aboriginal people, including the Indians. Three Tory M.P.s voted with a group of Labour M.P.s when the measure, the Canada Bill, was given a second reading by 334 to 44 votes, and at least eight other Tory M.P.s abstained. On Mar. 3, Mr. Dale Campbell-Savours (Lab. Workington) was ordered out of the Commons after he had persistently challenged a ruling that his amendment to the Canada Bill relating to change in the abortion law in Canada should not be selected for debate, but the suspension lasted only for the rest of the sitting. On Mar. 8, the Bill was given its third reading and proceeded to the Upper Chamber, where on Mar. 18 the House gave it an unopposed second reading. On Mar. 25 the Bill completed its passage in the Lords after peers voted by 147 to 15, to pass a motion that the Earl of Gosford (Ind.) "be no longer heard", thus truncating what was considered to be a too long and inappropriate third reading speech on the land rights of Canadian Indians. The Canada Act then became law on Mar. 29 when the Queen's Royal Assent was notified in the Lords.

THE BUDGET

Sir Geoffrey Howe, Chancellor of the Exchequer, presented his fourth full Budget in the Commons on March 9 and said:

"This will be a Budget for industry—and so a Budget for jobs. But it will be a Budget for people as well. It is a Budget that will strengthen the foundations of economic recovery.

"Thanks to last year's Budget, public borrowing has gone down as a percentage of gross domestic product, giving us interest rates lower than they would otherwise have been.

"Inflation has been almost halved since the spring of 1980. It should be in single figures during this year, and lower still in 1983.

"Productivity has been rising sharply. In manufacturing industry last year, output per man rose by about 10 per cent.

"Lower pay increases, combined last year with fast productivity growth, meant that unit labour costs in manufacturing rose hardly at all. Our performance was comparable with Germany and Japan, and better than all our other major competitors. And exports were rising again by the end of 1981.

"In the economy as a whole, we now expect output to grow by 1½ per cent in 1982 and by rather more in 1983.

EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING PLANS

"Our plans for 1982-83 provide nearly £1,500 million for special employment and training measures.

"By 1984-85, its first full year, we plan to spend over £1,000 million a year on the new youth training scheme alone—a major advance for school leavers who cannot find jobs.

"The Government had it in mind to give those who had been on the unemployment register for some time the chance to work for the benefit of their own community, while still getting broadly the equivalent of their benefit entitlement plus an addition for expenses and the like.

"They would remain free to take a regular job if it came along, and it would be for them to decide whether or not to participate in such a scheme," said Sir Geoffrey.

The Employment Secretary was therefore asking the Manpower Services Commission to work up urgently a flexible and voluntary scheme on these lines.

MONETARY POLICY

"As intended the overall effect of policy in 1981-82 has been to maintain downward pressure on inflation. Sterling M3 has grown faster than the target set a year ago. The target range for 1982-83 will be 8-12 per cent.

"The new target represents a realistic restatement of our determination to maintain a responsible monetary policy. It should be consistent with growth of money G.D.P. at 10 per cent a year, with continued progress against inflation, and with a strengthening recovery of the real economy.

"We shall continue to monitor a range of indicators.

"A central element in the Government's financial policy is that the gap between public sector spending and revenue should be financed in a way that is consistent with our monetary target. We have therefore greatly improved the balance of Government funding.

"In 1979-80, when the P.S.B.R. was similar to this year's, sales of Gilt-Edged stock were more than eight times larger than the contribution from National Savings.

"This year the ratio was down to about two to one. National Savings have exceeded their target, which was raised to £3,500 million last autumn.

"Interest rates have come down since the current National Savings Certificate was introduced. It will therefore be withdrawn from tomorrow and replaced as soon as possible by a new savings certificate offering a lower but still competitive rate of return.

"Last year I announced, as one part of our policy of diversification funding, the introduction of indexed Gilt-Edged stock. Over the past year, sales of this indexed stock amounted to some £2,500 million.

"The right to buy this indexed Gilt was restricted to pension funds and certain other institutions in respect of their U.K. pension business.

"I have now decided to remove this restriction. The Bank of England is announcing a new issue of indexed stock on an unrestricted basis.

"The restrictions on the existing indexed Gilts already in the market will also be removed today.

"Our policy of diversified funding will continue next year, with contributions coming from indexed Gilts, conventional Gilts and National Savings. In the case of National Savings, the target for 1982-83 will be £3,000 million just a little below the figure for last year."

BORROWING

Sir Geoffrey said: "Last year I budgeted for a public sector borrowing requirement of £10,500 million. Since then output has moved broadly as expected and the 1981-82 P.S.B.R. is still on track for the forecast outcome.

In the light of the latest assessment of the prospects the Chancellor had thought it right to provide for a P.S.B.R. of around £9,500 million in the coming year, equivalent to 3½ per cent of G.D.P. This was about £1,000 million below the expected outturn for this year. But it was also about £1,300 million above what the P.S.B.R. would have been next year on the conventional assumptions.

"That £1,300 million is the P.S.B.R. cost of my Budget proposals in 1982-83."

PUBLIC EXPENDITURE

Sir Geoffrey said: "Although most of the measures I shall announce involve reductions in taxation, I am also proposing some additions to public expenditure, totalling some £350 million in 1982-83.

"But the increases I now propose will be more than offset by other changes in costs, and the total will therefore be £114,900 million.

Total public sector capital spending next year was planned to be about the same—£11,500 million—as expected this year.

The plans allowed for new investment by nationalised industries of over £7,500 million in 1982-83, some 26 per cent higher than the out-turn expected in 1981-82 and 40 per cent higher than in 1980-81.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Social security was by far the largest single element in public spending and in 1982-83 it would account for £32,000 million, over a quarter of the total.

"About half of this goes to the elderly, who deserve our special consideration. This Government has been determined to preserve the full purchasing power of the social security retirement pension.

"We shall accordingly raise the pension rates, to cover the expected increases in prices for the 12 months to next November."

Last December the Chancellor expected that increase to be 10 per cent. His similar forecast now was only nine per cent.

"But I do not propose to raise the pension rates only by nine per cent. We intend also to compensate pensioners for the fact that last year's increase was based on a forecast of the rise in prices that was two per cent below the actual rise.

"Retirement pensions will thus go up next November by a total of 11 per cent. The standard rate will be increased by £3-25 to £32-85 a week, for a single person, and by £5-20 to £52-55, for a married couple. Sir Geoffrey said he had received many representations that the 2 per cent shortfall should be restored on other benefits also. "And we have decided that it should be. This means that the rate of unemployment benefit will rise from £22-50 a week to £25 for a single person, and from £36-40 to £40-45 for a married couple.

Details of supplementary allowance, sickness and injury benefit, and maternity allowance will be announced on the following day.

Sir Geoffrey went on to say that from next November child benefit would go up by 60p a week from £5-25 to £5-85, "and will thus have been increased by 23 per cent over two years, and so fully protected against inflation."

The additional one-parent benefit would be increased by 35p to £3-65, and in the case of the family income supplement, the prescribed amount for a one-child family would go up from £74 to £82-50.

Sir Geoffrey said he proposed to take the Capital Transfer Tax exemption for qualifying gifts to charities a stage further, by increasing it for gifts made within a year of death from £200,000 to £250,000.

He intended to abolish Stamp Duty completely on transfers of assets to charities.

As the National Council for Voluntary Organisations had suggested, "I propose to remove any liability to development land tax where a charity disposes of property which has been subject to roll-over relief."

The Chancellor said he had three measures of help for the disabled.

"There will be some extension of the existing VAT reliefs for disabled people and the charities serving them.

The rate of mobility allowance will be increased—by more than the expected rise in prices—from £16-50 a week to £18-30. This will mean that it has risen by over 80 per cent since the Government took office.

"I propose that from April 6 the Mobility Allowance should be wholly exempt from Income Tax. This is a major step: it means an increase in net income of up to £5 a week for the working disabled."

THE PUBLIC SECTOR

Sir Geoffrey said that out of total spending of £108,000 million the Government's running costs amounted to over £12,000 million.

"This is why we set ourselves the task of reducing the size of the Civil Service, from 732,000 in 1979 to 630,000 by April 1984. We are on target. Numbers are down already by 57,000. We now have the smallest Civil Service for 15 years.

"Local authority manpower, on the other hand, has come down by only three per cent since 1979, less than half as much as in the Civil Service. The importance of further progress needs no underlining."

The Chancellor said that in deciding how much public finance to make available to nationalised industries, the Government had to be influenced by their performance in controlling their own costs.

"This is why we intend to widen the exposure of the public sector to the discipline of the market-place. One way of doing this is by the introduction, under the right conditions, of private capital.

"The Government has decided to accept, in principle, the proposal for British Telecom to issue a bond to raise market capital. The return to the investor would be based on the profits earned by the corporation.

"British Telecom will be expected, as a condition of access to market finance, to keep tariff increases at least two percentage points below the annual movement in the RPI, and to reduce real unit costs, in 1982-83, by a minimum of five per cent, with further reductions to be agreed for later years," said Sir Geoffrey.

The aim will be to go ahead with an initial sale in the autumn of up to £150 million. This will be an important experiment in exposing the performance of a nationalised industry to the judgment of the market-place.

"It remains our purpose, wherever possible, to transfer to the private sector assets which can be better managed there."

The Government's plans assumed that asset sales would total about £500 million this year. We expect to achieve that target."

Sir Geoffrey said he had no doubt, from the representations he had received, that the single measure business would most welcome was a reduction in the National Insurance surcharge imposed and then increased by a previous Government.

"It is now time to offer more positive relief. I accordingly propose to cut the rate of the National Insurance surcharge from 3½ to 2½ per cent. This will help to reduce costs throughout the economy and will be of value to all businesses whatever their tax position.

"The cut will operate from August 2, which is the earliest practicable date.

"But I am anxious that industry should not suffer from this unavoidable delay. I shall therefore propose an extra ½ per cent reduction between August 1982 and April 1983. The effect of this will be to ensure that business as a whole will enjoy in the last two-thirds of 1982-83 the equivalent of a whole year's reduction of one per cent in the surcharge.

"This proposal is intended to reduce business costs in the private sector. However, public sector employers also pay the surcharge, and in order to leave them exactly where they would have been without the change, appropriate reductions will be made in the relevant cash limits and the votes of Central Government and the NHS, in the Rate Support Grant to local authorities, and in the external financing limits of the nationalised industries.

"The necessary changes will be announced as soon as possible. This will reduce the cost to a net figure of £640 million in 1982-83."

INDIRECT TAXATION

Sir Geoffrey said he did not propose to change VAT. But with Excise duties there had grown up in recent years a sensible presumption that they should be adjusted in line with the movement in prices from one year to the next.

"Last year the tobacco duty was increased twice—in March as part of the Budget measures and in July to help recoup the loss of revenue from the derv duty reduction.

"I have taken account of that in proposing this year an increase that is the equivalent of five pence, including VAT, on the price of a typical packet of 20 cigarettes.

"There will be consequential increases for other tobacco products. These changes will take effect from midnight on Thursday.

"I propose to increase the duties on alcoholic drinks from midnight tonight by amounts which represent about two pence on the price of a typical pint of beer, 10 pence on a bottle of table wine and 13 pence on a bottle of sherry—all including VAT.

"The full increase in the price of a bottle of spirits necessary to take account of inflation would have been over 50 pence.

"However, in the light of representation about the state of the Scotch whisky industry I have decided that it would be appropriate to limit the increase on spirits to 30 pence a bottle, again including VAT.

The Chancellor said there would be a higher percentage increase on the duty on claret than on whisky.

On oil duties, Sir Geoffrey proposed to limit the increases in the duties on both petrol and derv to amounts which no more than compensated for one year's inflation.

"The duty on petrol will accordingly increase by the equivalent, including VAT, of about 9 pence a gallon or 2 pence a litre. This will still leave most pump prices lower than they were at the end of last year.

"The duty on derv will increase by the equivalent, including VAT, of about 7 pence a gallon or 1.5 pence a litre. As almost all derv is used by businesses, this smaller increase will help to hold down business costs."

The Chancellor proposed no change in the rate of duty on heavy fuel oil.

He had decided it would be right to reduce the aviation gasoline duty rate to one-half of that on petrol. Including VAT, this amounted to a reduction of about 32 pence a gallon or 7 pence a litre.

VEHICLE EXCISE DUTY

"I also propose to increase most rates of vehicle excise duty. For the motorist the increase will be £10, from £70 to £80. Duty levels on most other groups of vehicles will be increased by about 12 per cent."

The Chancellor said he proposed to include in the Finance Bill provisions for restructuring the basis of VED on heavy lorries, to a gross weight method of assessment, and for taxing all light commercial vehicles in due course at the same rate as cars.

Pool betting duty, which had been unchanged since 1974, was to go up from 40 per cent to 42½ per cent from April 1. "I also propose increases from the same date in the rates of duty on casinos."

ENERGY

The Government had accordingly discussed with the electricity supply industry their pricing proposals for 1982-83. These will include new special arrangements to benefit larger users—those heavy industrial users who face the greatest difficulties.

"A scheme will be introduced under which customers can gain significant reductions in their charges in return for a commitment to accept load reductions.

"Some large industrial users of gas face similar problems, and here, too, we propose significant relief. For contract customers the price of gas taken after the first 25,000 therms in the contract year will be frozen at the level charged on April 1, 1982. This freeze will apply until the end of 1982."

There would also be a freeze on list prices for foundry coke.

The three measures should reduce the energy costs of British industry by over £250 million over the two years concerned.

Turning to oilfields, the Chancellor said he could not reduce the overall tax burden to the extent that the industry would have wished. But he agreed on the need for some changes of structure.

"I see, in particular, the advantage of profit-related taxes in relation to additional investment in existing fields. The supplementary petroleum duty will therefore be abolished with effect from the end of this calendar year.

At the same time the rate of petroleum revenue tax should be increased from 70 per cent to 75 per cent.

"These fiscal measures, combined with the decisions we have already announced on the abolition of the State's sole right to buy gas, and on the creation of the new private sector oil company, will provide a sound basis for another decade of successful enterprise in the North Sea.

NEW TECHNOLOGY

Turning to "the continuing effort to encourage innovation in industry," Sir Geoffrey said "There is no more important area to which this applies than micro-electronics and information technology." New and expanded aid schemes would be announced.

"They will include additional assistance towards space technology, and production engineering—including the introduction of a special scheme of assistance to small engineering firms."

TAX AVOIDANCE

He turned to international leasing.

"I propose, for new commitments after today, to reduce from 25 per cent to 10 per cent the rate of writing down allowance for all assets leased abroad. I propose to withdraw the 100 per cent first year allowance for films, and to introduce in its place a provision which will, in broad terms, allow companies to write off expenditure over the income-producing life of the film."

A change of this kind could have serious implications for the British film industry if introduced immediately. It was intended therefore to introduce transitional relief for British-made films for a two-year period.

On shipping, arrangements are being made to exploit U.K. investment incentives for the benefit of foreign businesses.

"I propose to reduce the rate of capital allowance in these cases to the 10 per cent rate for international leasing generally."

On each of these three subjects—international leasing, films and shipping—the changes would take effect from the previous day.

The so-called Section 233 loans are contrived arrangements under which interest paid on certain bank loans escapes liability to Corporation Tax in the hands of the banks.

"In future these payments will be taxed like other interest payments. The new rules will apply from today. In the case of contracts entered into before today, the new rules will apply to payments due on or after April 1, 1983.

"By taking advantage of double tax relief banks can lend overseas at abnormally low interest rates at the expense of the U.K. taxpayer.

"I propose to include in the coming Finance Bill measures to stop this exploitation of our tax system. They will take effect from April 1, 1982, but in the case of existing loans will apply only to interest arising from April 1, 1983.

The Chancellor said that a number of building societies had recently issued a new form of negotiable bond. "I have no reason to believe that any improper use has been made of these new bonds.

"But as an obvious precaution, I propose to extend to these bonds, from today, the existing provisions dealing with the 'manufacture of dividends'.

"I also propose some tightening up of the law relating to very large golden handshakes. The tax relief will be withdrawn on a sliding scale with the effect that the excess of sums over £75,000 will be fully charged to tax."

HOUSING, ETC.

"This year, local authorities have greatly underestimated the success of our policy of selling council houses and land. The extra revenue which this is bringing in has not been spent.

"For 1982-83, they have been assured that they can spend up to a total of some £3,000 million on housing. This will include about £1,000 million of funds which they can expect to receive mainly as a result of the success of the right-to-buy legislation.

"This should allow an increase of nearly a third in the scale of their capital spending, compared with what they seem likely to spend in 1981-82.

"In addition, I propose a change for 1982-83, designed to help private home-owners whose houses fall well short of today's standards.

"The value of grants given for major repairs, and for the provision of basic amenities in the home, under the Home Improvement Grant system, will be increased for a limited period to a maximum 90 per cent of the eligible cost instead of the 75 per cent currently available.

"This increased rate of grant will apply only to applications received before the end of 1982."

To pay for these changes and to encourage local authorities to make more general improvement grants available, their capital allocations in 1982-83 will be increased by £100 million.

Sir Geoffrey said the Government had decided to offer further encouragement to the private sector and nationalised industries to bring derelict land into productive use. "We shall increase the grants payable, from 50 per cent of the cost of reclamation to 80 per cent, in assisted areas and derelict land clearance areas when legislation can be brought forward."

"In addition," said the Chancellor, "we shall give further encouragement to new private investment in housing for rent. I propose to introduce capital allowances, at the rate of 75 per cent for the first year only, for expenditure on the construction of properties wholly for letting as assured tenancies by bodies approved by the Secretary of State.

The scheme will run for an experimental period of five years. Allowances may be claimed for expenditure incurred as from today.

Sir Geoffrey recalled that in his Budget two years ago he introduced the small industrial workshop scheme, under which industrial buildings allowance could be claimed on the construction of small buildings at the rate of 100 per cent.

"I therefore propose to extend the scheme for very small workshops of not more than 1,250 square feet for a further two years."

He also proposed to deal with the liability to V.A.T. on certain kinds of building alterations where there had in the past been serious doubt what was liable to charge.

He would lay before the House an Order which would have the effect of continuing to zero-rate the most commonly recognized forms of double glazing, loft and cavity wall insulation and damp-proof coursing.

His final proposal in this area concerned Stamp Duty on house purchase. "I propose to raise the exception by £5,000 to £25,000, and the other thresholds also by £5,000, at a total cost of £70 million in 1982-83."

"Taken together, these proposals will mean more work for the construction industry and more jobs for those who work in it."

SMALL BUSINESSES

The business start-up scheme, which provided income tax relief for investment of up to £10,000 in the equity of companies starting new trades, has been widely welcomed, the Chancellor said.

He announced that for 1982-83 and 1983-84 the annual limit was to be increased from £10,000 to £20,000.

In addition, any unused balance of this year's limit should be added to next year's. "This means that, in some cases, the effective limit for 1982-83 will be as much as £30,000.

Sir Geoffrey said: "Two years ago, I relaxed the conditions governing profit-sharing schemes and reintroduced legislation enabling employees to take up options to buy shares in their companies without incurring income tax liability.

"Since I made my first changes two years ago, the increase in the numbers of employee share schemes has been extremely encouraging.

"It is important to maintain and extend this progress, and I propose to increase the value of shares that can be allocated each year to any one employee from £1,000 to £1,250.

Sir Geoffrey said the pilot loan guarantee scheme announced in his last Budget started in June, and since then the demand for loans had far exceeded expectations.

"Last October we increased the allocation for the first year from £50 million to £100 million, but with 2,700 loans worth almost £100 million already approved after only nine months, some further increase is desirable.

"Accordingly, I propose to increase the amount which the participating institutions may lend to £150 million for the first year. In addition a further £150 million will be available for loans under the scheme during its second year, to June 1983."

The limits for the "small companies" rate of corporation tax would go up again from £80,000 to £90,000 and from £200,000 to £225,000.

As a further help for new businesses, the period for income and corporation tax relief for pre-trading expenditure would be extended from one to three years.

The Chancellor announced that the V.A.T. registration threshold is to be increased from £15,000 to £17,000. He was also introducing V.A.T. relief for services supplied before registration.

A decade of inflation had eaten into the value of money which the self-employed had put aside to provide for their retirement.

"I therefore propose to increase the limits on retirement annuity relief for contributors who are now in their 50s and 60s; to 20 per cent for those born between 1916 and 1933, to 21 per cent for those born in 1914 or 1915, and to 24 per cent for those born in 1912 or 1913.

I also propose to alter the present restrictions on the relief to allow more self-employed people to benefit from these higher levels.

CAPITAL TRANSFER TAX

"The threshold for capital transfer tax will be increased to £55,000. Under the new scale the top rate of tax will be reached at £2.5 million.

"I also propose that the indexation principles, already applied to income tax allowances, should in future apply as well to the capital transfer tax threshold and bands."

INCOME TAX

Turning to income tax, the Chancellor said people quite rightly looked for some reduction in their own tax burden.

"The paramount aim of this Budget is to help industry, to encourage business and to create jobs. But I want also to assist people directly.

"I propose to concentrate the relief that is available this year on raising the tax thresholds.

"The single personal allowance will accordingly be increased by £190 to £1,565 and the married allowance by £300 to £2,445.

"The additional allowance for single parents will, as a consequence, rise by £110 to £880. So too will the widow's bereavement allowance. There will be corresponding increases in the age allowances, the higher rate threshold and bands, and the threshold for the investment income surcharge.

"As a result some 1.2 million people who would have paid tax next year will not now have to do so," the Chancellor concluded.

The Debate on the Budget

Mr. Foot, Opposition leader, said the major defect of the Budget was that it showed no proper understanding of the scale of the unemployment catastrophe. If they took all the measures the Chancellor introduced last autumn and all the measures he had proposed that day it still was on balance a deflationary package. Mr. Jo Grimond (Lib., Orkney and Shetland) said that as a Budget for industry this one had some good points but did not go far enough; the Government had done too little to deal with the real causes of inflation and poor productivity. The subsequent debate was spread over four days and ended on Mar. 15.

Unemployment Benefits

Some Conservative M.P.s joined forces with the Opposition in the Commons on Mar. 18 and protested that the unemployed were being unfairly penalised over the payment of unemployment benefits. They argued that the Government had given undertakings that a five per cent abatement introduced in 1980 in lieu of taxation would be made good when the benefits came into taxation. A Labour new clause to the Social Security and Housing Benefits Bill to make good the shortfall in the November unemployment uprating was defeated, however by 248 to 218 votes, with 13 Tories voting against the Government. Another new clause tabled in the name of 15 Conservatives and achieving the same aim was debated simultaneously but was not selected for a vote. On Mar. 23 the Bill was given a third reading in the Commons by 155 to 103 votes.

THE FALKLANDS CONFLICT

In the Commons on Mar. 23, Conservative backbenchers supported Mr. Callaghan, the former Labour Prime Minister, when he blamed the Government for the landing of 60 Argentine scrap merchants on a Falkland Islands dependency, saying Foreign Office Ministers had been warned that when news of the decision to withdraw Endurance, the ice patrol vessel, reached Argentina this type of escapade would be likely. Mr. Luce, Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, replied that Endurance was still in the area and was in a position to help if necessary. Repeatedly, Mr. Luce gave assurances to defend and support the islanders to M.P.s from both sides as they voiced their anxieties about the strength of the Government's commitment to the Falklanders. Mr. Healey, Shadow Foreign Secretary, said it was odd that the Minister had made no reference to the flag hoisted by the Argentines on South Georgia Island. Mr. Luce said an Argentine flag had been planted for a short time but had now been removed. The Government was taking steps to see the six to 10 Argentines who remained of the original 60 would not be there much longer.

On Mar. 30, Lord Carrington, Foreign Secretary, promised in the Lords that Endurance would remain on station "as long as necessary". It had been made clear to the Argentine Government that Britain regarded the scrap merchants still ashore in South Georgia as being illegally on British territory. Argentine warships were in the area and the situation was "potentially dangerous".

Meantime in the Commons, Mr. Callaghan hinted that a similar invasion by Argentines had been seen off by a Royal Navy presence in the recent past. "On a very recent occasion of which I have full knowledge," he disclosed, "we assembled ships stationed in the Caribbean, Gibraltar and the Mediterranean and stood them about 400 miles off the Falkland Islands in support of Endurance. Without fuss and without publicity, when this became known, a diplomatic solution followed." Mr. Luce, the Minister concerned, faced some anxious and probing questioning by M.P.s, particularly Conservatives, but insisted that he could give no details of the security position, declaring later: "We will defend the islanders if necessary."

On April 2, Mr. Humphrey Atkins, Lord Privy Seal, in a statement on the reported Argentine invasion of the Falklands (of which Mr. Pym, Leader of the House, said the Government had "no confirmation of rumours" of landings), said Britain had sought an emergency meeting of the U.N. Security Council on April 1 because the situation had become increasingly grave; there had been no Argentinian response to the call from the president of the Security Council for restraint to be exercised and for a diplomatic solution to be sought. Britain was taking appropriate military and diplomatic measures to sustain their rights under international law and in accord with the U.N. Charter. Mr. John Silkin, Opposition Defence spokesman, said it was their duty to defend the right of the Falkland Islanders to stay British. Whenever the fascist junta which ruled Argentina was in deep trouble at home, it threatened the Falkland Islands and were not the signs to be seen some time ago? Dr. David Owen (S.D.P., Plymouth, Devonport), a former Labour Foreign Secretary, said his party fully supported the Government in every measure it saw fit to take to defend the Islands and Mr. Donald Stewart (Western Isles), leader of the Scottish Nationalists, demanded an undertaking that the rights of the Islanders would be defended by force if necessary.

EMERGENCY SATURDAY SITTING

With the rumours of landings confirmed, the House of Commons met in emergency session on April 3, the first Saturday sitting since the Suez crisis of 1956; the Prime Minister stated to a packed Chamber: "The House meets to respond to a situation of great gravity. We are here because for the first time for many years a British sovereign territory has been invaded by a foreign power. By late afternoon yesterday (April 2) it became clear that an Argentine invasion had taken place and the lawful British Government of the Islands had been usurped." Mrs. Thatcher totally condemned "this unprovoked aggression" which had not a shred of justification nor a scrap of legality, and was cheered when she added: "It is the Government's objective to see the Islands are freed from occupation and returned to British administration at the earliest possible moment." There were renewed cheers when the Prime Minister added: "The Government have now decided that a large force will sail as soon as preparations are complete; H.M.S. Invincible will be in the lead and will leave port on Monday." Mr. Foot, Labour leader, said they were faced with an act of naked unqualified aggression carried out in the most shameful and disreputable circumstances. It seemed that the British Government had been fooled by the way in which the Argentine junta had gone about their business. The paramount concern was to protect those who rightly and naturally had looked to them for their protection; so far they had been betrayed and the responsibility for that betrayal rested with the Government. Mr. Silkin, Labour's defence spokesman, said all the indications were that the Prime Minister, Mr. Nott (Defence Secretary), and Lord Carrington (Foreign Secretary) had bungled the defence of the Islands. Mr. Nott was shouted down at the end of the debate when he denied that the British Government had been caught unprepared and his speech was constantly stopped by Opposition shouts of "Resign". The House of Lords also met in emergency sitting and Lord Carrington said it became increasingly clear that the Argentine Government was bent on confrontation and set on entering into an occupation of the Falklands.

On April 5, Mrs. Thatcher rejected Labour demands for her resignation and announced an embargo on imports of all goods from Argentina. On April 7 the Commons debated the crisis with Mr. Francis Pym making his debut as new Foreign Secretary and declaring that the Government would not shrink from using force if necessary, and that the Task Force steaming towards the Falklands would be fully adequate for any action. "Britain does not appease dictators," commented Mr. Pym amid cheers. Mr. Healey, Shadow Foreign Secretary, spoke of Mr. Pym's heavy and awesome responsibility of guiding the nation through the most dangerous crisis it had faced for more than 25 years, for which the former Foreign Secretary and Prime Minister carried overwhelming responsibility. There were cheers when Mr. Callaghan, former Labour Prime Minister, said: "Britain must do her best to secure peace with honour; despite our heavy criticisms of the Prime Minister and the Government we will support that end." Mr. David Steel said in the Liberals' view the Government would be right once they had secured withdrawal of the Argentine forces to discuss openly questions of condominium and the lease-back proposal. Mr. Wedgwood Benn (Lab. Bristol S.E.) considered the Task Force should be withdrawn; it involved enormous risks and would cost Britain a far greater humiliation than they had suffered. Mr. Nott, Defence Secretary, said M.P.s would wish to hold an inquest on what went wrong but the time for that should be when the Falklands had been returned to British administration and not whilst the Task Force was at sea. On April 8, asked by Mr. David Owen (S.D.P., Plymouth Devonport) for an assurance that the whole conduct of the affair would be investigated, Mrs. Thatcher said that they were considering in what form a review or inquiry should take place and its timing and would consult opposition parties on it.

EASTER RECESS SITTINGS

On April 14, both the Lords and Commons held special sittings during the Easter recess to discuss the crisis. Mrs. Thatcher declared that while persevering with economic and diplomatic measures to resolve the dispute, Britain was ready to resort to force in self-defence under the U.N. Charter. Mr. Foot, for Labour, reaffirmed support for the despatch of the Task Force and Dr. Owen, for the Social Democrats, said no one should weaken Britain's negotiating position by casting doubt on their intention to see this issue through. Dame Judith Hart (Lab. Lanark), chairman of the Labour party, said all agreed an act of intolerable aggression had been committed but a pause for peace was needed now; they should at this point not retreat but halt the Task Force to give a breathing space for negotiations. Mr. Healey urged the Government to consider replacing the Argentines during this first phase with some force of U.N. presence and Mr. Pym, replying, said Britain had not set its face against any idea of change for the Falklands in the future but they could not accept change imposed upon the islanders. In the Lords, the Archbishop of Canterbury emphasised the support felt by the Church for the two principles at stake—the overwhelming importance of support for international law and the right to self-determination by people in the Falklands. Lord Shackleton, the Labour spokesman, also reaffirmed Opposition support for Government actions.

Mrs. Thatcher said on April 20 that the latest proposals for settling the issue fell short of what was required. On April 21, Mr. Pym, on the eve of his visit to Washington to discuss Argentine proposals for a peaceful withdrawal of its troops, warned M.P.s that in the end it might not be possible to negotiate a peaceful settlement. The Prime Minister warned Argentina on April 26 that little time was left in which to reach a peaceful settlement; the number of military options open to the Task Force in stormy weather was limited. Mrs. Thatcher, to resounding cheers, congratulated the forces on recapturing South Georgia and Mr. Foot, supporting the Government's legal right to recover South Georgia, warned Mrs. Thatcher against "any dangerous escalation of the crisis".

There were noisy scenes in the Commons on April 27 when Mrs. Thatcher refused Mr. Foot's demand for an assurance that there would be no military escalation pending a visit by a British Minister to New York to discuss the appeal of the U.N. Secretary-General for a peaceful settlement and cries of "warmonger" emanated from some Labour benches.

Mrs. Thatcher, opening the fourth full-scale debate on April 29, declared that the key to peace rested with the Argentines who had made no move to comply with the U.N. Security Council resolution to withdraw her forces. It would be totally inconsistent to support the despatch of the Task Force but be opposed to its use. Mr. Callaghan said Britain should be ready to impose a long blockade of the Islands and Mr. Foot suggested a possible reference to the International Court of Justice. Mr. Owen, the S.D.P. spokesman, said Mrs. Thatcher's speech would take the vast majority of the people with her, but Mr. Wedgwood Benn, frequently heckled by Tories, said by sending the Task Force the Prime Minister had lost control of the situation. In the Lords, there was general support for Government actions.

On May 4, Mr. Nott, Defence Secretary, made a statement on the loss of H.M.S. Sheffield and the sinking of the Argentine cruiser, General Belgrano; Mr. Pym said Britain was not seeking the military humiliation of Argentina but a victory for the rule of law in international affairs. Dr Owen said on May 5 many people expected a clear indication of what Britain's long-term position was towards the Falklands; Mr. Pym replied that they had an open mind on the ultimate solution and U.N. trusteeship was one of the possibilities.

Mrs. Thatcher insisted on May 6 that Security Council Resolution 502 calling for an Argentine withdrawal had to be accepted and declared there could be no ceasefire unless it was accompanied by withdrawal which was fully and properly supervised. The Government accepted the ideas put forward by the U.N. Secretary-General, as a framework on which more specific proposals for a negotiated settlement could be built. Britain had also made a very constructive response to proposals being pursued by the United States through Peru. On May 7, Mr. Pym reported on the failure of the U.S. and Peruvian peace initiative because of Argentine intransigence and said Britain would do whatever might be necessary to end the unlawful occupation if the junta failed to show a readiness and desire to reach a peaceful settlement.

There were angry exchanges in the Commons on May 11 when the Prime Minister was repeatedly urged by Mr. Foot for a promise that the Government would show restraint until M.P.s had had a chance to pass judgment on any outcome of the U.N. negotiations. Mrs. Thatcher retorted it was for the Government to decide when and how to act, emphasising that they would not budge from the insistence that any ceasefire must be accompanied by an Argentinian withdrawal. On May 13, Mrs. Thatcher stated that the objectives of the Task Force were the same now as when it had left for the South Atlantic: "We are working for a peaceful solution, not a peaceful sell-out," she added. During the fifth debate since the crisis began, Mr. Pym reaffirmed the Government's determination to end the illegal occupation and to uphold the rights of the Islanders. Mr. Heath, the former Tory Prime Minister, supported the Government's strategy and urged Mr. Pym to stand firm against the criticism being made against him and the Government.

A VOTE ON THE CRISIS

On May 20, M.P.s provided mass support for the Government's handling of the issue when Mr. Wedgwood Benn and some other Labour M.P.s forced the first vote on the crisis on a technical motion to adjourn the House at the end of the sixth debate. Thirty-one Labour M.P.s and two Welsh Nationalists voted against the Government but the great majority of Labour M.P.s abstained after Mr. Healey indicated broad support for Britain's actions so far. The motion was defeated by 296 to 33 votes, a Government majority of 263. Mrs. Thatcher earlier made clear that the Government had been willing to make concessions to avoid further bloodshed but that these had now been withdrawn; the British proposals for a peaceful solution, the seventh lot of proposals in which they had been involved, had been rejected. The Prime Minister said: "Difficult days lie ahead but Britain will face them in the conviction that our cause is just." An incisive attack on Mr. Benn for planning to force a vote against the Government was made by Mr. Callaghan. In the Lords, Lord Shackleton, Opposition spokesman, dissociated the majority in the Labour party from the position taken up by Mr. Benn, Dame Judith Hart, and others and observed that it was clear that it was almost impossible to arrive at any agreement with the Argentine Government.

BRITISH FORCES ESTABLISHED

On May 24, Mr. Nott, Defence Secretary, announcing that British forces were now established on the Islands, told the Commons that the days of the Argentine garrison there were numbered. The Labour peer, Lord Jenkins of Putney, called in the Lords for members to have the chance to vote against Government action but it was ignored without a solitary supporter. On May 25, Mr. Nott reported on events in the South Atlantic since the successful British landing on East Falkland and Mrs. Thatcher, pressed by Mr. Foot for an assurance that the Government remained ready to negotiate, replied that the conflict would end if there was a withdrawal of Argentine troops in accord with the U.N. resolution. Britain would use its veto to stop any move at the U.N. to call for a ceasefire, she stressed.

Reporting on the loss of H.M.S. Coventry and the Atlantic Conveyor, the Defence Secretary said on May 26 that the Government's resolve to free the Islanders from occupation and to restore their democratic rights was undiminished. There might be more British losses on land and sea but generally the military objective to repossess had gone forward exactly as planned. The Lords renewed their support for the efforts of the Task Force while regretting the tragic loss of life so far involved.

On May 27, Mrs. Thatcher was cheered when she announced that British forces were now moving forward from the bridgehead established last week in the San Carlos area. On June 8, Mrs. Thatcher disagreed with the view advanced by Mr. Foot that there should be another try for a negotiated settlement through the U.N. Stressing Britain had tried for a long time for peace through negotiations, she said: "We shall now have to take by force what the Argentines would not give up by adhering to the U.N. resolution."

Mr. Nott told M.P.s on June 10 that British forces would go forward with another victory "very soon" and that the Task Force plans had not been prejudiced by the latest Argentine attacks on the landing ships Sir Galahad and Sir Tristram; losses of stores and equipment were already being made good. Mr. Foot reiterated his call for a fresh Government initiative at the U.N. "to see if an alternative to unconditional surrender can be offered to the Argentine forces." Mr. Whitelaw, deputising for the Prime Minister, answered that if the Argentine forces in Port Stanley announced their wish to withdraw to the mainland they would be given time to do so with dignity and in good order.

EMERGENCY STATEMENT ON CEASEFIRE

On June 14, a packed and cheering Chamber with M.P.s waving their order papers hailed an emergency statement by Mrs. Thatcher late at night that Argentine troops in Port Stanley were flying the white flag and that there was a ceasefire as talks were taking place for the surrender by the Argentines of both East and West Falkland. Mrs. Thatcher made another statement on the following day about the surrender of the Argentines and said that the Battle of the Falklands had been a remarkable military operation, "boldly planned, bravely executed and brilliantly accomplished." She continued: "We owe an enormous debt to the British Forces and to the Merchant Marine. We honour them all. They have been supported by a people united in defence of our way of life and of our sovereign territory." Mr. Foot joined in the thanks and congratulations to the Servicemen and their commanders. Previously at Question Time, the Prime Minister said the Government would move quickly to set in hand the inquiry into the reasons for the original loss of the Falklands.

THE AFTERMATH

On July 1, Mr. Nott announced during a debate on the Defence White Paper, orders to replace losses sustained during the conflict starting with new Sea Harriers, but confirmed previous plans for the closure of Chatham Dockyard and naval base by April 1984, although no further compulsory redundancy notices would be issued at Portsmouth before Jan. 1 next.

The ice survey ship, Endurance, would continue in service and be redeployed in the South Atlantic after a major refit. Mr. Silkin, Shadow Defence Secretary, said the Defence White Paper was totally out of date and totally irrelevant. On July 8, the motion setting up the committee of inquiry into the Falklands invasion was approved without any opposition, the terms of reference and method of procedure being welcomed generally although some Labour M.P.s were critical.

The Trident Nuclear Missile

Mr. John Nott, the Defence Secretary, announced in the Commons on Mar. 29 moves to ensure as many jobs as possible flowed to British industry from the decision to buy the American Trident nuclear missile system and pointed out that the £4,000 million of the total £7,500 million cost of Trident would be spent in this country on the development of the warheads and submarines. Mr. John Silkin, Shadow Defence Secretary, deplored the decision to buy Trident and argued Britain would not be able to use it without American permission. A Labour motion condemning the purchase of Trident was defeated by 301 to 215 votes.

On April 6, the Finance Bill was given a second reading by 301 to 235 votes, and on April 21 after a debate on the Government's expenditure plans for 1982-83, an Opposition move to reject them failed when a motion to "take note" of the Expenditure White Paper was carried by 292 to 238 votes. Failure by the Government to make good a five per cent abatement in unemployment benefit was criticised by some Tory backbenchers during the committee stage of the Finance Bill on April 27 and nine of them voted against the Government when a Labour amendment seeking to make good the abatement before short-term benefits came into taxation was defeated by 255 to 207 votes.

On April 28 there was a full-scale debate on the devolution proposals for Northern Ireland introduced by Mr. Prior, Ulster Secretary of State, which encountered strong criticism from Ulster M.P.s and some Conservatives.

Capital Punishment Vote

On May 11, M.P.s voted 357 to 195, majority of 162 on a free vote, against the restoration of capital punishment for murder and then rejected by 332 to 208, a majority of 124, the death penalty for terrorist killings. Cabinet Ministers and M.P.s of all parties voted in opposing lobbies; Mrs. Thatcher voted in favour of restoration and Mr. Whitelaw, the Home Secretary, voted against. The votes were on new clauses proposed by Conservative backbenchers to the Criminal Justice Bill.

The Employment Bill was given a third reading in the Commons on May 19 by 319 to 224 votes, two S.D.P. M.P.s voting against the measure and the rest of the party's M.P.s abstaining.

The Northern Ireland Bill

On June 17, the Commons resumed consideration of the Northern Ireland Bill, which seeks to establish an Assembly in the Province, after an all-night 17-hour sitting which ended earlier in the day, most of the opposition emanating from a group of Tory M.P.s. Then on June 22, the Government moved a guillotine motion to speed up completion of the Bill's progress and this was carried by 298 to 44 votes. Twenty-five Tories opposed the motion and were joined by 12 Labour and seven Unionist M.P.s.

although the Opposition abstained while Liberals and Social Democrats supported the Government.

Royal Security

The Home Secretary (Mr. Whitelaw) told M.P.s on July 12 that immediate steps were being taken to strengthen security at Buckingham Palace after "a most serious failure" had allowed an intruder to enter the Queen's bedroom on July 9 while she was present. Security arrangements at all other royal residences were also being reviewed. Mr. Whitelaw reported that a man was arrested in Buckingham Palace and said Assistant Commissioner John Dellow of Scotland Yard had been appointed to carry out an urgent inquiry. On July 19, M.P.s were astounded when Mr. Whitelaw announced that Commander Michael Trestrail, the Queen's Police Officer, had confessed to having a homosexual relationship over a number of years with a male prostitute and that he had resigned from the Metropolitan Police. On July 21, Mr. Whitelaw announced new measures to protect the Queen and members of the Royal Family and said Lord Bridge, chairman of the Security Commission, had been asked to investigate the appointment and activities of Commander Trestrail. Mr. Whitelaw added that the police investigation showed the basic cause of the security breakdown was a failure by police to respond efficiently and urgently.

The Lords had an all-night sitting to deal with the committee stage of the Employment Bill which they completed at 4.50 a.m. on July 14. In the Commons, the Government's majority dropped to eight when 18 Conservative backbenchers voted against and six other Tories abstained on an amendment moved by Mr. James Lester (Con. Beeston) to restore a five per cent cut in unemployment benefit made two years ago. The amendment was defeated by 291 to 283 votes. Mr. Blaker, Armed Forces Minister, confirmed in the Commons on July 19 the Government's decision not to sell the carrier, H.M.S. Invincible, to Australia and said that it had instead offered to make H.M.S. Hermes available to the Royal Australian Navy on favourable financial terms while discussing with them a package of helicopters and Harriers.

On July 20, an emergency debate on the industrial action taken by National Health Service workers over their pay offer ended with a vote forced by the Opposition on the Secretary of State for Social Services's handling of the dispute, but this was defeated by 303 to 250, a Government majority of 53.

The regulations requiring the compulsory wearing of seat belts in cars were approved in the Commons on July 22 by 181 to 59 votes, after Mrs. Lynda Chalker, Transport Under-Secretary, said the effective date would be January rather than the target date of March 1983. The Lords passed the same regulations on July 30 by 95 to 13 votes.

Hire Purchase Controls Abolished

In the Upper House on July 26, Lord Cockfield, Trade Secretary, announced that controls on hire purchase were to be abolished from midnight, and said that their removal was consistent with the policy of dismantling unnecessary controls in the interests of freeing competition and removing economic distortions. The decision was made during a debate in which Labour peer Lord Jacques attacked the extent to which the cost of Government economic policy had fallen on those least able to bear it.

Opposition Attacks Government Policies

In the Commons on July 27, an Opposition motion blaming the Government's economic, industrial and monetary policies for a massive increase in unemployment and calling for the abandonment of policies which "had clearly failed the nation" was defeated by 311 to 257 votes. A Government amendment commending its policies as offering more realistic prospects of economic recovery and secure employment than the "failed Socialist policies of the past," was carried by 311 to 257 votes. The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Sir Geoffrey Howe) announced measures to assist the unemployed, including the creation of 11 new enterprise zones. On the same day, the Lords debated defence but without taking the issue to a vote.

Mr. Younger, Scottish Secretary, told M.P.s on July 28 that efforts to reopen the Invergordon aluminium smelter had failed despite the offer to prospective users of a £100 million subsidy over five years. The closure would have serious knock-on effects for the Highlands and the Scottish economy but he said Invergordon was to be one of the two new Scottish enterprise zones.

The Commons adjourned for the summer recess on July 30, while the Lords rose on Aug. 2.

PUBLIC ACTS OF PARLIAMENT 1981–1982

This list of Public Acts commences with 8 Public Acts which received the Royal Assent before September 1981 and which were mentioned briefly in the last summary. Those Public Acts which follow received the Royal Assent after August 1981. The date stated after each Act is the date on which it came into operation.

British Telecommunications Act 1981 (July 27, 1981) establishes the British Telecommunications Corporation, makes provisions with respect to its functions and transfers to it certain property, rights and liabilities of the Post Office. It also makes further provision with respect to the Post Office, for example in relation to its postal monopoly.

Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 (October 27, 1981) makes fresh provision for England, Wales and Northern Ireland with respect to forgery and kindred offences; for Great Britain and Northern Ireland with respect to the counterfeiting of notes and coins and kindred offences; and amends the penalties for offences under the Post Office Act 1953 s. 53.

Contempt of Court Act 1981 (provisions relating to legal aid on a day or days to be appointed, the remainder on August 27, 1981) amends the law relating to contempt, implementing with some modifications the main recommendations of the Phillimore Report (1974).

Deep Sea Mining (Temporary Provisions) Act 1981 (January 25, 1982) makes provision with respect to deep sea mining and for connected purposes.

Supreme Court Act 1981 (part on July 28, 1981 the remainder on January 1, 1982) consolidates with amendments the Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act 1925 and other enactments relating to the Supreme Court in England and Wales and the administration of justice therein; repeals certain obsolete or unnecessary enactments so relating; and amends Part VIII of the Mental Health Act 1959, the Courts-Martial (Appeals) Act 1968, the Arbitration Act 1979 and the law relating to county courts.

Armed Forces Act 1981 (various dates) continues the Army Act 1955, the Air Force Act 1955 and the Naval Discipline Act 1957; amends those Acts and other enactments relating to the armed forces; confers new powers for the temporary detention abroad of servicemen or civilians subject to those Acts suffering from mental disorder or the children of service and certain civilian families in need of care and control; completes the assimilation for statutory purposes of the women's services with the rest of the armed forces; and makes various other connected provisions.

Transport Act 1981 (July 31, 1981) makes provision for the disposal by the British Railways Board of part of its undertaking; provides for the reconstitution of the British Transport Docks Board; dissolves the National Ports Council; makes provisions for road safety, provides a new basis for vehicle excise duty for drivers' licences; makes provision for grants assisting with facilities for freight haulage by inland waterway and makes provision with respect to railway fires.

Employment and Training Act 1981 (various dates) amends the Industrial Training Act 1964, abolishes the Employment Service Agency and the Training Services Agency and provides for the retention of receipts by certain bodies.

Education (Scotland) Act 1981 (various dates) amends the law relating to education in Scotland, the Teaching Council (Scotland) Act 1965 and transfers to the respective University Courts the power of appointing the Principals of the Universities of St. Andrews, Glasgow and Aberdeen.

Matrimonial Homes (Family Protection) (Scotland) Act 1981 (day to be appointed) makes new provision for Scotland as to the rights of occupancy of spouses in a matrimonial home and of cohabiting couples in the house where they cohabit; provides for the transfer of the tenancy of a matrimonial home between the spouses in certain circumstances during the marriage and on granting decree of divorce or nullity of marriage, and for the transfer of the tenancy of a house occupied by a cohabiting couple between the parties in certain circumstances; and strengthens the law relating to matrimonial interdicts. The Act is based on the report of the Scottish Law Commission on Occupancy Rights in the Matrimonial Home and Domestic Violence.

Education Act 1981 (day to be appointed) makes provision for children with special educational needs. The Act gives force to the main recommendations of the Warnock Committee.

British Nationality Act 1981 (various dates) makes fresh provision about citizenship and nationality and amends the Immigration Act 1971 as regards the right of abode in the U.K. The Act substitutes three separate citizenships: British, British Dependent Territories and British Overseas for that of United Kingdom and Colonies although it retains several other categories such as British protected persons.

Companies Act 1981 (various dates) amends the law relating to companies and business names. For example it implements the E.E.C. Fourth Directive on Company Law of July 25, 1978 on company accounts and abolishes the Register of Business Names.

Betting and Gaming Duties Act 1981 (day to be appointed) consolidates certain enactments concerning the duties of excise relating to betting and gaming.

New Towns Act 1981 (November 30, 1981) consolidates certain enactments relating to new towns.

Trustee Savings Bank Act 1981 (January 30, 1982) consolidates the 1969 to 1978 Acts with amendments to give effect to recommendations of the Law Commission and the Scottish Law Commission.

Compulsory Purchase (Vesting Declarations) Act 1981 (January 30, 1982) consolidates the provisions of the Town and Country Planning Act 1968 concerning general vesting declarations, and related enactments.

Acquisition of Land Act 1981 (January 30, 1982) consolidates the Acquisition of Land (Authorisation Procedure) Act 1946 and related enactments.

Broadcasting Act 1981 (immediately after the coming into force of the last of the provisions of the Act of 1980) consolidates the Independent Broadcasting Authority Acts 1973, 1974 and 1978 and the Broadcasting Act 1980.

Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 (various dates) repeals and re-enacts with amendments the Protection of Birds Acts 1954 to 1967 and the Conservation of Wild Creatures and Wild Plants Act 1975; prohibits certain methods of killing or taking wild animals; restricts the introduction of certain animals and plants; amends the Endangered Species (Import and Export) Act 1976; amends the law of nature conservation, the countryside and the National Parks and makes provision with respect to the Countryside Commission; amends the law relating to public rights of way and for connected purposes.

Consolidated Fund (No. 2) Act 1981 (December 22, 1981) applies certain sums out of the Consolidated Fund to the service of the years ending on March 31, 1982 and 1983.

NATIONAL HEALTH SERVICE (and Local Authority Personal Social Services)

The National Health Service came into being on July 5, 1948, as a result of the National Health Service Act 1946. The Act placed a duty on the Secretary of State for Social Services to promote the establishment in England and Wales of a comprehensive Health Service designed to secure improvement in the mental and physical health of the people and the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of illness. The Secretary of State for Wales administers the National Health Service in Wales. There are separate Acts for Scotland and Northern Ireland, where the Health Services are run on very similar lines. The Secretaries of State are responsible to Parliament for seeing that Health Services of all kinds of the highest possible quality are available to all who need them.

The National Health Service covers a comprehensive range of hospital, specialist, general practitioner (medical, dental, ophthalmic and pharmaceutical), artificial limb and appliance, ambulance, and community health services. Everyone normally resident in this country is entitled to use any of these services, there are no contribution conditions and the charges made (except those for amenity beds) are reduced or waived in cases of hardship. In addition the Secretary of State for Social Services is responsible under the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970 for the provision by local authorities of social services for the elderly, the mentally handicapped, the physically disabled and also for families and children. The 1980 Health Services Act led to major changes in the structure of the Health Service. Under arrangements which became operational in April 1982, District Health Authorities (DHAs)—of which there are 192 in England and 9 in Wales—are responsible for the operational management of health services and for planning within regional and national strategic guidelines. Each DHA is required to arrange its services into units of management at hospital and community services level, and as many decisions as possible are delegated to unit level.

The 14 Regional Health Authorities (RHAs) in England are responsible for regional planning, the allocation of resources to District Authorities, and the promotion of national policies and priorities. Performance review meetings are held annually between each DHA and its RHA, and between each RHA and Department of Health and Social Security Ministers, thereby strengthening Authorities' accountability to Parliament, whilst respecting the essentially locally-based nature of decision making. Professional advisory machinery incorporated within the structure ensures that Health Authorities and their staffs make decisions in the full knowledge of expert opinion.

The cost of the reorganized NHS is still financed mainly from taxation and met from moneys voted by Parliament. In Great Britain this amounts to more than £12 billion a year. The Department of Health and Social Security makes capital and revenue allocations to the RHAs and from these the RHAs meet the cost of their own services and make allocations to DHAs as well as funding Community Health Councils.

THE HEALTH SERVICES

Family Doctor Service

In England and Wales the Family Doctor Service is organized by 98 Family Practitioner Committees which also organize the General Dental, Pharmaceutical and Ophthalmic Services for their areas. There is a Family Practitioner Committee for one or more District Health Authorities; members, who serve voluntarily, are appointed by local doctors, dentists, pharmacists and opticians (15), the Local Authority or Authorities (4) and the District Health Authority or Authorities jointly (11). Any doctor may take part in the Family Doctor Scheme, provided the area in which he wishes to practise has not already an adequate number of doctors, and about 24,500 general practitioners do so. They may at the same time have private fee-paying patients. Family doctors are paid for their Health Service work in accordance with a scheme of remuneration which includes inter alia a basic practice allowance, capitation fees, reimbursement of certain practice expenses and payments for "out of hours" work.

Everyone aged 16 or over can choose his doctor (parents or guardians choose for children under 16) and the doctor is also free to accept a person or not as he chooses. A person may change his doctor if he wishes, either at once if he has changed his address or obtained permission from the doctor on whose list he is, or by informing the Family Practitioner

Committee (in which case 14 days must elapse before the other doctor can accept him). When people are away from home they can still use the Family Doctor Service if they ask to be treated as "temporary residents", and in an emergency, if a person's own doctor is not available, any doctor in the service will give treatment and advice.

Patients are treated either in the Doctor's surgery or, when necessary, at home. Doctors may prescribe for their patients all drugs and medicines which are medically necessary for their treatment and also a certain number of surgical appliances (the more elaborate being provided through the hospitals).

Dental Service

Dentists, like doctors, may take part in the Service and may also have private patients. About 12,000 of the dentists available for general practice in England provide National Health Service general dental services. They are responsible to the Family Practitioner Committees in whose areas they provide services.

Patients are free to go to any dentist taking part in the Service and willing to accept them, and cannot register with any particular dentist. Dentists receive payment for items of treatment for individual patients, instead of the capitation fee received by doctors. There is no need for the patient to obtain a recommendation before seeking dental treatment. All treatment and dentures considered by the dentist to be necessary for dental fitness are available under the NHS. But for certain more expensive items such as metal dentures, bridges and gold fillings, it is necessary for the dentist to obtain the prior approval of the Dental Estimates Board.

A dentist may, with the approval of the Dental Estimates Board, charge his patients a prescribed sum for such types of treatment as crowns, inlays or metal dentures where these are not clinically necessary, if the patient wishes to have them. Where a denture supplied under the Service has to be replaced because of loss or damage the whole or part of the cost may be charged to the patient if he has been careless. From April 1, 1971, the system of charges was changed so that patients became liable for a proportion of the cost of treatment, including the supply of dentures, if required, up to a maximum charge of £10 for one course of treatment, unless they were exempt from charges or entitled to remission on income grounds. A revised system of charges was introduced on January 1, 1976, so that the patient paid the full cost of each item of treatment (excluding dentures) up to a maximum charge of £3.50 for one course of treatment. The most recent revision of charges was introduced on April 1, 1982. They are as follows:—

1. The patient pays the full cost of each item of treatment (except dentures, bridges, crowns, inlays, pinlays and gold fillings) up to a maximum charge of £13 for one course of treatment.

2. For a denture or a bridge—

	Synthetic resin	Metal or Porcelain
(a) 1, 2 or 3 teeth	£20	£37
(b) 4-8 teeth	£21	£39
(c) More than 8 teeth	£22	£41

Maximum for more than one denture (or bridge)

£35      £74

3. For crowns, inlays, pinlays and gold fillings—

(a) per tooth restored

£24 or £48 depending on the percentage of gold used (these charges include any other restorations in the same tooth, apart from root fillings)

(b) maximum if more than one tooth restored £90

The maximum charge for any combination of the above items of treatment and fixed charges is £90.

No charge is made for clinical examination of a patient's mouth, arrest of bleeding, repairs to dentures, the cost of travelling if the dentist has to visit the patient at home or re-opening of the surgery in an emergency. Expectant mothers or women who have had a child during the preceding twelve months, children under 16, or up to 19, but still in full-time attendance at school, do not pay charges. Young people over 16, not in full-time education, pay for dentures. Full remission of charges is automatically available to people in receipt of supplementary benefit or F.I.S., and those entitled to free prescriptions and milk and vitamins on income grounds. Full or partial remission may also be available to those with incomes somewhat above supplementary benefits if they claim.

Pharmaceutical Service

Patients may obtain medicines, appliances and oral contraceptives prescribed under the NHS from any pharmacy whose owner has entered into arrangements with the Family Practitioner Committee to provide this service. Almost all pharmacy owners have done so and display notices that they dispense under the NHS: the number of these pharmacies in England and Wales at the end of 1981 was about 9,500. There are also some appliance suppliers who only provide special appliances. In country areas where access to a pharmacy may be difficult patients may be able to obtain medicines etc. from their doctor.

Except for contraceptives (for which there is no charge), a charge of £1.30 is payable for each item supplied unless the patient is exempt and the declaration on the back of the prescription form is completed. Exemptions cover children under 16, people of pension age, expectant mothers and mothers of a child under one year of age, people suffering from certain medical conditions, people who receive F.I.S. or supplementary benefit, people on low income, including young people over 16 who are still at school or college, and war pensioners for their accepted disablements. In addition prepayment certificates may be purchased by those patients not entitled to exemption who require frequent prescriptions. Further information about the exemption and prepayment arrangements is given in leaflet P.11.

General Ophthalmic Services

General Ophthalmic Services, which are administered by Family Practitioner Committees, form part of the ophthalmic services available under the National Health Service and provide for the testing of sight and supply of glasses to meet more normal needs only. Diagnosis and specialist treatment of eye conditions is available through the Hospital Eye Service as well as the provision of glasses of a special type. Testing of sight may be carried out by any ophthalmic medical practitioner or ophthalmic optician, and glasses supplied by any ophthalmic optician or dispensing optician taking part in the Services.

Sight testing is free. The charges for lenses are £3.70 to £9.25 for each single-vision lens, £7.90 to £14.60 for each bifocal lens, plus, where required, £1 to £2.35 each lens for prisms, £2 or £4 for each tinted lens, subject to a maximum of £15 for each lens.

The cost of the frame must also be paid; NHS frames cost from £2.05 to £9.27. Children up to the age of 16 or young people under 19 in full-time education may be supplied free of charge with standard lenses in children's standard frames. Additionally, school-children aged 10 years or over and young people under 19 in full-time education may be supplied with standard lenses without charge if any other type of NHS frame is used. The charge for the frame must then be paid. People on a low income may receive help with the cost of NHS glasses, and this is automatic for those who receive supplementary benefit, F.I.S., free milk or vitamins, or free prescriptions because of low income.

Primary Health Care Services

Primary health care services include the general medical, dental, ophthalmic and pharmaceutical services, health centres and clinics, family planning outside the hospital service and preventive activities in the community including vaccination, immunisation and fluoridation. The district nursing and health visiting services, much ante- and post-natal care; and chiropody are also an integral part of the primary health care service.

Community Child Health Services

Pre-school services, usually at child health clinics, provide regular surveillance of children's physical, mental and emotional health and development, and advice to parents on their children's health and welfare. The School Health Service provides for the medical and dental examination of school-children, and advises the local education authority, the school, the parents and the pupil of any health factors which may require special consideration during the pupil's school life.

Hospitals and Other Services

The Secretary of State for Social Services has a duty to provide, to such extent as he/she considers necessary to meet all reasonable requirements, hospital and other accommodation; medical, dental, nursing and ambulance services; other facilities for the care of expectant and nursing mothers and young children, facilities for the prevention of illness, and the care and after-care of persons suffering from illness and such other services as are required for the diagnosis and treatment of illness. Rehabilitation services (occupational therapy, physiotherapy and speech therapy) may also be provided for those who need it and surgical and medical appliances are supplied in appropriate cases.

Specialists and consultants who take part in the Service can engage in private practice, including the treatment of their private patients in NHS hospitals.

In a number of hospitals accommodation is available for the treatment of private in-patients who undertake to pay full hospital maintenance costs and (usually) separate medical fees to a specialist as well. The amount of the medical fees is a matter for agreement between doctor and patient.

Hospital charges for private resident patients are determined annually, on a national basis for classes of hospitals, by the Secretary of State in accordance with the National Health Service Act 1977. These charges are revised annually from April 1 each year to reflect the average cost, which it is estimated will be incurred during the current financial year in the treatment of in-patients in each class of hospital. They also include a contribution towards capital costs.

For in-patients paying specialists' fees separately, the hospital daily charges from April 1, 1982, for accommodation and services in each class of hospital are as follows:

Class A. Long stay hospitals
Single Room £54.30      Other Accommodation £49.40

Class B. Psychiatric hospitals
Single Room £35.60      Other Accommodation £32.30

Class C1. Mainly acute and other hospitals in non-teaching districts
Single Room £82.10      Other Accommodation £74.70

Class C2. Acute and other hospitals in non-teaching districts
Single Room £93.50      Other Accommodation £85.00

Class D. London teaching hospitals
Single Room £126.90      Other Accommodation £115.30

Class E. Provincial teaching hospitals
Single Room £100.90      Other Accommodation £91.80

Class F. London Postgraduate teaching hospitals managed by Boards of Governors and Special Health Authorities
Single Room £149.40      Other Accommodation £135.80

Class G. Hospitals managed by Hammersmith Special Health Authority
Single Room £132.00      Other Accommodation £120.00

For those patients who have not made separate arrangements with a specialist for private treatment the charges range from £51.60 in a long stay hospital to £157.20 in certain London Postgraduate teaching hospitals.

Certain hospitals have accommodation in single rooms or small wards which, if not required for patients who need privacy for medical reasons, may be made available to patients who desire it as an amenity. Amenity bed charges are at present £10 per day in single rooms and £5 per day in small wards. In such cases the patients are treated in every other respect as National Health patients.

There is no charge for drugs supplied to National Health hospital in-patients but out-patients pay £1 per item unless they are exempt.

With certain exceptions, hospital out-patients have to pay fixed charges for dentures, glasses and certain appliances. The charge for glasses will be related to the type of lens prescribed; and for dentures will be up to a maximum charge of £60.00.

Local Authority Personal Social Services

Local authorities are responsible for the organization, management and administration of the personal social services and each authority has a Director of Social Services and a Social Services Committee responsible for the social services functions placed upon them by the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970. The "personal social services" are broadly speaking as follows: The services for children, including the care of children and young persons received into care, the provision of treatment for young offenders and adoption; family services, including the day care of pre-school children in day nurseries and by child minders, the care of unsupported mothers both in the community and in mother and baby homes, and the home help and meals on wheels services; services for the elderly and physically disabled, including day centres, luncheon clubs and residential accommodation; services for the mentally ill and mentally handicapped, including day centres, clubs, adult training centres, workshops and residential accommodation.

THE ARTS COUNCIL OF GREAT BRITAIN

105 Piccadilly, W.1

The Arts Council of Great Britain is incorporated under Royal Charter with the following objects, (a) to develop and improve the knowledge, understanding and practice of the arts; (b) to increase the accessibility of the arts to the public throughout Great Britain; and (c) to advise and cooperate with Departments of Government, local authorities and other bodies on any matters concerned directly or indirectly with the foregoing objects.

The members of the Council, who may not exceed twenty in number, are appointed by the Minister responsible for the Arts after consultation with the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Secretary of State for Wales. With the approval of the two latter the Council appoints separate committees for Scotland and Wales known as the Scottish Arts Council and the Welsh Arts Council respectively.

The Council receives a grant-in-aid from the Government, and for the year 1982-83 the amount is £86,000,000, including £1,400,000 for capital projects. Chairman, Sir William Rees-Mogg. Secretary-General, Sir Roy Shaw.

AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH COUNCIL

160 Great Portland Street, W. 1
[01-580 6655]

The Agricultural Research Council was incorporated by Royal Charter on July 23, 1931. The Science and Technology Act, 1965, transferred responsibility for the Research Council to the Secretary of State for Education and Science and a new Charter received Royal approval in 1967. The Council is charged with the organization and development of agricultural and food research and may, in particular, establish or develop institutions or departments of institutions and make grants for investigation and research relating to the advance of agriculture. The Council is financed jointly from the Parliamentary vote of the Department of Education and Science and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OF THE COMMONWEALTH AGRICULTURAL BUREAUX

Farnham House, Farnham Royal, Slough, Berks.
[Farnham Common: 2281]

The Commonwealth Agricultural Bureaux, founded in 1929, consist of four Institutes and ten Bureaux, under the control of an Executive Council, comprising representatives of the Commonwealth countries which contribute to its funds. Each Institute and Bureau is concerned with its own particular branch of agricultural science and acts as a clearing house for the dissemination of information of value to research workers throughout the world. They deal respectively with entomology, mycology, helminthology and nematology, biological control, agricultural economics, animal breeding and genetics, animal health, nutrition, dairy science and technology, forestry, horticulture and plantation crops, pastures and field crops, plant breeding and genetics, and soils and fertilizers. The information is published in journals which have a monthly circulation of 32,000 in 150 countries. The abstract journals are produced by computer-assisted processes, and the whole data base has been consolidated and is available in machine-readable form. Review articles, books, maps, monographs and annotated bibliographies on particular subjects are also issued.

COLLEGE OF ARMS OR HERALDS COLLEGE Queen Victoria Street, E.C.4 [01-248 2762]

The College of Arms is open daily from 10-4 (Saturdays, 10-1, by appointment) when an Officer of Arms is in attendance to deal with enquiries by the public, though such enquiries may also be directed to any of the Officers of Arms, either personally or by letter.

There are 13 officers of the College, 3 Kings of Arms, 6 Heralds and 4 Pursuivants, who specialize in genealogical and heraldic work for their respective clients. The College possesses the finest records on these subjects in the world. It is the official repository of the Arms and pedigrees of English, Northern Irish, and Commonwealth families and their descendants, and its records include official copies of the records of Ulster King of Arms, the originals of which remain in Dublin.

Arms have been and still are granted by Letters Patent from the Kings of Arms under Authority delegated to them by the Sovereign, such authority having been expressly conferred on them since at least the fifteenth century. A right to Arms can only be established by the registration in the official records of the College of Arms of a pedigree showing direct male line descent from an ancestor already appearing therein as being entitled to Arms, or by making application to the College of Arms for a Grant of Arms.

Earl Marshal, His Grace the Duke of Norfolk, C.B., C.B.E., M.C.

Kings of Arms

Garret, Alexander Colin Cole, C.V.D., T.D., F.S.A.

Clarenceux, Sir Anthony Richard Wagner, K.C.B., K.C.V.D., D.Litt., F.S.A.

Norroy and Ulster, John Phillip Brooke Brooke-Little, M.V.D., F.S.A.

Heralds

Somerset, Rodney Onslow Dennys, M.V.O., D.B.E., F.S.A.

York (and Registrar), Conrad Marshall John Fisher Swan, M.V.D., ph.d.

Lancaster, Peter Llewellyn Gwynn-Jones.

Chester, David Hubert Boothby Chesshyre, F.S.A.

Windsor, Theobald David Mathew.

Richmond, Michael Maclagan, F.S.A.

Earl Marshal's Secretary, Sir Walter John George Verco, K.C.V.D., Surrey Herald Extraordinary.

Pursuivants

Bluemantle, (vacant).

Rouge Croix, Thomas Woodcock.

Rouge Dragon, Patric Dickinson.

Portcullis, Peter Brotherton Spurrier.

COURT OF THE LORD LYON
H.M. New Register House, Edinburgh
[031-556 7255]

The Scottish Court of Chivalry, including the genealogical jurisdiction of the Ri-Sennachie of Scotland's Celtic Kings, adjudicates rights to arms and administration of The Scottish Public Register of All Arms and Bearings (under 1672 cap. 47) and Public Register of All Genealogies. The Lord Lyon presides and judicially establishes rights to existing arms or succession to Chiefship, or for cadets with scientific "differences" showing position in clan or family. Pedigrees are also established by decrees of Lyon Court, and by Letters Patent. As Royal Commissioner in Armory, he grants Patents of Arms (which constitute the grantee and heirs noble in the Noblesse of Scotland) to "virtuous and well-deserving" Scotsmen, and petitioners (personal or corporate) in Her Majesty's overseas realms of Scottish connection, and issues birthbriefs. In Scots Law, Arms are protected by Statute; their usurpation is punishable, and the Registration Fees of Honour on patents and matriculations are payable to H.M. Exchequer.

Lord Lyon King of Arms, Malcolm Rognvald Innes of Edingight, C.V.O., w.s., F.S.A. Scot.

Heralds

Albany, Sir Iain Moncreiffe of that Ilk, Bt., C.V.O., Q.C., Ph.D.

Islay, John I. D. Pottinger.

Marchmont, Major David Maitland Maitland-Titterton, T.D., F.S.A. Scot.

Rothsay Extraordinary, Lt.-Col. Harold Andrew Balvaud Lawson, C.V.O.

Pursuivants

Unicorn, Sir Crispin Agnew of Lochnav, Bt.
Carrick, John A. Spens, R.D., w.s.

Lyon Clerk and Keeper of Records, John I. D. Pottinger.

Procurator-Fiscal, Ivor Reginald Guild, w.s.

Herald Painter, Mrs. J. Phillips.

ART GALLERIES, ETC.

ROYAL FINE ART COMMISSION
2 Carlton Gardens, S.W.1
[01-930 3935]

Appointed in May, 1924, "to enquire into such questions of public amenity or of artistic importance as may be referred to them from time to time by any of our Departments of State, and to report thereon to such Department; and, furthermore, to give advice on similar questions when so requested by public or quasi-public bodies, where it appears to the said Commission that their assistance would be advantageous." In August, 1933, a Royal Warrant extended the Terms of Reference of the Commission—"so that it shall also be open to the said Commission, if they so desire, to call the attention of any of Our Departments of State, or of the appropriate public or quasi-public bodies, to any project or development which in the opinion of the said Commission may appear to affect amenities of a national or public character"; in May, 1946, a Royal Warrant further extended the Terms of Reference of the Commission as follows:—

We Do give and grant unto you, or any three or more of you, full power to call before you such persons as you shall judge likely to afford you any information upon the subject of this Our Commission; and also to call for, have access to and examine all such books, documents, registers and records as may afford you the fullest information on the subject, and to inquire of and concerning the premises by all other lawful ways and means whatsoever: We Do authorize and empower you, or any three or more of you, to visit and personally inspect such places as you may deem it expedient so to inspect for the more effectual carrying out of the purposes aforesaid:

NATIONAL GALLERY
Trafalgar Square, W.C.2
[01-839 3321]

Hours of opening.—Weekdays 10 to 6, Sundays 2 to 6. Closed on Good Friday, Christmas Eve, Christmas Day, Boxing Day, New Year's Day and May Day Bank Holiday.

The National Gallery is the result of a Parliamentary grant of £60,000 in 1824 for the purchase and exhibition of the Angerstein collection of pictures. The present site was first occupied in 1838 and enlarged and improved at various times throughout the years. A substantial extension to the north of the building with a public entrance in Orange Street was opened in 1975. Expenses for 1982-83 are estimated at £6,041,000.

TATE GALLERY

Millbank, S.W.1
 [01-821 1313]

Hours of opening.—Weekdays 10 to 6. Sundays 2 to 6. Closed on New Year's Day, Good Friday, May Day Holiday, Christmas Eve, Christmas Day and Boxing Day.

The Tate Gallery comprises three national collections: (a) British painting of all periods; (b) modern foreign painting; (c) modern sculpture. Works are displayed at the Gallery as two collections: The British Collection, in which Hogarth, Blake, Turner, Constable and the Pre-Raphaelites are particularly well represented and the Modern Collection, which includes major works by virtually all leading artists and a fine collection of contemporary prints. There is an almost continuous programme of major loan exhibitions and free lectures; films and guided tours are offered nearly every day throughout the year. The Gallery was opened in 1897, the cost of erection (£80,000) being defrayed by Sir Henry Tate, who also contributed the nucleus of the present collection. The Turner Wing, built at the expense of Sir Joseph Duveen was opened in 1920. Lord Duveen defrayed the cost of galleries to contain the collection of modern foreign painting, completed in 1926, and a new sculpture hall, completed in 1937. The latest and largest extension to the Tate Gallery was opened by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II on May 24, 1979. This extension, costing £3,200,000, has increased the public areas of the Gallery 50 per cent and also includes purpose-built accommodation for the Conservation Department and the Photographic Department, and extra accommodation for the reserve collection. Expenses for 1982-83 are estimated at £5,025,000.

BRITISH AEROSPACE p.l.c.

Headquarters: Brooklands Road, Weybridge, Surrey.
 [0932 45522]

British Aerospace is primarily engaged, either on its own or in collaboration with other companies, in the design, development and production of military and civil aircraft, guided missiles and space systems, and in the provision of defence support services. Nationalisation in 1977 brought together in British Aerospace the former companies of British Aircraft Corporation (Holdings) Ltd., Hawker Siddeley Aviation Ltd., Hawker Siddeley Dynamics Ltd. and Scottish Aviation Ltd. On January 1, 1981, under the British Aerospace Act 1980, all the property, rights, liabilities and obligations of the former nationalised corporation were vested in British Aerospace Public Limited Company. In February 1981, H.M. Government offered for sale up to 100 million Ordinary Shares, representing approximately half of the issued share capital of the company. The resultant ownership of British Aerospace has become: H.M. Government 48.43%, ordinary shareholders 48.43% and employee shareholders 3.14%.

THE DUCHY OF CORNWALL

10 Buckingham Gate, S.W.1

[Telephone: 01-834 7346]

The Duchy of Cornwall was instituted by Edward III in 1337 for the support of his eldest son, Edward, the Black Prince, and since 1503 the eldest surviving son of the Sovereign has, as heir apparent, succeeded to the Dukedom by inheritance. As the oldest of the English Duchies, it has enjoyed a long association with the Crown. Before elevation to a dukedom, it was an earldom from 1227, when Richard, King of the Romans and younger brother of Henry III, was created Earl of Cornwall.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Elizabeth House, York Road, S.E.1
[01-928 9222]

The Government Department of Education was, until the establishment of a separate office, a Committee of the Privy Council appointed in 1839 to supervise the distribution of certain grants which had been made by Parliament since 1834. The Act of 1899 established the Board of Education, with a President and Parliamentary Secretary, and created a Consultative Committee. The Education Act of 1944 established the Ministry of Education. In April 1964 the office of the Minister of Science was combined with the Ministry to form the Department of Education and Science. The Office of Arts and Libraries is the responsibility of a Minister of State at the Department designated as Minister for the Arts. The cost of administration for the financial year 1982-83 was estimated at £32,837,000.

EXCHEQUER AND AUDIT DEPARTMENT

Audit House, Victoria Embankment, E.C.4
 [01-353 8901]

This is the Department of the Comptroller and Auditor General, an office created by the Act 29 & 30 Vict. c. 39 (1866) to replace, with extended powers, the separate offices of Comptroller General of the Receipt and Issue of the Exchequer and of the Commissioners for Auditing the Public Accounts. This officer is appointed by Letters Patent under the Great Seal, and is irremovable except upon an address from the two Houses of Parliament. In his capacity as Comptroller General of the Receipt and Issue of the Exchequer, he authorizes all issues from the Consolidated and National Loans Funds after satisfying himself that Parliament has given authority for them. He examines the accounts of the Consolidated and National Loans Funds and makes an annual report on them to Parliament. In his capacity as Auditor General of Public Accounts, he is charged with the duty of examining on behalf of the House of Commons the accounts of expenditure out of funds provided by Parliament, the accounts of the receipt of revenue, and generally all other public accounts, including the accounts of Government stores and of trading services conducted by Government Departments. The results of this examination of those accounts are reported to the House of Commons. He is also the auditor by agreement of the accounts of many bodies, generally in receipt of public moneys, and of certain international organizations; he reports, when required to do so, to the governing bodies concerned.

EXPORT CREDITS GUARANTEE DEPARTMENT

P.O. Box 272, Aldermanbury House,
 Aldermanbury, E.C.2
 [01-606 6699]

The Export Credits Guarantee Department is responsible to the Secretary of State for Trade. The Export Guarantees and Overseas Investment Act 1978 enables E.C.G.D. to encourage U.K. exports by making available export credit insurance to British firms engaged in selling overseas and to guarantee repayment to British banks providing finance for export credit. Guarantees under Section 1 of the Act are given after consultation with an Advisory Council of bankers and businessmen.

The Act also empowers E.C.G.D. to insure British private investment overseas against political risks, such as war, expropriation and restrictions on remittances.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Downing Street, S.W.1
(01-233 3000)

On the recommendations of the Committee on Representational Services Overseas appointed by the Prime Minister under the Chairmanship of Lord Plowden in 1962, H.M. Diplomatic Service was created on Jan. 1, 1965, by the amalgamation of the Foreign Service, the Commonwealth Service, and the Trade Commission Service, and is now responsible for the manning of the overseas posts of these three former services. On Aug. 1, 1966, the Colonial Office was merged into the Commonwealth Relations Office to form the Commonwealth Office. The Foreign Office and Commonwealth Office combined on Oct. 1, 1968.

In November 1970 overseas development became the ultimate responsibility of the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, although it remained in the day-to-day charge of the Minister for Overseas Development (now the Overseas Development Administration), except for the period from March 1974 to June 1975 when the Ministry of Overseas Development reverted to its independent status.

FORESTRY COMMISSION
231 Corstorphine Road, Edinburgh
[031-334 0303]

The Forestry Commissioners are charged with the general duty of promoting the interests of forestry, the development of afforestation, the production and supply of timber and the maintenance of reserves of growing trees in Great Britain. Including the former Crown Woods, transferred to it in 1924, the Commission has acquired about 3,000,000 acres of land (75 per cent being plantable), of which about 2,000,000 acres are under plantations. Under various grant schemes, financial assistance is given to private owners and local authorities in respect of approved works of afforestation.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND SOCIAL SECURITY

Alexander Fleming House, Elephant and Castle, S.E.1

[01-407 5522]

The Department of Health and Social Security was created on November 1, 1968, from the Ministry of Health and Ministry of Social Security. The Department performs the functions of the two former Ministries.

The Department is responsible for the administration of the National Health Service in England and for the personal social services run by local authorities in England for children, the elderly, infirm, handicapped and other persons in need. It has functions relating to food hygiene and welfare foods. The Department is also concerned with the medical and surgical treatment of war pensioners in England, the Channel Isles, Isle of Man or living in the Irish Republic, and is responsible for the ambulance and first aid services in emergency, under the Civil Defence Act, 1948. The Department represents the United Kingdom on the World Health Organization of the United Nations. Responsibility for the administration of the Health Services in Wales was transferred to the Welsh Office on April 1, 1969. The Department is responsible for the social security services in England, Scotland and Wales. These services comprise schemes for war pensions, national insurance, child benefit, industrial injuries, attendance allowances, mobility allowances and supplementary benefits.

NATIONAL HEALTH SERVICE REGIONAL HEALTH AUTHORITIES

England is divided between 14 Regional Health Authorities, each with at least one university medical school within its boundaries. Each Region contains a number of district health authorities (which are the operational NHS authorities, responsible for assessing needs in their areas, for planning, organizing and administering district health services to meet them). The district health authorities are generally coterminous with the local authorities which provide complementary personal social services. Four of the postgraduate teaching hospitals are now managed by district health authorities, seven are now managed by special health authorities (including Hammersmith Hospital) and the remaining two continue to be managed by Boards of Governors preserved for a further year. The Chairmen, and members of Regional Health Authorities, special health authorities, Boards of Governors, and the Chairmen of district health authorities are appointed by the Secretary of State for Social Services.

ROYAL COMMISSION ON HISTORICAL MONUMENTS [ENGLAND]

Fortress House, 23 Savile Row, W.1
[01-734 6010]

The Royal Commission on Historical Monuments (England) was appointed in 1908 to survey and publish in inventory form an account of every building, earthwork or stone construction up to the year 1714. A new Royal Warrant in 1943 allowed the Commissioners to extend this date limit at their discretion; for practical purposes 1850 is normally taken as the limit. The Commission has published up to present date inventories covering in whole or in part eleven counties, five cities, Roman York and Roman London. It is a purely recording body and though the Commissioners may recommend that certain structures should be preserved, they have no power to implement their recommendations. The Commission is also responsible for the direction of the National Monuments Record, created in 1964, which includes the National Buildings Record begun in 1941, of which the Commissioners are the managing trustees.

Chairman, The Lord Adeane, P.C., G.C.B., G.C.V.O.
Commissioners, P. Ashbee, F.S.A.; Prof. R. J. C. Atkinson, C.B.E., F.S.A.; Prof. M. W. Beresford; Prof. C. N. L. Brooke, P.S.A., F.B.A.; R. A. Buchanan, Ph.D.; A. R. Dufty, C.B.E., F.S.A.; Prof. S. ### ROYAL COMMISSION ON ANCIENT AND HISTORICAL MONUMENTS OF SCOTLAND

[031-225 5994]

The Commission was appointed in 1908 to make an inventory of the Ancient and Historical Monuments of Scotland and to specify those that seem most worthy of preservation. It also has a responsibility to record monuments threatened with destruction, including a statutory duty to record historic buildings for which Listed Building Consent for demolition has been granted. The National Monuments Record of Scotland, a branch of the Commission, contains an extensive collection of pictorial and documentary material relating to Scottish ancient monuments and historic buildings and is open daily for public reference.

HOME-GROWN CEREALS AUTHORITY

Hamlyn House, Highgate Hill, N. 19.

Constituted under the Cereals Marketing Act, 1965, the Authority consists of 9 members representing U.K. cereal growers, 9 representing dealers in, or processors of, grain and 3 independent members. The purpose of the Authority is to improve the marketing of U.K. grain, production of which was over 19 million tonnes in 1981. One of the major functions of the Authority is to provide a market information service. It also supports research related to improving the marketability of cereals and has initiated other developments whose aim has been to improve the marketing of home-grown cereals. The Authority also acts as the agent of the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce in respect of intervention buying, storage and disposal of cereals and oilseed rape within the U.K. under the Common Agricultural Policy and certain other aspects relating to E.E.C. arrangements for cereals in the U.K.
