This book is dedicated to the memory of the original DIY man, Barry Bucknall, who graced our black and white TV screens in the Fifties showing us how to flush panel our moulded doors, block in our balustraded staircases and in all manner of means modernize our homes. Anything that might collect dust was covered up – with formica. Fashions change and the formica is coming off sometimes, if you're lucky, revealing a Victorian cast iron fireplace (£400 each in Hampstead shops).

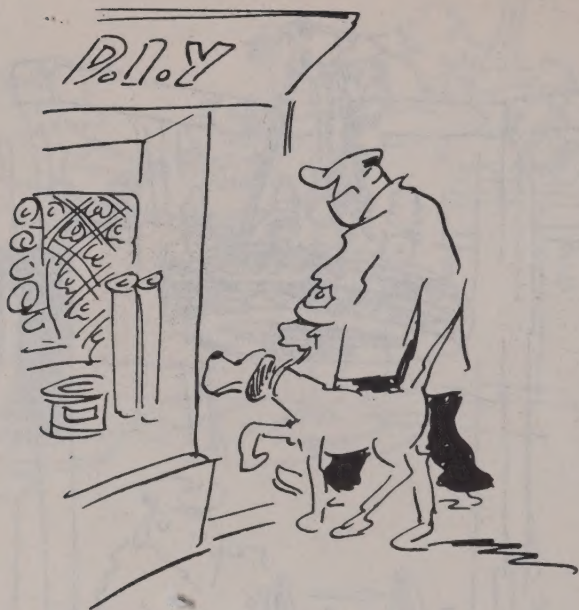

Thanks to Mr Bucknall – undoing his handiwork is more fun for the modern DIY man than anything else on offer.

Larry's D.I.Y. MAN

The irrepressible Larry is back again with another inventive catalogue of comic delights, this time devoted to the decorator's best friend — the DIY man. Whether your paint is too thin or you've just pasted the dog to the kitchen wall, laugh away the blues (or the magnolias . . .) with this hilarious collection of cartoons from the master of perception.

Larry is one of the best known British cartoonists. He has contributed to many periodicals, has illustrated works by several authors and has had his own books published in the UK and USA, including Owzat! and Larry's Garden Lot with Robson Books.
